TEXTBOOK

Buddhist Moral Philosophy

An Introduction

Christopher W. Gowans, Fordham University

The book introduces the reader to contemporary philosophical interpretations and analyses of Buddhist ethics. It begins with a survey of traditional Buddhist ethical thought and practice, mainly in the Pali Canon and early Mahāyāna schools, and an account of the emergence of Buddhist moral philosophy as a distinct discipline in the modern world. It then examines recent debates about karma, rebirth and nirvana, well-being, normative ethics, moral objectivity, moral psychology, and the issue of freedom, responsibility and determinism. The book also introduces the reader to philosophical discussions of topics in socially engaged Buddhism such as human rights, war and peace, and environmental ethics.

Critical Thinking

A Concise Guide

Tracy Bowell, University of Waikato, New Zealand and Gary Kemp, University of Glasgow, UK

Critical Thinking: A Concise Guide equips students with the essential practical skills required to tell a good argument from a bad one. Includes jargon-free discussion of key concepts in argumentation; how to avoid common confusions surrounding words such as 'truth', 'knowledge' and 'opinion'; how to identify and evaluate the most common types of argument; how to spot fallacies and tell good reasoning from bad; chapter summaries, exercises, and a glossary.

With new introductions to each chapter, as well as new activities and topical examples from politics, sport and music, this fourth edition is the must-have guide to argument analysis.

TEXTBOOK

Current Controversies in Political Philosophy

Edited by Thom Brooks, University of Newcastle, UK

Series: Current Controversies in Philosophy

Are rights important? Is sexual objectification wrong and, if so, why? Should we all be cosmopolitans? What to do about climate change? Such questions are the focus of intense debate and dialogue. Current Controversies in Political Philosophy brings together an international team of leading philosophers on these deep questions of contemporary concern. Each question is approached by two different perspectives to clearly inform in an accessible way why there is disagreement and how it might be resolved covering topics such as rights, feminism, global justice, climate change and much more.

Paul Fairfield, Queen's University, Canada

This book explores the phenomenology of death and offers a unique way into the phenomenological tradition. It examines modern denials and evasions of death; Heidegger's important concept of 'being toward death'; the philosophical significance of death rituals; death in an age of secularism; the philosophy of suicide; death as a mystery rather than a philosophical problem to be solved; and the relationship between hope and death.

Essential reading for students of phenomenology and existentialism and will also be of interest to students in related fields such as religion and anthropology.

The Project of Pure Enquiry

Bernard Williams

Series: Routledge Classics

Descartes has often been called the 'father of modern philosophy'. His attempts to find foundations for knowledge, and to reconcile the existence of the soul with the emerging science of his time, are among the most influential and widely studied in the history of philosophy. This is a classic and challenging introduction to Descartes by one of the most distinguished modern philosophers. Bernard Williams not only analyzes Descartes' project of founding knowledge on certainty, but uncovers the philosophical motives for his search.

Kevin McCain, University of Alabama at Birmingham, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

Evidentialism is a popular theory of epistemic justification, yet, as early proponents of the theory Earl Conee and Richard Feldman admit, there are many elements that must be developed before Evidentialism can provide a full account of epistemic justification, or well-founded belief. In this book, McCain moves past Evidentialism as a mere schema by putting forward and defending a full-fledged theory of epistemic justification. He offers an account of what it takes to have information as evidence, an account of epistemic support in terms of explanation, and a causal account of the basing relation (the relation that one's belief must bear to her evidence in order to be justified).

Heidegger, Authenticity and the Self

Themes from Division Two of Being and Time

Edited by Denis McManus, University of Southampton, UK
Heidegger's Being and Time is often cited as one of the most important philosophical works of the last century. This outstanding collection examines the major themes of Division Two of Being and Time, which has received relatively little attention compared to Division One.

Leading philosophers examine important topics such as authenticity, death, guilt and time, the influence of Kierkegaard, and the relationship between Heidegger's work and ancient and medieval philosophy.

Essential reading for scholars and students of Heidegger's thought and anyone interested in key debates in phenomenology.

Innovation and Entrepreneurship

Peter Drucker

Series: Routledge Classics

How can management be developed to create the greatest wealth for society as a whole? This is the question Peter Drucker sets out to answer in Innovation and Entrepreneurship. A brilliant, mould-breaking attack on management orthodoxy it is one of Drucker's most important books, offering an excellent overview of some of his main ideas. He argues that what defines an entrepreneur is their attitude to change: 'the entrepreneur always searches for change, responds to it and exploits it as an opportunity'. To exploit change, according to Drucker, is to innovate.

Kant and the Cultivation of Virtue

Chris W. Surprenant, University of New Orleans, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy

In this book, Chris W. Surprenant puts forward an original position concerning Kant's practical philosophy and the intersection between his moral and political philosophy. Through an examination of Kant's accounts of autonomy, the state, and religion, and their effects on the cultivation of virtue, Surprenant develops a Kantian framework for moral education, and ultimately raises the question of whether or not Kantian virtue is possible in practice.

TEXTBOOK

Metaphysics

An Introduction

Alyssa Ney, University of Rochester, USA

Metaphysics is one of the oldest and most fundamental subjects in philosophy, at once exhilarating and mystifying for students coming to it for the first time. In this outstanding introduction Alyssa Ney unpacks and explains the fundamental topics, questions and problems in metaphysics, including ontology, abstract and concrete objects, free will, time, critiques of metaphysics, persistence, causation, social ontology, and realism and anti-realism.

Additional features such as exercises, annotated further reading, chapter summaries, glossary and a companion website will help students find their way around the subject and assist teachers in the classroom.

Mind, Language and Subjectivity

Minimal Content and the Theory of Thought

Nicholas Georgalis

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

In this monograph Nicholas Georgalis further develops his important work on 'minimal content', recasting and providing novel solutions to several of the fundamental problems faced by philosophers of language. His theory defends and explicates the importance of 'thought-tokens' and minimal content to our understanding of many-to-one linguistic meaning, challenging both 'externalist' accounts of thought and the solutions to philosophical problems of language they inspire. This is an important text for those interested in current theories and debates on philosophy of mind, philosophy of language, and their points of intersection.

TEXTBOOK

Moral Psychology

A Contemporary Introduction

Valerie Tiberius, University of Minnesota, USA

Series: Routledge Contemporary Introductions to Philosophy

Moral Psychology: A Contemporary Introduction is the first philosophy textbook in moral psychology. It introduces students to a range of philosophical topics and debates such as: What is moral motivation? Do reasons for action always depend on desires? Is emotion or reason at the heart of moral judgment? Under what conditions are people morally responsible? Are there self-interested reasons for people to be moral? The book presents research by philosophers and psychologists on these topics, and addresses the overarching question of how empirical research is (or is not) relevant to philosophical inquiry.

Nietzsche on Morality

Brian Leiter, University of Chicago, USA

This outstanding introduction to Nietzsche's famous work and is essential reading for any student of Nietzsche. Clearly and compellingly argued, it also caused controversy amongst Nietzsche scholars, and is regarded as one of the most significant works on Nietzsche of recent years.

This second edition is revised and refreshed throughout, including a new preface; revised sections on key topics such as epiphenomenalism and consciousness; and an expanded discussion of agency and free will in relation to Nietzsche's text. Also included is an important postscript on Nietzsche's naturalism in light of recent interpretations of Nietzsche.

Philosophy and the Sciences for Everyone

Edited by Michela Massimi, University of Edinburgh, UK

What is the origin of our universe? What is our role in the universe as human beings capable of knowledge? What makes us intelligent cognitive agents, seemingly endowed with consciousness? Scientific research across the physical and cognitive sciences raises fascinating philosophical questions. Philosophy and the Sciences For Everyone introduces these questions and more.

Each chapter includes an introduction, summary and study questions and there is a glossary of technical terms. Designed for use on the University of Edinburgh's online Philosophy and the Sciences course, this book is also a superb introduction to central topics in philosophy of science and popular science.

Philosophy Through Film

Mary Litch and Amy D Karofsky

Many films can be interpreted as attempts to provide answers to classic questions within philosophy. Each chapter examines one such question in an approachable yet philosophically rigorous manner. The discussion of the films in question is fully integrated into the discussion of the philosophical issue: the films are not mere "add-ons" to an otherwise straightforward introductory philosophy text. The third edition incorporates four recently released films, three new primary readings, and major revisions to (what is now) the first chapter in order to focus more generally on various theories of truth.

Philosophy as a Literary Art

Making Things Up

Edited by Costica Bradatan, Texas Tech University, USA

Despite philosophers' growing scholarly interest in the relation between philosophy and literature in general, over the last few decades comparatively few studies have been published dealing more narrowly with the literary aspects of philosophical texts. The relationship between philosophy and literature is too often taken to be "literature as philosophy" and very rarely "philosophy as literature." It is the dissatisfaction with this one-sidedness that lies at the heart of the present volume.

The Routledge Companion to Bioethics

Edited by John D. Arras, University of Virginia, Rebecca Kukla, University of South Florida and Elizabeth Fenton, University of Virginia, USA

Series: Routledge Philosophy Companions

The Routledge Companion to Bioethics is a comprehensive guide to contemporary concerns in bioethics. The volume orients the reader in a changing landscape shaped by globalization, health disparities, and rapidly advancing technologies. Bioethics has begun a turn toward a systematic concern with social justice, population health, and public policy. This volume's 44 commissioned chapters, authored by leading researchers in the field, capture this shift and foreshadow the resulting developments in bioethics, highlighting emerging issues such as climate change, transgender, and medical tourism, and reexamining enduring topics, such as autonomy, end-of-life care, and resource allocation.

The Routledge Companion to Islamic Philosophy

Edited by Richard C. Taylor, Marquette University, USA and Luis Xavier López-Farjeat, Universidad Panamericana, Mexico

Series: Routledge Philosophy Companions

Recent publications focused on Arabic/Islamic philosophy have traditionally considered this under the history of ideas and Oriental or Islamic studies. There is a need for a comprehensive collection of essays that treats Islamic philosophy as philosophy, and not merely as a conduit of intellectual history for delivering ideas from the ancient Greeks to medieval Christians. With this aim, The Routledge Companion to Islamic Philosophy is conceived as a well-structured and wide-ranging thematic approach, accessible for a broad spectrum of readers, from students to scholars interested in Islamic thought, philosophy, theology, and religious studies.

The Routledge Companion to Virtue Ethics

Edited by Lorraine Besser-Jones, Middlebury College, USA and Michael Slote, University of Miami, USA

Series: Routledge Philosophy Companions

Most work in virtue ethics and most anthologies devoted to virtue ethics focus mainly on ancient Western philosophy and its influence on contemporary thought. This volume sees the history and contemporary relevance of virtue ethics more broadly. Unlike other recent compendium volumes, it offers, in addition to thorough discussion of the ancient Western tradition and its contemporary influence, quite a few articles on virtue ethics in ancient and contemporary Eastern philosophy and in the ancient and continuing traditions of religious thought. These discussions, plus a section devoted to the applications of virtue ethics, makes it a comprehensive treatment of all aspects of virtue ethics.

Mahayana Buddhism

The Doctrinal Foundations

Paul Williams, University of Bristol, UK

Series: The Library of Religious Beliefs and Practices

Western interest in Mahayana has increased considerably in recent years, reflected both in the quantity of scholarly material produced and in the attraction of Westerners towards Tibetan Buddhism and Zen. Paul Williams' Mahayana Buddhism is used internationally, has been translated into several languages, and is widely regarded as the standard introduction to the field. The second edition has been revised throughout in the light of new studies, focusing on the religion's richness and diversity. It includes more material on China and Japan, with appropriate reference to Nepal, and contains a much-expanded bibliography and extensive footnotes. Anyone interested in this important tradition will find the book an ideal companion to their studies.

Religion and Change in Modern Britain

Edited by Linda Woodhead, Lancaster University, UK and Rebecca Catto, Lancaster University, UK

This book offers a fully up-to-date and comprehensive guide to religion in Britain since 1945. A team of leading scholars provide a fresh analysis and overview, with a particular focus on diversity and change. They examine: relations between religious and secular beliefs and institutions; the evolving role and status of the churches; the growth and 'settlement' of non-Christian religious communities; the spread and diversification of alternative spiritualities; religion in welfare, education, media, politics and law; theoretical perspectives on religious change.

The volume presents the latest research, including results from the largest-ever research initiative on religion in Britain. Survey chapters are combined with detailed case studies to give both breadth and depth of coverage. The text is accompanied by relevant photographs and a companion website.

Claude Lévi-Strauss

Series: Routledge Great Minds

The anthropologist Claude Lévi-Strauss was one of the greatest intellectuals of the twentieth century. His work has had a profound impact not only within anthropology but also linguistics, sociology and philosophy. In this short book he examines the nature and role of myth in human history, distilling a lifetime of writing into a few sharp insights. It is a crystalline overview of many of the basic ideas underlying his work, including the theory of structuralism and the difference between 'primitive' and 'scientific' thought and shows why Lévi-Strauss remains a hugely important intellectual figure.

The Routledge Companion to the Study of Religion

Edited by John Hinnells, Liverpool Hope University, UK and Robinson College, University of Cambridge, UK

Series: Routledge Religion Companions

The Routledge Companion to the Study of Religion is a major resource for courses in Religious Studies. It begins by explaining the most important methodological approaches to religion, including psychology, philosophy, anthropology and comparative study, before moving on to explore a wide variety of critical issues, such as gender, science, fundamentalism, ritual, and new religious movements. Written by renowned international specialists, the new edition contains fresh material on post-structuralism, economics, the environment, popular culture, and sacred space. It surveys the history of religious studies and the key disciplinary approaches as well as highlighting contemporary issues such as globalization, diaspora and politics. The Companion includes annotated reading lists, a glossary and summaries of key points to assist student learning.

A Field Guide to the Study of Religion and Ecology

Edited by Whitney Bauman, Florida International University, USA, Richard Bohannon, College of St. Benedict and St. John's University, USA and Kevin O'Brien, Pacific Lutheran University, USA

Grounding Religion is the ideal companion and 'field guide' for students and scholars alike. Encouraging readers to think critically about religion and ecology, this introduction focuses less on the content of world religions, and more on illuminating case studies. These include examples of religious rituals, rites, and festivals, environmental problems, and spiritual practices to which students can apply ideas from what they have learned about religion and the environment.

A Buddhist Crossroads

Pioneer Western Buddhists and Asian Networks 1860-1960

Edited by Brian Bocking, University College Cork, Ireland, Phibul Choompolsaisal, King's College London, UK, Laurence Cox, National University of Ireland, Maynooth, Ireland and Alicia M Turner, York University, Canada

In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, Buddhism in Asia was transformed by the impact of colonial modernity and new technologies and began to spread in earnest to the West. Transnational networking among Asian Buddhists and early western converts engendered pioneering attempts to develop new kinds of Buddhism for a globalized world, in ways not controlled by any single sect or region. Drawing on new research by scholars worldwide, this book brings together some of the most extraordinary episodes and personalities of a period of almost a century from 1860-1960.

Ancestral Ways, Modern Selves

Tradition, Performance, and Religion in Native America

Dennis Kelley, University of Missouri, USA

This book addresses the question "what does it mean to be an Indigenous American in the 21st century, and how does one express that indigeneity religiously?" The answer is an exploration of a possible theoretical model for discussing the religious nature of urbanized Indians, using aspects of contemporary pantribal practices such as the inter-tribal pow wow, substance abuse recovery programs such as the Wellbriety Movement, and political involvement to provide insights into contemporary Native religious identity.

Buddhism Goes to the Movies

Introduction to Buddhist Thought and Practice

Ronald Green, Coastal Carolina University, South Carolina, USA

This book explains the basics of Buddhist philosophy and practice by using a number of dramatic, not documentary, films from around the world. In examining these films, it also introduces the largest traditions of Buddhism: the Theravāda and various interrelated Mahāyāna divisions including Zen, Pure Land and Tantric Buddhism. The main themes of the book include Buddhist awakening, the importance of the theory of dependent origination, the notion of no-self, and Buddhist ideas about life, death and why we are here.

Buddhism, the Internet, and Digital Media

The Pixel in the Lotus

Edited by Gregory Price Grieve, The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, USA and Daniel Veidlinger, California State University, Chico, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion and Digital Culture

Buddhism, the Internet and Digital Media: The Pixel in the Lotus explores Buddhist practice and teachings in an increasingly networked and digital era. Contributors consider the ways Buddhism plays a role and is present in digital media through a variety of methods including concrete case studies, ethnographic research, and content analysis, as well as interviews with practitioners and cyber-communities. In addition to considering Buddhism in the context of technologies such as virtual worlds, social media, and mobile devices, authors ask how the Internet affects identity, authority and community, and what effect this might have on the development of Buddhism in an online environment.

TEXTBOOK

Catholicism Today

An Introduction to the Contemporary Catholic Church

Evyatar Marienberg, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA

This book intends to familiarize its readers with Catholicism and Catholics. An attempt has been made, in this book's structure as well as in the topics covered, to provide answers to questions which, in the author's experience, are quite common when the subject of the Catholic Church is raised. After an extremely concise historical overview of Christianity in general and Catholicism in particular, the book explores what being Catholic might mean, the core beliefs of Catholics, the way the Church is organized, the variety of Catholic rituals, and the Catholic calendar. It ends with a discussion of the challenges the Church faces now, and will face in the coming decades.

Eros and Touch from a Pagan Perspective

Divided for Love's Sake

Christine Hoff Kraemer

In this book, Christine Hoff Kraemer brings together an academic background in religious studies and theology with lived experience as a professional bodyworker and contemporary Pagan practitioner. Kraemer argues that the erotic (a category that includes, but is not limited to, sexuality) is a powerful moral force that can ground a system of ethics. Integrating approaches from queer Christian theology, therapeutic bodywork, and sexual minority advocacy into a contemporary Pagan religious framework, Eros and Touch from a Pagan Perspective approaches the right to pleasure as a social justice issue and proposes a sacramental practice of mindful, consensual touch.

Feminism and Religion in the 21st Century

Technology, Dialogue, and Expanding Borders

Edited by Messina-Dysert Gina, Claremont Graduate University, Claremont, California, USA and Ruether Radford Rosemary

This anthology will explore the new directions of conversations occurring in relation to feminism and religion, as well as the technological modes being utilized to continue dialogue, expand borders, and create new frontiers in feminism. It is a cross generational project bringing together the voices of foremothers with those of the twenty-first century generation of feminist scholars to discuss the changing direction of feminism and religion, new methods of dialogue, and the benefits for society overall.

Making European Muslims

Religious Socialization Among Young Muslims in Scandinavia and Western Europe

Edited by Mark Sedgwick, Aarhus University, Denmark

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion

Making European Muslims provides an in-depth examination of what it means to be a young Muslim in Europe today, where the assumptions, values and behavior of the family and those of the majority society do not always coincide. Focusing on the religious socialization of Muslim children at home, in semi-private Islamic spaces such as mosques and Quran schools, and in public schools, the original contributions to this volume focus largely on countries in northern Europe, with a special emphasis on the Nordic region. Studies demonstrate the ways that family life, public education, and government policy intersect in the lives of young Muslims and inform their religious beliefs and practices.

The Silents of Jesus in the Early Cinema

Edited by David Shepherd, University of Chester, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion and Film

While Jesus has been a star attraction at the cinema since the epics of the 1950s, it is often forgotten that between the advent of motion pictures in the 1890s and the close of the 'silent' era at the end of the 1920s, some of the most popular films on both sides of the Atlantic were focused on the Life and Passion of the Christ. Drawing upon rarely seen archival footage and the work of the era's most important directors, such as Alice Guy, Ferdinand Zecca, Sidney Olcott, D.W. Griffith, and C.B. DeMille, this volume offers a representative survey of the Silents of Jesus, illustrating the ways in which a host of cinematic Saviors not only shaped the cinema, but were shaped by it.

Theologies of Creation

Creatio Ex Nihilo and Its New Rivals

Edited by Thomas Oord, Northwest Nazarene University, USA

This collection offers important new research for understanding initial creation. The doctrine of creation is a central concern for theists in general and Christians in particular. Historically, the dominant view has been that God created the universe from absolute nothingness (creatio ex nihilo). In recent decades, however, scholars use Biblical exegesis, rational objections, and work in science to question the usefulness of creation from nothing view. The essays in this book push this lively conversation forward. Some essayists continue affirm creatio ex nihilo, but for novel reasons. Others offer alternative proposals as potentially more adequate theologies of creation.

Transnational Cinema and Ideology

Representing Religion, Identity and Cultural Myths

Milja Radovic, School of Divinity, The New College, University of Edinburgh, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion and Film

This book is positioned within the emerging field of transnational cinema, and offers a groundbreaking study of the relationship between transnational cinema and ideology. The book focuses in particular on the complex ways in which religion, identity and cultural myths interact in specific cinematic representations of ideology. Radovic illustrates the ways in which these issues, represented and framed by films, are transmitted beyond their nation-state borders and local ideologies in which they originated – and questions whether therefore one can have an understanding of transnational cinema as a platform for political dialogue.

A Queer Capital

A History of Gay Life in Washington D.C.

Genny Beemyn, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA, USA

Based on archival work, personal interviews, and literary history, A Queer Capital is a fascinating history of LGBT Washington D.C. during the long decades from the turn of the 20th century through the 1980s. The book is a lively recreation of black and white gay communities and individuals, attesting to the vibrant cultural and intellectual life of a city sometimes believed to be neither. Of particular importance is the discussion of how racial identities and gay identities were interrelated during the period. A Queer Capital is a book for readers interested in gay life, in Washington D.C. history, and in African American life and culture in the first half of the twentieth century.

Between Empire and Europe

Intellectuals and the Nation in Britain and France During the Cold War
Lucia Bonfreschi and Marzia Maccaferri, Università di Modena e Reggio Emilia, Italy
Series: Routledge Studies in Modern European History

Between the end of WWII and the end of the Cold War, the international roles of France and Great Britain changed dramatically. Major international powers were now states much bigger than European nations in terms of population, wealth, and military capacity. Analyzing the international political discourse developed by French and British intellectuals and the wider public debate they prompted during the Cold War, this book addresses how the public sphere reacted and adapted to rapidly changing historical circumstances, and how intellectuals responded to a new and challenging relationship between national and foreign policy within a global context.

Bismarck

A Political History

Edgar Feuchtwanger, University of Southampton, UK

Series: Routledge Historical Biographies

Bismarck was arguably the most important figure in nineteenth-century European history after 1815. In this biography, Edgar Feuchtwanger reassesses Bismarck's significance as a historical figure. He traces his development from a typical Junker, a reactionary and conservative, into the so-called white revolutionary who recast European affairs more drastically than anyone since Napoleon. This second edition includes a new preface, taking into account the most recent scholarship on Bismarck, which reflects on Bismarck's legacy in modern Germany - once again the European economic powerhouse for which Bismarck laid the foundations.

Boots of Leather, Slippers of Gold

The History of a Lesbian Community

Elizabeth Lapovsky Kennedy, University of Arizona, USA and Madeline D. Davis, Amherst, NY

Boots of Leather, Slippers of Gold traces the evolution of the lesbian community in Buffalo, New York from the mid-1930s up to the early 1960s. Drawing upon the oral histories of 45 women, it is the first comprehensive history of a working-class lesbian community. This 20th anniversary edition republishes the book for a new generation of readers, and includes a new preface by the authors. For anyone interested in lesbian life during the 1950s, or in the dynamics of butch-fem culture, this study remains the one that set the highest standard for all oral histories and ethnographies of lesbian communities anywhere.

Connecting Migration Experiences and Europeaness

Edited by Jan Logemann, German Historical Institute, USA, Donna Gabaccia, University of Minnesota, USA and Sally Gregory Kohlstedt, University of Minnesota, USA

Putting migration studies and scholarship on European identity into dialogue, this collection provides suggestive observations on the dimensions of the interplay of Europe, migration, and identity. They put sociological research on the "Eurostars," present-day elite migrants, into a historical and transatlantic context. For Europeanization research, the view from outside Europe is especially promising and provides a step towards a more global understanding of what Europe and Europeaness have meant and can mean.

This book questions the presupposition voiced by many historians and political scientists that political experiences in Europe continue to be interpreted in terms of national history, and that a European community of remembrance still does not exist. Through the detailed analysis of both the national and the supranational level, it analyses the emergence of a sense of a shared European past that has started to transcend national forms of memory.

Indigenous Networks

Mobility, Connections and Exchange

Edited by Jane Carey and Jane Lydon

Series: Routledge Studies in Cultural History

Where Europeans have been considered "cosmopolitan," the mobility of Indigenous people has either been overlooked or understood only as a consequence of the oppressive expansion of European empires. This volume brings together prominent and emerging scholars who have begun to explore Indigenous networks and "transnational" encounters to consider the broader significance of "extra-local" networks, exchanges, and mobility for Indigenous peoples. It examines a range of analytic scales, including global, regional and intra-Indigenous networks, histories of ideas and cultural forms, and biography, as well as contemporary legacies.

Laura Ingalls Wilder

American Writer on the Prairie

Sallie Ketcham, Minnetonka, MN, USA

Series: Routledge Historical Americans

Laura Ingalls Wilder's stories of the American frontier are emblematic of the pioneer life to readers young and old. As both author of and character in her Little House on the Prairie series, she is one of the most famous figures in American children's literature, and her books continue to shape new generations' ideas of the American West.

In six chapters supplemented by primary documents, including previously unpublished material from the archives, Ketcham gives an account of Wilder's life while introducing undergraduates to domestic frontier life, the conflict between Native Americans and infringing white populations, and the public memory and imagination of the West.

Made in Europe

The Production of Popular Culture in the Twentieth-Century

Edited by Klaus Nathaus, University of Edinburgh, UK

This edited collection studies the production and dissemination of popular music, tourism, cinema, fashion, broadcasting programmes, advertising and coffee in Western Europe in the twentieth century. Focussing on the supply side of popular culture, it addresses a field of study that is neglected in European historiography. Moreover, it provides a theoretical and methodological discussion that takes into account the inherent dynamics of content production and the role of cultural intermediaries in the change of cultural repertoires.

2nd Edition • NEW EDITION

Martin Luther

Michael A. Mullett, Lancaster University, UK

Series: Routledge Historical Biographies

An engaging new edition provides students with an understanding of the European Reformation through the life of its key mover, Martin Luther. Working chronologically through Luther's life, Michael Mullett explains and analyses Luther's background, the development of his Reformation theology in the 95 Theses, the Diet of Worms and the creation of Lutheranism. This fully revised and updated new edition includes a chapter on the legacy and memory of Luther through the centuries since his death, looking to his influence on modern Germany and the wider world. This book will be essential reading for all students of the European Reformation, early modern history and religious history.

Marxism

With and Beyond Marx

Edited by Amiya Kumar Bagchi, Institute of Development Studies, Kolkata, India and Amita Chatterjee

This book is a unique re-conceptualization of Marxism that brings together works by leading Marxist scholars across disciplines — historical, philosophical, economic, political, social, literary and aesthetic — in one comprehensive corpus for the first time. It argues that the works and philosophy of Marx and Engels continue to be relevant today.

Muslims and Crusaders

Christianity's Wars in the Middle East, 1095-1382, from the Islamic Sources

Niall Christie, Langara College, Canada

Series: Seminar Studies

Muslims and Crusaders supplements and counterbalances the numerous books that tell the story of the crusading period from the European point of view, enabling readers to achieve a broader and more complete perspective on the period. It presents the Crusades from the perspective of those against whom they were waged, the Muslim peoples of the Levant. The book introduces the reader to the most significant issues that affected their responses to the European crusaders, and their descendants who would go on to live in the Latin Christian states that were created in the region.

Peace in World History

Peter N. Stearns, George Mason University, USA

Series: Themes in World History

Peace in World History examines ideas of peace that have existed throughout history and across the world, and how societies have sought to put them into practice, beginning with early hunter-gatherer societies and continuing through the present day. Moving away from the view of history as a series of military conflicts, this book offers a new way of looking at world history by focusing on peace. Showing how concepts of peace have evolved over time even as they have been challenged by war and conflict, this lively, engaging narrative enables students to consider peace as a human possibility.

Rethinking American Women's Activism

Annelise Orleck, Dartmouth College, USA

Series: American Social and Political Movements of the 20th Century

In an enthralling narrative, Annelise Orleck chronicles the American women's movement from the early 20th century to the present. Starting with a cogent introduction that calls for a reconceptualization of American feminist history to encompass multiple streams of women's activism, she weaves the personal with the political, vividly evoking the events and people who participated in our era's most far-reaching social revolution. In short, thematic chapters, Orleck challenges readers to understand the impact of women's activism, and highlights how feminism flourished through much of the past century within social movements that have too often been treated as completely separate.

Ronald Reagan

Champion of Conservative America

James H. Broussard, Lebanon Valley College, USA
Series: Routledge Historical Americans

Ronald Reagan, the 40th US President, is one of the best known figures in recent American history, and one of the few presidents who can be said to have shifted the direction of American political culture. Beginning his political career as a committed New Deal liberal, by the end of the 1950s, he was a strong conservative. His presidency also saw some of the most interesting events of the late 20th century, including the fall of the Berlin Wall, Star Wars, and the Iran-Contra affair.

This short biography, bolstered by primary sources written by and about Reagan, is an ideal way for students to be introduced to this fascinating man.

Scales of Analysis in Anarchist Studies

Reassessing the Transnational Turn

Edited by Constance Bantman and Bert Altena

Series: Routledge Studies in Cultural History

Anarchism and syndicalism can be studied as templates for processes of political and cultural globalisation. This volume, however, argues that anarchism and syndicalism cannot be fully understood with reference only to transnationalism. With implications beyond the field of anarchist studies and the history of anarchism, the book treats anarchism as one example of transnational social networking while challenging the status of transnationalism as academic orthodoxy, highlighting the gray areas between national and transnational, global and local, national social field and transnational network.

Shadows of the Slave Past

Memory, Heritage, and Slavery

Ana Lucia Araujo, Howard University, USA
Series: Routledge Studies in Cultural History

Over the last twenty years, the Atlantic slave past has received increased attention in the Americas, Europe, and Africa. The rise of the public memory of slavery resulted from the political struggle of social actors fighting for social justice or seeking to occupy the public arena, sometimes in order to obtain political gains. Relying on transnational and comparative examination of monuments, memorials, and museums located in various regions of the Americas, Europe, and Africa, this book seeks to understand how slavery and the Atlantic slave trade are remembered, commemorated, and "heritagized" in the public space.

TEXTBOOK

South Asia's Modern History

Thematic Perspectives

Michael Mann, Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, Germany

This comprehensive history of modern South Asia from the beginning of the eighteenth century to the present day explores the historical development of the Subcontinent from local and regional perspectives. Michael Mann charts the role of emerging states within the Mughal Empire, the British colonial expansion in the political setting of the Subcontinent and shows how the modern state formation, usually associated with Western Europe, can be seen in some regions of India. Looking beyond the Subcontinent's post-colonial history this book includes the political, economic, social and cultural development of Pakistan and Bangladesh as well as Sri Lanka and Nepal.

The Power of the Fathers

Historical Perspectives from Ancient Rome to the Nineteenth Century

Edited by Margareth Lanzinger, Universität Wien, Austria

The book seeks to investigate how legal and social norms influenced the structuration of fathers' positions, authority and power—a structuration embedded in the family context, the inner workings of the household, and the various social and political spaces outside the home – over a long period. The individual chapters offer in-depth looks at important areas where paternal power and authority were discursively modelled, established via legal acts, and implemented in social practice.

The Problem and Place of the Social Margins

Edited by Andrew Spicer, Oxford Brookes University, UK and Jane Stevens Crawshaw, Oxford Brookes University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Cultural History

This volume crosses geographical as well as chronological divides in order to emphasise the mutability of the social margins, making an important contribution to research on social and urban history by considering a variety of groups identified as "marginal." Focusing on two key themes in relation to these groups - the language of marginality and the spaces of the margins - the volume counters the trend in the existing historiography to discuss the social margins either as a single, undifferentiated group or separate, unconnected ones, instead examining the effect that changing perceptions of social position had in shaping the spaces in which people worked, lived, or worshipped.

The Red Brigades and the Discourse of Violence

Revolution and Restoration

Marco Briziarelli, University of New Mexico, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern European History

This book explores the communicative practices of the Italian radical group Red Brigades (Brigate Rosse, or BR), the relationship the group established with the Italian press, and the specific social historical context in which the BR developed both its own self-understanding and its complex dialectical connection with the society at large. The BR's worldview and the dominant ideology(ies) mediated by the press are treated as competing responses to structural issues of Italian history: the structural weakness of the nation state, the contradictions of an uneven economic development, and the consequent struggle of the bourgeois class to achieve hegemonic rule.

Transforming Civil War Prisons

Lincoln, Lieber, and the Politics of Captivity

Paul J. Springer, Air Command and Staff College, USA and Glenn Robins, Georgia Southwestern State University, USA

Series: Critical Moments in American History

During the US Civil War, 410,000 people were held as prisoners of war; 56,000 died by the end of the war. The massive number of prisoners demanded that the government create guidelines for their treatment. After the war, some of the first national cemeteries were established at former prisons, and each side worked aggressively to defend its prison record. In six chapters and an array of fascinating primary sources, Robins and Springer show the growth of the politics of captivity, including war crimes, disease, and the use of former prison sites as locations of

Visualizing Jews Through the Ages

Literary and Material Representations of Jewishness and Judaism

Edited by Hannah Ewence and Helen Spurling

Series: Routledge Studies in Cultural History

This volume explores literary and material representations of Jews, Jewishness and Judaism from antiquity to the twenty-first century. It investigates how the debates surrounding literary and material images within Judaism and in Jewish life are part of an on-going strategy of image management - the urge to shape, direct, authorise and contain Jewish literary and material images and encounters with those images - a strategy both consciously and unconsciously undertaken within multifarious arenas of Jewish life from early modern German lands to late twentieth-century North London, late Antique Byzantium to the curation of contemporary Holocaust exhibitions.

An Archaeology of the Immaterial

Victor Buchli, University College London, UK

An Archaeology of the Immaterial examines a highly significant but poorly understood aspect of material culture studies namely the active rejection of the material world. By this is meant a number of cultural projects, from anti-consumerism, asceticism, and other attempts to transcend material circumstances. This book looks at the way people 'disengage' from the material world as a specific kind of physical engagement that has profound implications for our understanding of personhood and materiality.

Architectural Tiles

Conservation and Restoration

Lesley Durbin

This new edition of Architectural Tiles: Conservation and Restoration continues to inform and educate in methodology and techniques pertaining to this broad subject. The new overview of common problems will be helpful in domestic and ecclesiastical situations and will appeal to independent tilers who are in need of information to deal with problems out of the normal run of their work but which are now more commonly being dealt with outside of conservation practice circles. The book has always been and remains an accessible resource to anyone who is interested either professionally or as an enthusiast in the preservation of historic architectural tiles.

Displaced Things

Sandra H. Dudley, University of Leicester, UK

Displaced Things explores the movements of material things from the starting point and perspective of the object. It does so through the lens of displacement, drawing on earlier work on forced migration and conceptualising displacement in relation to anthropological ritual theory. It aims not only to augment understandings of the significance of things and the complexities of their relationships with human beings, but also to problematize notions of the settings through which objects move – including those of museum and 'heritage', definable as they are by their particular approaches to the re-contextualisations of things.

Histories of Egyptology

Interdisciplinary Measures

Edited by William Carruthers, University of Cambridge, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Egyptology

Egypt is currently undergoing a process of redefinition. As the country's recent history is questioned, it is more important than ever for the discipline of Egyptology – whose constructions of Egypt's ancient history are borne of the modern, colonial encounter – to grapple with its own difficult past. This book is the first volume to ask Egyptological and outside figures to examine the discipline's past, providing a critical historical assessment of where the discipline is, how it got there and where it needs to go. Histories of Egyptology provides the basis to understand not only how Egyptologists constructed their discipline, but to demonstrate how they constructed ancient Egypt.

Industrial Heritage Sites in Transformation

Clash of Discourses

Edited by Harald A. Mieg, Humboldt University, Germany and Heike Oevermann, Georg Simmel Centre for Metropolitan Studies, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in Heritage

The management of industrial heritage sites requires rethinking in the context of urban change, and the issue of how to balance protection, preservation/conservation, and development becomes crucial as these sites grow in number. This book explores the conservation of industrial heritage sites in transformation, presenting ten European and Asian case studies. It connects a variety of movements, including monument protection, World Heritage conventions, urban regeneration, urban planning and design, architecture, and politics. This is the first book to deepen the understanding of industrial heritage site management as a task involving diverse social agents and societal discourses.

Museum as Process

Translating Local and Global Knowledges

Edited by Raymond Silverman, University of Michigan, USA

Series: Museum Meanings

The museum has become a vital strategic space for negotiating ownership of and access to knowledge produced in local settings. This volume presents community-engaged "culture work" of a group of scholars whose collaborative projects consider the social spaces between the museum and community and offer new ways of addressing the challenges of bridging the local and the global. Scholars from around the world describe their engagement with communities in Australia, Canada, Ghana, Great Britain, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, South Africa, Taiwan and the United States.

The Making of Heritage

Seduction and Disenchantment

Edited by Camila Del Marmol, Universitat de Barcelona, Spain, Marc A. Morell, Universitate de les Illes Balears, Spain and Jasper Chalcraft, University of Leicester, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Heritage

This book explores the process of heritage making and its relation to the production of touristic places. This volume establishes theoretical links between analyses of heritage and the production and reproduction of places in the context of the global tourist trade. The approach adopted here is to explore the production of heritage as a complex process shaped by local and global discourses that can have a deep impact on several policies and legislations. The chapters in this book stress the need for identifying the intrinsic political implications of these processes, relocating their study in political, economic and social settings.

First published in 1946, History of Western Philosophy went on to become the best-selling philosophy book of the twentieth century. A dazzlingly ambitious project, it remains unchallenged to this day as the ultimate introduction to Western philosophy. Providing a sophisticated overview of the ideas that have perplexed people from time immemorial, it is 'long on wit, intelligence and curmudgeonly scepticism', as the New York Times noted, and it is this, coupled with the sheer brilliance of its scholarship, that has made Russell's History of Western Philosophy one of the most important philosophical works of all time.

The Logic of Scientific Discovery

Karl Popper

Series: Routledge Classics

Described by the philosopher A.J. Ayer as a work of 'great originality and power', this book revolutionized contemporary thinking on science and knowledge. Ideas such as the now legendary doctrine of 'falsificationism' electrified the scientific community, influencing even working scientists, as well as post-war philosophy. This astonishing work ranks alongside The Open Society and Its Enemies as one of Popper's most enduring books and contains insights and arguments that demand to be read to this day.

The Road to Serfdom

F.A. Hayek

Series: Routledge Classics

The Road to Serfdom remains one of the all-time classics of twentieth-century intellectual thought. For over half a century, it has inspired politicians and thinkers around the world, and has had a crucial impact on our political and cultural history. With trademark brilliance, Hayek argues convincingly that, while socialist ideals may be tempting, they cannot be accomplished except by means that few would approve of. Addressing economics, fascism, history, socialism and the Holocaust, Hayek unwraps the trappings of socialist ideology. He reveals to the world that little can result from such ideas except oppression and tyranny. Today, more than fifty years on, Hayek's warnings are just as valid as when The Road to Serfdom was first published.

The Conquest of Happiness

Bertrand Russell and Anthony Grayling, Birkbeck College, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Classics

The Conquest of Happiness is Bertrand Russell's recipe for good living. First published in 1930, it pre-dates the current obsession with self-help by decades. Leading the reader step by step through the causes of unhappiness and the personal choices, compromises and sacrifices that (may) lead to the final, affirmative conclusion of 'The Happy Man', this is popular philosophy, or even self-help, as it should be written.

Gender Trouble

Feminism and the Subversion of Identity

Judith Butler, University of California, Berkeley, USA

Series: Routledge Classics

One of the most talked-about scholarly works of the past fifty years, Judith Butler's Gender Trouble is as celebrated as it is controversial.

Arguing that traditional feminism is wrong to look to a natural, 'essential' notion of the female, or indeed of sex or gender, Butler starts by questioning the category 'woman' and continues in this vein with examinations of 'the masculine' and 'the feminine'. Best known however, but also most often misinterpreted, is Butler's concept of gender as a reiterated social performance rather than the expression of a prior reality.

Thrilling and provocative, few other academic works have roused passions to the same extent.

Playing and Reality

D. W. Winnicott

Series: Routledge Classics

What are the origins of creativity and how can we develop it - whether within ourselves or in others? Not only does Playing and Reality address these questions, it also tackles many more that surround the fundamental issue of the individual self and its relationship with the outside world. In this landmark book of twentieth-century psychology, Winnicott shows the reader how, through the attentive nurturing of creativity from the earliest years, every individual has the opportunity to enjoy a rich and rewarding cultural life. Today, as the 'hothousing' and testing of children begins at an ever-younger age, Winnicott's classic text is a more urgent and topical read than ever before.

Imagining Ancient Cities on Film

From Babylon to Cinecittà

Edited by Marta García Morcillo, Roehampton University, UK, Pauline Hanesworth, Department of Classics, University of Wales Trinity Saint David, UK and Óscar Lapeña Marchena, University of Cadiz, Spain

Series: Routledge Studies in Ancient History

Imagining Ancient Cities on Film explores film representations of cities of the Ancient World from early cinema to the present. The volume analyzes the choices made by filmmakers, art designers and screen writers to recreate ancient urban spaces as more or less convincing settings of mythical and historical events. In looking behind and beyond intended archaeological accuracy, symbolic fantasy, primitivism, exoticism and Hollywood-esque monumentality, this volume pays attention to the depiction of cities as faces of ancient civilizations, but also as containers of moral ideas and cultural fashions deeply rooted in the contemporary zeitgeist and in continuously revisited traditions.

Late Classical and Early Hellenistic Corinth

338-196 BC

Michael D. Dixon, University of Southern Indiana, USA

Series: Routledge Monographs in Classical Studies

This volume challenges the perception that the Macedonian presence in Corinth resulted in a loss of significance and autonomy for the city, arguing that Corinth flourished while Macedon possessed the city. It explicates the nature of their relationship in the aftermath of Chaironeia through to the declaration of Greek Freedom at Isthmia in 196 B.C. It also draws upon a wide range of evidence to place Corinth within the broader Hellenistic world. This study, the full first treatment of the city in this period, contributes significantly to the growing body of work focusing on the Hellenistic world and is a crucial resource for specialists in late Classical and early Hellenistic history.

Advanced Reporting

Essential Skills for 21st Century Journalism

Miles Maguire, University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh, USA
 Unlike standard reporting textbooks, which explain what reporters do, this one explains how to do it, focusing on reporting as a process of triangulation based on three essential activities: analyzing documents, making observations and conducting interviews. Major points in the text are illustrated with accounts of journalists whose work has been recognized for excellence and innovation, and discussion questions and exercises help students put theory into practice.

Communication Research Methodology

A Strategic Communication Science Approach to Applied Research Methods

Gary Pettey, Cleveland State University, USA, Cheryl Campanella Bracken, Cleveland State University, USA and Elizabeth Babin, Cleveland State University, USA

This introduction to communication research methods takes the student from the conceptual beginnings of a research project through the design and analysis. Pettey et al explain the basics of conducting communication research, facilitating students' understanding of the operation and roles of research so that they can better critique and consume the materials. The applied methods approach introduces conceptual elements of communication science and presents these elements as a single study throughout the text. The tools gained herein will enable students to review, use, understand, and critique research, including the aspects of aptness, sophistication and utility of research they encounter.

Critical Political Economy of the Media

An Introduction

Jonathan Hardy, Goldsmiths College, University of London
Series: Communication and Society

How the media are organised and funded is central to understanding their role in society. Critical Political Economy of the Media provides a clear, comprehensive and insightful introduction to the political economic analysis of contemporary media.

Jonathan Hardy undertakes a critical survey of political economy scholarship encompassing worldwide literature, issues and debates, and relationships with other academic approaches. He assesses different ways of making sense of media convergence and digitalisation, media power and influence, and transformations across communication markets and advances the case for a revitalised critical media studies for the 21st century.

Cultural Policy

David Bell, University of Leeds, UK and Kate Oakley, University of Leeds, UK

Series: Key Ideas in Media & Cultural Studies

In this book, David Bell and Kate Oakley survey the major debates emerging in cultural policy research, adopting an approach based on spatial scale to explore cultural policy in cities, nations and internationally. They contextualise these discussions with an exploration of what both 'culture' and 'policy' mean when they are joined together as cultural policy.

Drawing on topical examples and contemporary research, as well as their own experience in both academia and in consultancy, Bell and Oakley urge readers to think critically about the project of cultural policy as it is currently being played out around the world.

Cultural Policy in East Asia

Contemporary Issues and Trends

Edited by Lorraine Lim, Birkbeck, University of London, UK

This book provides an introduction to the contemporary issues occurring in cultural policy in East Asia today. Interest in East Asia has grown considerably in recent years due not only to the emergence of economic super-powers such as China but also to the cultural impact the region is making throughout the world through Japanese film and Korean Pop-Music. Addressing the relationship between the state, culture and the creative economy, this collection highlights how cultural policy within this region has to be understood within its social, historical and political context.

Design for Innovative Technology

From Disruption to Acceptance

Nicholas Henchoz and Yves Mirande

Cutting-edge research aims to provide entirely new knowledge. In engineering, this leads to 'disruptive' technology which is radically different from anything that exists. Despite their remarkable performance, these new technologies are often resisted by the public, leading to tensions within society. Using examples from the EPFL+ECAL Laboratory, this book examines how disruptive technology can be perceived as 'friendly innovation', allowing it to make a contribution to our everyday lives.

Designers' Shakespeare

Edited by John Russell Brown and Stephen Di Benedetto

This volume deals with the ways in which various scenographers have approached Shakespeare's texts, written as they were when there was very little in the way of set and scenic elaboration and therefore offering a great deal of scope for interpretation from production to production. Designers' Shakespeare takes a deliberately 'scenographic' approach to design, encompassing all elements of theatrical design, including costumes, lighting, props, and scenery.

Disturbing Argument

Selected Works from the 18th NCA/AFA Alta Conference on Argumentation

Edited by Catherine Palczewski, University of Northern Iowa, USA

This book represents the best of the scholarship presented at the 18th NCA/AFA Conference on Argumentation. Contributions speak both to the disturbing prevalence of violence in the contemporary world and to the potential of argument itself, to disturb the very relations of power that enable that violence. Scholars' essays analyze a range of argument forms, including body and visual argument, interpersonal and group argument, argument in electoral politics, public argument, argument in social protest, scientific and technical argument, and argument and debate pedagogy.

Eco-Trauma Cinema

Edited by Anil Narine, University of Toronto, Canada

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This book investigates film's complex role in representing ecological traumas. Contributors to this volume engage with eco-trauma cinema in its three general forms: accounts of people who are traumatized by the natural world, narratives that represent people or social processes which traumatize the environment or its species, and stories that depict the aftermath of ecological catastrophe. The films they examine represent a central challenge of our age: to overcome our disavowal of environmental crises, to reflect on the unsavoury forces reshaping the earth, and to restructure the mechanisms responsible for the state of the earth.

Ethics for Digital Journalists

Emerging Best Practices

Edited by Lawrie Zion, La Trobe University, Australia and David A. Craig, University of Oklahoma, USA

This book draws together the expertise and experience of journalists and scholars who have all been part of the process of shaping best practices in digital journalism. The authors examine emerging best practices in everything from transparency and verification to aggregation, collaboration, live blogging and tweeting, and the challenges of digital narratives. At a time when questions of ethics and practice are under challenge and subject to intense debate, the book is designed to provide students, journalism educators and practitioners with the insights and skills to realise their potential as professionals.

Film and the American Presidency

Edited by Jeff Menne, Oklahoma State University, USA and Christian B. Long, University of Canterbury, New Zealand

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

The contention of Film and the American Presidency is that over the twentieth century the cinema has been a silent partner in setting the parameters of what we might call the presidential imaginary. This volume surveys the partnership in its longevity, placing stress on especially iconic presidents such as Lincoln and FDR. The contributions to this collection probe the rich interactions between these high institutions of culture and politics—Hollywood and the presidency—and argue that not only did Hollywood acting become an idiom for presidential style, but that Hollywood early on understood its own identity through the presidency's peculiar mix of national epic and unified protagonist.

Introduction to Game Analysis

Clara Fernández-Vara, New York University, USA

This book serves as an accessible guide to analyzing games using strategies borrowed from textual analysis. Clara Fernández-Vara's concise primer provides instruction on the basic building blocks of game analysis—examination of context, content and reception, and formal qualities—as well as the vocabulary necessary for talking about videogames' distinguishing characteristics. Examples are drawn from a range of games, both digital and non-digital—from Bioshock and World of Warcraft to Monopoly—and the book provides a variety of exercises and sample analyses, as well as a comprehensive ludography and glossary.

Iranian Cinema in a Global Context

Policy, Politics, and Form

Edited by Peter Decherney, University of Pennsylvania, USA and Blake Atwood, University of Texas at Austin, USA

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This volume takes account of the wide range of Iranian cinema, from popular youth films to low budget underground films. It reassesses the global circulation of Iranian art cinema, looking at its reception at international festivals, in university curricula, and at the Academy Awards. A final theme explores the intersection between politics and film, with essays on post-Khatami reform influences, representations of ineffective drug policies, and the representation of Jewish characters in Iranian film. Contributors present a new definition of the field of Iranian film studies, one that engages global media flows, transmedia interaction, and a heterogeneous Iranian national cinema.

Series: Routledge Advances in Internationalizing Media Studies

This collection investigates the ways in which television programs around the world have highlighted modernization and encouraged nation-building, a phenomenon which took place as television developed and expanded in different parts of the world between the 1950s and the 1990s. From popular science and adult education shows to news magazines and television plays, television producers and state authorities used television programs to bolster modernization efforts. Contributors analyze the hallmarks of these media efforts: nation-building, consumerism and consumer culture, the education and integration of citizens, and the glorification of the nation's technological achievements.

Multiculturalism and the Arts in European Cities

Edited by Marco Martiniello, University of Liege, Belgium

This book discusses the tension, or even the contradiction, between ethno-cultural segregation and ethno-cultural mixing in the field of the arts. It focuses on the local artistic sphere in the multicultural EU cities of Amsterdam, Antwerp, Brussels, Cologne, Malmö and Vienna. The chapter authors are drawn from broad variety of disciplines, including anthropology, cultural studies, political science, sociology, urban studies and planning, offering the reader a broad variety of perspectives and insights into this area.

Multithreading for Visual Effects

Martin Watt, Dreamworks Animation, Erwin Coumans, George ElKoura, Ronald Henderson, DreamWorks Animation, Manuel Kraemer, Jeff Lait and James Reinders

Using tools that have been successfully used to produce blockbuster motion pictures as primary examples, this book explains how to apply multithreading programming techniques to problems often encountered in visual effects. Concrete examples show how multithreading paradigms are applied to achieve high-performance computation. The book presents an overview of practical uses for Intel's TBB library as well as other multithreading constructs, such as pthreads and OpenMP. It also covers the open standard OpenCL used to implement Bullet 3.0 for GPU.

Online Evaluation of Creativity and the Arts

Edited by Hiesun Cecilia Suhr, Miami University – Hamilton, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in New Media and Cyberculture

This book examines the newly emerging forms of evaluation, such as contests, competitions, ranking, commenting, liking, and rating, which are taking place in digital environments. In doing so, this book investigates the criteria and assessment practices tied to the evaluation of creativity and artistic works and further questions what is at stake when digital environments heighten the role of amateur and peer criticism to the level of expert critiques. While exploring potential informal learning opportunities and offering incisive critiques on the emerging norms and standards of evaluation, the essays in this book cover a wide range of artistic and creative practices.

Online Games, Social Narratives

Esther MacCallum-Stewart, University of Surrey, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in New Media and Cyberculture

In this book, MacCallum-Stewart studies the different ways in which online games create social environments and how players choose to interpret these. These games vary from the immensely popular social networking games on Facebook such as Farmville to Massively Multiplayer Online Roleplaying Games to "Free to Play" online gaming and console communities such as players of Xbox Live and PS3 games. Each chapter deals with a different aspect of social gaming online, breaking down when games are social and what narrative devices make them so. This cross-disciplinary study will appeal to those interested in cyberculture, the evolution of gaming technology, and sociologies of media.

Political Documentary Cinema in Latin America

Edited by Antonio Traverso, Curtin University of Technology, Australia and Kristi M. Wilson, Soka University of America, USA

Political documentary cinema in Latin America has a long history of tracing social injustice and suffering, depicting political unrest, intervening in periods of crisis and upheaval, and reflecting upon questions regarding such pressing subjects as ideology, cultural identity, genocide and traumatic memory. The essays collected in this book show the important role that political documentary cinema has played in the Latin American region since the 1950s.

TEXTBOOK

Researching and Writing in Communities

Lynne Lewis Gaillet and Michelle Eble

Rhetorical Engagement answers instructors' increasing demands for raison d'être in composition by emphasizing the rhetorical situation (and its components) in the context of community and public issues, along with a focus on primary research.

This text is designed to help students become community intellectuals, to understand the various components of a given academic, political, or home group and to then find a way to become rhetorically active within that community. It is intended for beginning writers—not basic writers—along with advanced rhetoric/composition students, communication, and history students interested in archival research and community engagement.

Revitalising Audience Research

Innovations in European Audience Research

Edited by Frauke Zeller, Ryerson University, Canada, Cristina Ponte, Universidade Nova de Lisboa, Portugal and Brian O'Neill, Dublin Institute of Technology, Ireland
Series: Routledge Studies in European Communication Research and Education

This volume focuses on processes to revitalise the academic field of audience research. Ultimately, the revitalisation of audience studies requires the introduction of new paradigms or conceptual developments into the field of audience research. This entails both the need to cross disciplines (e.g. between the social sciences tradition and the critical/cultural tradition, or the computational tradition) and the need to bridge long-established boundaries in the field (e.g. between 'old media' and 'new media'). Contributors aim to facilitate this process of boundary crossing through a series of interdisciplinary debates across the full range of audience consumption and reception studies.

Superheroes and Identities

Edited by Mel Gibson, University of Northumbria, UK, David Huxley, Manchester Metropolitan University, UK and Joan Ormrod, Manchester Metropolitan University, UK

Superheroes have been the major genre to emerge from comics and graphic novels, saturating popular culture with images of muscular men and sexy women. A major aspect of this genre is identity in the roles played by individuals, the development of identities through extended stories and in the ways the characters inspire audiences. This collection explores what superhero narratives can reveal about our attitudes towards femininity and race, maternity, masculinity and queer culture.

The Memory of Sound

Preserving the Sonic Past

Seán Street, Bournemouth University, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

This book explores the connections between sound and memory across all electronic media, with a particular focus on radio. Street explores our capacity to remember through sound and how we can help ourselves preserve a sense of self through the continuity of memory. In so doing, he analyzes how the brain is triggered by the memory of programs, songs, and individual sounds. He then examines the growing importance of sound archives, community radio and current research using GPS technology for the history of place, as well as the potential for developing strategies to aid Alzheimer's and dementia patients through audio memory.

Unthinking Eurocentrism

Multiculturalism and the Media

Ella Shohat, New York University, USA and Robert Stam, New York University, USA

Series: Sightlines

Unthinking Eurocentrism, a seminal and award-winning work in postcolonial studies first published in 1994, explored Eurocentrism as an interlocking network of buried premises, embedded narratives, and submerged tropes that constituted a broadly shared epistemology within popular culture, film and the mass media.

The substantial new afterword in this 20th anniversary second edition brings these issues into the present by charting recent transformations of the intellectual debates, and explores recent cinematic trends such as "indigenous media" and "postcolonial adaptations" that have gained strength over the past two decades.

Word of Mouth and Social Media

Edited by Allan J. Kimmel, ESCP Europe, France and Philip J. Kitchen, ESC Rennes School of Business, France

Relatively little academic research scrutiny has been devoted to word of mouth (WOM) as it relates to social media and there is evidence of resistance by marketers in staying with the time-worn, but tested and tried traditional types of communications. This book bridges these gaps in knowledge and practice by providing an outlet for innovative and timely contributions pertaining to online WOM, as disseminated through the broad array of social media – a category of online media where people are talking, participating, sharing, networking, and bookmarking.

Virtue in Media

The Moral Psychology of Excellence in News and Public Relations

Patrick Lee Plaisance, Colorado State University, USA

This book establishes a profile of virtue in professional media practice by examining the experiences, perspectives, moral stances and demographic data of two dozen selected exemplars in journalism and public relations. It is based on both extensive personal "life story" interviews conducted with the exemplars between April 2010 and September 2012, and also survey data that assessed the exemplars' personality traits, ethical ideologies, moral reasoning skills and perceived workplace climate. The chosen exemplars span the United States and include Pulitzer Prize winners and trendsetting PR corporate executives, rising stars and established veterans.

3D Postproduction

Stereoscopic Workflows and Techniques

Rick Baumgartner, Digital Media Producer, Los Angeles, CA, USA

3D postproduction might well be the most overlooked part of creating 3D productions. An effective 3D post workflow allows for easier and more flexible editing, greater capacity for VFX enhancement, the ability to fix production mistakes, and much more. It is a topic that has been touched on in other 3D books, but not covered comprehensively, until now. In this book, Baumgartner provides real-life postproduction workflows for post-artists working with stereoscopic 3D media. These workflows have been used on actual productions and when implemented, will save postproduction as well as production teams valuable dollars and time. A companion website (www.focalpress.com/cw/baumgartner) featuring project files and video clips demonstrating the 3D workflows covered in the book is included.

Cinema Raw

Shooting and Color Grading with the Ikonoskop, Digital Bolex, and Blackmagic Cinema Cameras

Kurt Lancaster, Digital filmmaker, Multimedia producer, Northern Arizona University, USA

Kurt Lancaster takes filmmakers through the raw workflow with the next generation of digital cinema cameras. While DSLR and HD video cameras have done the job in the past, shooting with raw allows filmmakers to capture an image in its purest form, which in turn gives them the freedom to manipulate the image in postproduction without degrading the quality. With the recent surge of affordable raw cameras on the market, this book empowers filmmakers to craft visually stunning films on a greatly reduced budget. A companion website offers video interviews with the camera creators, bonus chapters, camera user manuals, and resources for further study about raw cinema.

Photography 4.0: A Teaching Guide for the 21st Century

Educators Share Thoughts and Assignments

Michelle Bogre, photographer, writer, and intellectual property lawyer; professor at The New School Parsons School of Photography

An invaluable resource for photography educators, this volume is a survey of photographic education in the first decade of the 21st Century. Drawing upon her 25 years of teaching experience and her professional network, Michelle Bogre spoke with 47 photo educators from all over the world to compile this diverse set of interviews. The themes of these interviews explore why students should study photography, the value of a 4 year photography degree, teaching philosophies, the challenges of teaching photography, and changes in photographic education. The second half of the book shares 70 photography assignments from these educators, some paired with examples of how students completed them.

Scott Arundale, Professor, Chapman University, Dodge College of Film and Media Arts, Orange, CA, USA and Tashi Trieu, Color and Visual effects artist, credits including Thor: The Dark World and Iron Man 3, Glendale, CA, USA

Post Modern explains the creative tools and workflows available to filmmakers today, so they understand how to use them, along with when, why, and how these decisions empower storytelling. Scott Arundale and Tashi Trieu use non-technical jargon to guide the reader through preproduction— what camera is best for telling a story and why, budgeting; production— on-set data management, dailies, green screen, digital cinematography; and postproduction— editing, visual effects, color correction, and distribution. Case studies show these solutions in real-world situations and the website features videos of techniques discussed in the book, project files, and PDF updates of technological changes.

Apocalyptic Discourse in Contemporary Culture

Post-Millennial Perspectives of the End of the World

Edited by Monica Germana, University of Westminster, UK and Aris Mousoutzanis, Kingston University, UK

Series: Routledge Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Literature

This interdisciplinary volume focuses on critical and theoretical responses to the apocalypse, reflecting on its past tradition, pervasive present and future legacy. It offers a dynamic combination of theoretical speculation, textual analysis and historicisation, exploring four crucial areas of investigation: theory, space, time, and language. This collection explores the widespread appeal of the apocalypse as one of the most pervasive preoccupations in the history of Western culture, and one that has served as a template to construct different sets of cultural anxieties throughout history.

Entranced by Story

Brain, Tale and Teller, from Infancy to Old Age

Hugh Crago, Australian Catholic University and University of Western Sydney, Australia

Series: Children's Literature and Culture

We live in a world of stories; yet few of us pause to ask what stories actually are, why we consume them so avidly, and what they do for story makers and their audiences. This book explores a wide range of literature together with recent research on brain function to provide an invaluable and thought-provoking link between literary and psychological studies. With a unique blend of research, theory and biographical anecdote, the author contends that it is the unique structure of the human brain, with its layering of sophisticated cognitive capacities upon archaic, emotion-driven functions, that best explains the mystery of story.

Literary Criticism and Theory

From Plato to Postcolonialism

Pelagia Goulimari, University of Oxford, UK

This book offers an introduction to the history of literary criticism and theory through the texts themselves. It examines: key thinkers Plato to Derrida; topics and themes such as mimesis and creation, inspiration, the emotions, reason, aesthetic, history, morality, ethics, culture and discourse; genres including the epic, tragedy, comedy, romanticism, realism, modernism and postmodernism; cross-historical connections between theories and theorists and the dissemination, appropriation and misunderstanding of concepts, ideas and arguments. Features include a glossary and annotated further reading, making it the ideal introduction to those approaching theory and criticism for the first time.

Literature and the Glocal City

Reshaping the English Canadian Imaginary

Edited by Ana María Fraile-Marcos, Universidad de Salamanca, Spain

Series: Routledge Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Literature

This book's most notable contribution lies in linking the notion of 'glocality', that is, the intermeshing of local and global forces to representations of subjectivity in the material and figurative space of the Canadian city. Dealing with oppositional discourses as multiculturalism, postcolonialism, feminism, diaspora, and environmentalism this book is an essential reference for any scholar with an interest in these areas.

Mary Wroth and Shakespeare

Edited by Paul Salzman, La Trobe University, Australia and Marion Wynne-Davies, University of Surrey, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Shakespeare

This book explore the ways in which Wroth negotiated the discourses that are embedded in the Shakespearean canon in order to develop an understanding of her oeuvre, based not on influence and imitation, but on difference, originality, and innovation. Because of its innovative comparative approach, this volume will provide fresh perspectives on two of the most important writers in early modern literature. Featuring ten chapters from an international selection of contributors, it is an important reference for scholars of Early Modern women writers and Shakespeare.

Masculinity in Contemporary New York Fiction

Peter Ferry, Queen's University Belfast, Northern Ireland

Series: Routledge Transnational Perspectives on American Literature

Masculinity in Contemporary New York Fiction presents masculinity as a key thematic concern in canonical works of contemporary New York fiction. Carefully considering the negotiation of masculinity in the work of authors such as Paul Auster, Bret Easton Ellis, and Don DeLillo, alongside Raewyn Connell's concept of hegemonic masculinity, this book illustrates that the hegemonic male is a complex individual shaped in relation to himself and the nonhegemonic other. It is an essential reference for those with an interest in gender studies and contemporary American fiction.

Sex Trafficking in Postcolonial Literature

Transnational Narratives from Joyce to Bolaño

Laura Barberán Reinas, Bronx Community College, City University of New York, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Postcolonial Literatures

This book is a sustained interdisciplinary study bridging postcolonial literature, in English and Spanish, and sex trafficking, as analyzed through literary theory, anthropology, sociology, history, trauma theory, journalism, and globalization studies. It encompasses postcolonial theory and literature's aesthetic analysis of sex trafficking together with research from social sciences, psychology, anthropology, and economics with the intention of offering a comprehensive analysis of the topic beyond the type of Orientalist discourse so prevalent in the media.

Telling Tales

Autobiographies of Childhood and Youth

Edited by Kylie Cardell, Flinders University, Australia and Kate Douglas, Flinders University, Australia

Young writers have historically played a pivotal role in shaping autobiographical genres and this continues into the graphic and digital texts which characterise contemporary life writing. This volume offers a selection of pertinent case studies which illuminate some of the core themes which have come to characterise autobiographical writings of childhood, including: cultural and identity representations and tensions, coming into knowledge and education, sexuality, prejudice, war, and trauma.

The Merry Wives of Windsor

New Critical Essays

Edited by Evelyn Gajowski, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, USA and Phyllis Rackin

Series: Shakespeare Criticism

The Merry Wives of Windsor is a much neglected comedy by Shakespeare. However, recent developments in feminist, ecocritical and new historicist criticism have led to a revival of interest, and this collection of 18 essays by top Shakespeare scholars sheds new light on the play. The detailed introduction provides a historical survey of the play's reception and ties into an evolving critical and cultural context. The book's sections look in turn at Female Community/ Female Agency, Theatrical Alternatives, Social and Theatrical Contexts, Desire/Sexuality, Nature, and Performance to provide contemporary critical analysis of the play.

Research Methodologies in Translation Studies

Gabriela Saldanha, University of Birmingham, UK and Sharon O'Brien, Dublin City University, Ireland

Research Methodologies in Translation Studies is divided into four different chapters, according to whether the research focuses on the translation product, the process of translation, the participants involved or the context in which translation takes place. An introductory chapter discusses issues of reliability, credibility, validity and ethics. The impact of our research depends not only on its quality but also on successful dissemination, and the final chapter therefore deals with what is also generally the final stage of the research process: producing a research report.

Translation and Language Education

Pedagogic Approaches Explored

Sara Laviosa, Bari University, Italy

Series: Translation Theories Explored

The revival of translation as a means of learning and teaching a foreign language and as a skill in its own right is occurring at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels in universities. The author examines the changing nature of the role of pedagogic translation starting with the Grammar Translation Method and concluding with the more recent ecological approaches to Foreign Language Education. Translation and Language Education is vital reading for translators, language teachers and postgraduate students working in the areas of Translation Studies and Applied Linguistics.

The Legal Environment of Translation

Guillermo Cabanellas, CEK, Argentina

This book offers an overview of the legal rules applicable to different aspects of translation, allowing translators to form a broad and coherent picture of the rules applicable in this area. In addition to a description and analysis of the legal issues and rules involved, the book also presents hypothetical cases, with a discussion of the problems they pose and possible solutions. It explains the theoretical structure of the rules under discussion as well as their practical implications. The book is sufficiently accessible to allow lawyers, translators and those who require translation work but do not have a formal legal background to follow the arguments presented.

Introducing English Language

A Resource Book for Students

Louise Mullany and Peter Stockwell, University of Nottingham, UK

Series: Routledge English Language Introductions

This textbook is the foundational book in the successful Routledge English Language Introductions series. It stands as a 'sampler' for the other volumes in the series, but is also a key textbook in its own right. It offers comprehensive coverage of the English language, an introduction to key disciplines of linguistics and also key areas in language study. Adopting the flexible RELI structure, the four sections offer introductions, development and exploration of all the topics covered plus the classic readings in each area. Accompanied by a website, this book is an essential resource for all introductory language and linguistics courses.

Introducing Phonetics and Phonology

Mike Davenport, Durham University, UK and S.J. Hannahs, University of Newcastle, UK

Introducing Phonetics and Phonology examines some of the ways in which linguists can express what native speakers know about the sound system of their language. Intended for the absolute beginner, it requires no previous background in linguistics, phonetics or phonology. Starting with a grounding in phonetics and phonological theory, the book provides a base from which more advanced treatments may be approached. This new edition includes more discussion of Optimality Theory and a new glossary of terms. It has been updated throughout to take account of the latest developments in phonological theory, but without sacrificing the book's ease of use for beginners.

Language in Literature

Michael Toolan, University of Birmingham, UK

An activity-based introduction to stylistics, this textbook explains some of the topics in literary linguistics and helps students in analysing written texts. By looking at the technique and the craft of writing, Language in Literature examines the ways in which language is organised to create particular meanings or effects. Covering a range of topics such as naming patterns, modality and evaluation, the book presents the structuring principles within the English language. Activities and end-of-chapter commentaries encourage a 'learning by doing' approach and equip the reader with the main linguistic terms necessary for the analysis of literary and non-literary texts.

Introduction to Instructed Second Language Acquisition

Shawn Loewen, Michigan State University, USA

This book presents a cohesive view of the different theoretical and pedagogical perspectives that comprise instructed second language acquisition (ISLA). The book begins by considering the effectiveness of ISLA and the differences between ISLA and naturalistic L2 learning, and then goes on to discuss the theoretical, empirical, and pedagogical aspects of key issues in ISLA. This timely and important volume is ideally suited for the graduate level ISLA course, and provides valuable insights for any SLA scholar interested in the processes involved in second language learning in classroom settings.

The Case of Haiti

Marky Jean-Pierre, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, USA

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Multilingualism

This book explores the social, political, and historical forces that mediate language ideology and practices in post-colonial education and how they influence students' academic achievement. Jean-Pierre takes Haiti as the focus of study, finding that students and teachers experience difficulty constructing knowledge in a setting in which the language they speak at home (Creole) differs from the language of instruction (French), empirically showing that school underperformance is linked to language practices. The research is based on ethnographic data collected in classrooms in both private and public school in addition to other sectors of the society (e.g. state and private institutions).

Understanding Syntax

Maggie Tallerman, University of Newcastle, UK

Series: Understanding Language

Assuming no prior knowledge, Understanding Syntax illustrates the major concepts and terminology associated with the study of cross-linguistic syntax. A theory-neutral and descriptive viewpoint is taken throughout. Starting with an overview of what syntax is, the book moves on to an explanation of word classes and a discussion of sentence structure in the world's languages, taking data from approximately 100 languages. The final chapter illustrates the principles involved in syntactically sketching a language, enabling the reader to construct a grammatical sketch of a language known to them. This fully updated book is essential for all students studying syntax.

Unified Discourse Analysis

Language, Reality, Virtual Worlds and Video Games

James Paul Gee, Arizona State University, USA

Discourse Analysis is becoming increasingly "multimodal", concerned primarily with the interplay of language, image and sound. In this ground-breaking new textbook, best-selling author and experienced gamer, James Paul Gee, sets out a new theory and method of discourse analysis which applies to language, the real world, science and video games. Rather than analysing the language of video games, this book uses discourse analysis to study games as communicational forms. Written in a highly accessible style and drawing on a wide range of games, from World of Warcraft to Tetris, this engaging textbook is essential reading for students in discourse analysis, new media and digital culture.

Modern Brazilian Portuguese Grammar

A Practical Guide

John Whitlam, Freelance writer, lecturer and lexicographer.

Series: Modern Grammars

Modern Brazilian Portuguese Grammar is a complete and practical guide to Portuguese as it is currently spoken and written in Brazil. While acknowledging what is considered to be 'good Portuguese' and what is considered to be 'non-standard Portuguese' by Brazilian grammarians, the book rejects the prescriptive approach of native-speaker grammars in favour of a descriptive analysis based on empirical observation and a corpus of modern Brazilian Portuguese.

The explanations given are easily understandable for non-linguists and illustrated with hundreds of examples.

A combination of reference grammar and practical usage manual, the book is ideal for all those interested in learning and using Brazilian Portuguese, from tourists and business travellers to university students.

Vietnam War Slang

A Dictionary on Historical Principles

Tom Dalzell

This dictionary presents slang used by members of the US Armed Forces during the Vietnam War. War has always been an incubator for slang, with its tragedies and forging of bonds between comrades. The troops in Vietnam faced the usual demands of war, as well as several that were unique to Vietnam—a murky political basis for the war, prevalent corruption in the government, untraditional guerilla warfare, an unpredictable civilian population in Vietnam, and a lack of home popular support for the war. For these reasons, the language of those who fought was a vivid reflection of life in wartime. This book lays out the definitive record of the lexicon of Americans who fought in the Vietnam War.

Performing Asian Transnationalisms

Theatre, Identity, and the Geographies of Performance

Amanda Rogers, Royal Holloway, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Theatre & Performance Studies

Taking its cue from dialogues between Theatre Studies and Cultural Geography, this book investigates how theatre articulates transnational geographies of Asian culture and identity. Rogers analyzes transnational flows of practitioners, plays, and performances between Asian American, British East Asian, and South East Asian theatres, investigating the effect of this mobility on the construction of identity, the development of creative praxis, and the reception of works across social fields. Rogers demonstrates how performances reflect and rework conventional transnational geographies of nation, border, belonging, home, and family in imaginative and innovative ways.

Music in Contemporary Philosophy

Edited by Martin Scherzinger

From the era of the 18th-century European Enlightenment to the present, music has long claimed residency in and served as an important conduit for philosophy. This book examines the various ways the writings of ten contemporary philosophers (from Adorno and Bloch to Badiou and Žižek) attempt to metamorphose philosophical thought on the model of musical sound.

Music, Travel, and Imperial Encounter in 19th-Century France

Musical Apprehensions

Ruth Rosenberg, University of Illinois at Chicago, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethnomusicology

Each of this book's chapters is devoted to a different geographic and discursive site, examining French representations of musical encounters in North America, the Middle East, as well as in contested areas within the borders of metropolitan France. Rosenberg highlights intersections between an emergent ethnographie musicale in France and narratives of musical encounter found in French travel literature, connecting both phenomena to France's imperial aspirations and nationalist anxieties in the period from the Revolution to the late-nineteenth century. It is therefore an excellent research tool for scholars in the fields of cultural studies, literary history, and postcolonial theory.

Theory for Today's Musician, Second Edition (Textbook and Workbook Package)

Ralph Turek, University of Akron, USA and Daniel McCarthy, University of Akron, USA

This comprehensive textbook recasts the scope of the traditional music theory course to meet the demands of the professional music world, in a style that engages today's music student. It uses classical, folk, popular, and jazz repertoires with clear explanations that link music theory to musical applications. The authors help prepare students by not only exploring how music theory works in art music, but how it functions within modern music, and why this knowledge will help them become better composers, music teachers, and performers. It merges traditional topics such as part-writing and harmony with less traditional topics such as musical process, songwriting, jazz harmony, and the blues.

Introducing Paulo Freire

A guide for students, teachers and practitioners

Sandra Smidt, Freelance Educational Consultant, UK

The famous Brazilian educator Paulo Freire has influenced educators, teachers and students in a broad tapestry of contexts and countries, as he challenged conventional thinking on how teachers ought to teach and learners ought to learn. By making his ideas accessible and relevant, this insightful and thought-provoking text draws out the relevance and topicality of Freire's work and applies this to a wide range of educational settings, from adult education, through schools, to early years settings.

Listening to Children

Being and becoming

Edited by Bronwyn Davies, University of Melbourne, Australia
Series: Contesting Early Childhood

Defining research as diffractive, and as experimental, Davies' relationship to the teachers and pedagogues she worked with is one of co-experimentation. Her relationship with the children is one in which she explores the ways in which her own new thinking and being might emerge, even as old ways of thinking and being assert themselves and interfere with the unfolding of the new. She draws us into her ongoing experimentation, asking that we think hard, all the while delighting our senses with the poetry of her writing, and the stories of her encounters with children.

Educational Change in International Early Childhood Contexts

Crossing Borders of Reflection

Edited by Linda Kroll, Mills College, California, USA and Daniel R. Meier, San Francisco State University, USA

Series: International Perspectives on Early Childhood Education

Co-published with the Association for Childhood Education International (ACEI), Educational Change in International Early Childhood Contexts examines the role of teacher reflection in a variety of educational contexts worldwide. Using a case study approach that integrates research, theory, policy, and practice, international contributors show how in some settings, local traditions and values are honored while in others, foreign educational ideas and programs become modified to suit local needs.

TEXTBOOK

The Characteristics of Effective Learning

Creating and capturing the possibilities in the early years

Edited by Annie Woods, Nottingham Trent University, UK

The book explores what the characteristics of effective learning look like and how practitioners can create opportunities for children to express them. It considers the ways in which they connect with children's natural explorations, play and the environment. Throughout the focus is on building on children's own interests as practitioners plan for, observe and assess playing and exploring, active learning and creativity and critical thinking.

Including encounters from settings and questions for reflective practice, the book covers: children's well-being and motivations; creating effective learning possibilities; engaging children's interests.

The Early Years Reflective Practice Handbook

Edited by Avril Brock, Leeds Metropolitan University, UK

This timely new book takes a fresh look at a breadth of issues relating to early childhood care and education reflecting on policy, knowledge and practice.

Incorporating practical reflection activities, case studies, exemplar scenarios and questions in each chapter the book considers:

policy developments and the impact these have on young children and their families; issues around socio-culturalism, language, ethnicity, disposition, gender, inclusion and socio-economics; play and the notions of quality, observation and assessment and continuity; contemporary issues that practitioners may encounter in their everyday work.

9/11 and Collective Memory in US Classrooms

Teaching About Terror

Cheryl Duckworth, Nova Southeastern University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Education

Arguing that the events of 9/11 have become a "chosen trauma" for the US, this volume investigates how 9/11 is being taught in classrooms (if at all) and what narrative is being passed on to today's students about that day. Using quantitative and qualitative data gathered from US middle and high school teachers, it examines the understanding that the "post-9/11 generation" has of what happened and what it means for foreign policy in the coming decades (especially in the Islamic World) and whether it is likely to generate war or foster peace.

High-Stakes Testing in Education

Value, fairness and consequences

Edited by Theo J.H.M Eggen, CITO/University of Twente, The Netherlands and Gordon Stobart, Institute of Education, University of London, UK

High-stakes educational testing is a global phenomenon which is increasing in both scale and importance. This book draws on research which examines various uses of high-stakes testing. Articles evaluate the impact of such assessments and explore the issues of value and fairness which they raise. To underline the international appeal of high-stakes testing the studies are drawn from Australia, Africa, the Caribbean, Europe, former Soviet republics and North America. Collectively they illustrate the power of high-stakes assessment in shaping policy making and schooling. Human Rights and Citizenship Education

Edited by Dina Kiwan, American University of Beirut, Lebanon

This book considers the philosophical, sociological and legal implications of the distinction between universal human rights accorded to all because of their membership of the human species, and the more particularistic 'citizenship' rights, accorded to those who are members of a political community. Contributions address the three themes of firstly whether human rights and citizenship are complementary or competing conceptions, secondly the justifications for human rights, and thirdly human rights and citizenship in different cultural contexts.

Social Studies for Secondary Schools

Teaching to Learn, Learning to Teach

Alan J. Singer, Hofstra University, USA

This text integrates discussions of educational goals and the nature of history and social studies with ideas for organizing social studies curricula, units, lessons, projects, and activities. Advocating an inquiry and activity-based view and based in practice and experience, each chapter addresses a broad question about social studies education; sub-chapters direct attention to specific educational issues. Lesson ideas and materials in the text and online are especially designed to help new teachers to address common core learning standards, to work in inclusive settings, and to promote literacy and the use of technology in social studies classrooms.

Jill Porter, University of Bath, UK

Understanding and Responding to the Experiences of Disability informs readers about current understandings of disability and ways of recognizing the needs that arise from the lived experience of impairment in schools. While most schools have clear procedures in place with respect to identifying children with Special Educational Needs, the same is not true for disability. Moreover research suggests that many schools have restricted understanding of this distinction, often equating disability to children with SEN and children with health conditions, thereby failing to recognize the pivotal role of impact.

Key Perspectives on Dyslexia

An essential text for educators

David Armstrong, University of South Australia, Australia and Garry Squires, University of Manchester, UK

This key textbook offers an accessible but highly-informed overview of key issues which relate to the identification and assessment of children/young people with dyslexia, and discusses the issues for educational support and learning more generally for children and young people with this most commonly occurring learning disability.

Using holistic guidance for educators on specific but enduring issues in the care and education of children and young people with dyslexia, this book will also accommodate international perspectives by referring to the legislative and practical dimensions of topics in other parts of the English-speaking world: particularly Australia and Canada.

The selected works of Sally Tomlinson

Sally Tomlinson, University of Oxford, UK.

Series: World Library of Educationalists

Social class, race and gender have historically always been essential markers in deciding who would receive a minimum or inferior education and thus fail to obtain whatever were currently acceptable qualifications. Professor Tomlinson's aim in her work has always been to introduce sociological, historical and political perspectives into an area dominated by psychological, administrative and technical views and to explain how the individual 'problems' were connected to wider social structures and policies. This unique collection illustrates the development of Professor Tomlinson's thinking over the course of her long and esteemed career.

Chinese Students' Writing in English

A corpus-driven study

Maria Leedham, The Open University, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Education

Chinese students are the largest international student group in UK universities today, yet little is known about their undergraduate writing and the challenges faced. Drawing on the British Academic Written English corpus - undergraduate student writing collected in the UK in the early 2000s - this book explores Chinese students' written assignments in English, contrasting these with assignments from British students in a range of university disciplines. The corpus is supplemented by questionnaires, interviews, and observational material from classrooms in China and the UK, all of which build towards a comprehensive picture of the Chinese student writer in the UK today.

Creating and Managing Expansive Learning Environments

Improving Vocational and Professional Education and Training

Alison Fuller and Lorna Unwin, Institute of Education, University of London, UK

This book applies Fuller and Unwin's increasingly influential concept of 'expansive and restrictive learning environments' to a range of settings engaged in education and training including, workplaces and educational institutions providing upper secondary, tertiary and higher education. "Expansive learning" features include the opportunity for learners to engage with multiple communities of practice; gain broad experience across the organisation; pursue knowledge-based as well as competence-based qualifications; learn off-the-job as well as on-the-job; have a recognised status as a learner; and have access to career progression and extended job roles.

Foucault and a Politics of Confession in Education

Edited by Andreas Fejes, Linköping University, Sweden and Katherine Nicoll, University of Stirling, UK

In liberal, democratic and capitalist societies today, we are increasingly invited to disclose our innermost thoughts to others. We are asked to turn our gaze inwards, scrutinizing ourselves, our behaviours and beliefs, while talking and writing about ourselves in these terms. This form of disclosure of the self resonates with older forms of church confession, and is now widely seen in practices of education in new ways in nurseries, schools, colleges, universities, workplaces and the wider policy arena.

Learning Through Supervised Practice in Student Affairs

Steven M. Janosik, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, USA, Diane L. Cooper, The University of Georgia, USA, Sue A. Saunders, The University of Connecticut, USA, Joan B. Hirt, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, USA and Roger B. Winston, The University of Georgia, USA

For future student affairs professionals and higher education administrators, the supervised practice experience is where theory learned in the classroom is put into practice. This important book assists students in applying leadership, advising, conflict management, and planning skills to their practice. It explores the theories that foster learning while exercises, reflection activities, and case studies illuminate the skill areas that students must develop to become successful practitioners. This revised edition includes expanded attention to diverse populations, a new chapter addressing campus politics and organizational culture, and a robust companion website.

Shaping Work-Life Culture in Higher Education

A Guide for Academic Leaders

Laura Koppes Bryan and Cheryl A. Wilson, University of Baltimore, USA

Shaping Work-Life Culture in Higher Education provides strategies to implement beneficial work-life policies in colleges and universities. As compared to the corporate sector, higher education institutions have been slow to implement policies aimed at fostering diversity and a healthy work-life balance, which can result in lower morale, job satisfaction, and productivity, and causes poor recruitment and retention. Based on extensive research, this book argues that an effective organizational culture is one in which managers and supervisors recognize that professional and personal lives are not mutually exclusive.

Student Development Theory in Higher Education

A Social Psychological Approach

Terrell L. Strayhorn, The Ohio State University, USA

Series: Core Concepts in Higher Education

This book promotes the understanding and application of social psychological theories to the higher education context, covering theories of ecological systems, sense of belonging, prejudice and discrimination, status attainment, social capital, family involvement, and socialization. Examples throughout from diverse student populations are designed to facilitate students' application to situations in their own contexts. This important textbook bridges research, theory, and practice to help practicing and aspiring higher education and student affairs professionals effectively work with college students in their own settings.

Teaching for Learning

101 intentionally-designed educational activities to put students on the path to success

Claire Howell Major, University of Alabama, USA and Todd Zakrajsek, University of North Carolina, USA

Few institutions adequately prepare doctoral students for teaching. Instead, future faculty are prepared for research, and most professors will have had no formal preparation or professional development for teaching. Teaching for Learning provides faculty with a comprehensive resource that highlights proven instructional approaches. Grounded in the academic knowledge base, this book is accessible, engaging, and practical.

The Confessing Society

Foucault, Confession and Practices of Lifelong Learning

Andreas Fejes, Linköping University, Sweden and Magnus Dahlstedt, Linköping University, Sweden

Lifelong learning has become an increasingly important theme in contemporary society through which each citizen is encouraged to become a constant learner. Such narratives are often seen as positive and all-inclusive. In this book, practices of lifelong learning will be considered as practices of confession. The authors, drawing on Foucault's later work on confession and governmentality, carefully analyse how confession operates within practices of lifelong learning as a way to shape activated and responsible citizens.

Constructing Narratives of Continuity and Change

A transdisciplinary approach to researching lives

Edited by Hazel L. Reid, Canterbury Christ Church University, UK and Linden West, University of Canterbury, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Education

In this volume, academics and researchers from across disciplines including education, psychology and health studies come together to discuss personal, political and professional narratives of struggle, resilience and hope. Contributors draw from a rich body of auto-biographical research examining the role of narrative and how it can be constructed, considering the roles of significant others, inspirational, educational and fictional characters, as well as myth and legend, to compose a life story. Reference is made to the evolving role of narrative in studies of educational process, in health and other forms of professional practice, and in psychotherapy.

Charter Schools, Race, and Urban Space

Where the Market Meets Grassroots Resistance

Kristen L. Buras, Georgia State University, USA

Charter schools have been promoted as an equitable and innovative solution to problems plaguing urban schools across the United States. In Charter Schools, Race, and Urban Space, Kristen Buras presents a very different account. Her case study of New Orleans—where veteran teachers were fired en masse and the nation's first all-charter school district is emerging—shows that such nationwide reform is less about the needs of racially oppressed communities and more about the production of an urban economy in which white entrepreneurs capitalize on black children and neighborhoods by building and managing charter schools.

Co-operation, Learning and Co-operative values

Contemporary Issues in Education

Edited by Tom Woodin, Institute of Education, UK

The rapidity of change in education has intensified in recent years. With the emergence of 'co-operative schools' increasing significantly and the new framework focusing heavily on co-operation, there is a direct challenge to traditional ways of thinking about education at both school and university level.

Co-operation, Learning and Co-operative values: Contemporary issues in education addresses the urgent need to describe, analyse and assess the development of co-operative education. The relationship between co-operation and education is a complex process and this book critically reflects on the tensions and obstacles facing this movement.

Curriculum, Personal Narrative and the Social Future

Ivor F. Goodson, University of Brighton, UK

Recent writing on education and social change, and a growing number of governmental initiatives across Western societies have proceeded in denial or ignorance of the personal missions of key personnel. This book stems from an underpinning belief that we have to understand the personal biographical if we are to understand the fate of social and political initiatives. Targets, tests and tables may win constituency support, but there are negligible effects at the point of delivery, enforced by the ignorance of personal missions and biographical mandates. This book locates its discussion at the point of culture clash between centralised dictats, and individual and collective life missions.

Demythologizing Educational Reforms

Responses to the Political and Corporate Takeover of Education

Edited by Arthur T. Costigan, Queens College, New York, USA and Leslee Grey, Queens College, New York, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Education Policy and Politics

There are dozens of myths surrounding educational reform today, maintaining the school's role in economic competitiveness, the deficiency of teachers, the benefits of increased testing, and the worthiness of privatization. In this volume, prominent educational writers tackle contemporary issues such as neoliberalism, suburban schooling, charter schools and parental involvement to uncover meaningful improvements in education which are better grounded in the social, economic, political and educational realities of today's society.

Narrowing the Achievement Gap for Native American Students

Paying the Educational Debt

Edited by Peggy McCardle, National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, USA and Virginia Berninger, University of Washington, Seattle, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Education Policy and Politics

There has been much talk and effort focused on the educational achievement gap between white versus black, Hispanic and American Indian students. While there has been some movement the gap has not appreciably narrowed, and it has narrowed the least for Native American students. This volume addresses this disparity by melding evidence-based instruction with culturally sensitive materials and approaches that can be applied to Native American students, as well as minority and indigenous groups in nations around the globe.

Series: Public Administration and Public Policy

Minorities, based on whatever criteria—linguistic, religious, ethnic, tribal, racial, or otherwise—share a distinctive contextual and social experience. Their representation in public service is important, especially when there have been public policies which have historically discriminated against them. Professional Uncertainty, Knowledge and Relationship in the Classroom

A psycho-social perspective

Joseph Mintz, Institute of Education, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Education

The extent to which teachers should make use of theoretical and expert knowledge as opposed to tacit experiential knowledge, and how these might be combined, is a perennial issue in discussions on pedagogy. This book addresses these debates through a creative development of the concept of productive uncertainty. Using case studies focusing on teachers working with children with autism, the book explores how the radical 20th century psychoanalyst Wilfred Bion's epistemological approach to uncertainty can be used to re-frame Donald Schön's concept of reflection in action, offering a new perspective on the practice of teachers and other caring professionals.

Social Context Reform

A Pedagogy of Equity and Opportunity

Edited by Paul Thomas, Furman University, USA, Brad J. Porfilio, Lewis University, USA, Julie Gorlewski, SUNY New Paltz, USA and Paul R. Carr, Lakehead University, Canada

Series: Routledge Research in Education Policy and Politics

This volume will refute No Excuses Reform ideology by proposing Social Context Reform, a term coined by Paul Thomas which argues for educational change within a larger plan to reform social inequity—such as access to health care, food, higher employment, better wages and job security. Evidence that school-only reform does not work is combined with a bold argument to expand the discourse and policy surrounding education reform to include how social, school, and classroom reform must work in unison to achieve goals of democracy, equity, and opportunity both in and through public education.

The Future of Liberal Education

Edited by Timothy W. Burns, Skidmore College, USA and Peter Augustine Lawler, Berry College, USA

Liberal Education, once the whole of American Higher Education, has been displaced by technical training and career-oriented majors. In this compelling volume, thirteen college educators describe in sparkling prose what liberal education is, its place in a liberal democracy, the very serious challenges it faces in the 21st century—even from some of its alleged friends—and why it is important to sustain and expand liberal education's place in American colleges and universities. Proponents and critics of liberal education alike will benefit from these insightful essays.

TEXTBOOK

Authentic Learning for the Digital Generation

Realising the potential of technology in the classroom

Angela McFarlane, King's College, London and University of Bath, UK

Authentic Learning for the Digital Generation is a vital examination of young people's use of personal devices, online creative communities and digital gaming. It calls into question the idea of the 'digital native' and shows that the majority of young users need help and support in order to benefit from the rich learning potential of personal, mobile and online technology use.

Written by a leading authority on the role of digital technologies in education, it offers clear strategies, a vision for what effects on learning we might reasonably expect when children are given access to different types of technology, and explores the challenges of managing these practices in the classroom.

Language, Culture, Literacy

Edited by Claudia Finkbeiner, Association for Language Awareness, UK and Agneta M.-L.Svalberg, University of Leicester, UK

This collection argues that being aware of and reflecting on language form and language use is a powerful tool, not only in language learning, but also in wider society. It adopts an interdisciplinary stance: one chapter argues the need for Language Awareness in business contexts, while another examines the role of critical cultural awareness and Language Awareness in education as 'bildung'. The book will be of interest to language teachers, language teacher educators, other language professionals, and generally to the language aware.

Case studies in global schooling

Niranjan Casinader, Monash University, AustraliaSeries: Routledge Research in International and Comparative Education

The notion of thinking skills as a key component of a 21st century school education is now firmly entrenched in educational policy and curriculum frameworks in many parts of the world. However, there has been relatively little questioning of the manner in which educational globalisation has facilitated this diffusion of thinking skills, curriculum and pedagogy in a cultural context. This book will help to redress such an imbalance in its critical assessment of the cross-cultural validity of transplanting thinking skills programs from one educational system to another on an international scale.

Research and Practice

Edited by Brendan Calandra, Georgia State University, USA and Peter J. Rich, Brigham Young University, USA

Digital video use is becoming prevalent in teacher education as a tool to help improve teaching and learning and for assessing effective teaching. Timely and comprehensive, this volume brings together top scholars from multiple disciplines to provide sound theoretical frameworks, research-based support, and clear practical advice on a variety of unique approaches to using digital video in teacher education programs. Part I deals with the use of video for teacher learning. Part II focuses on the role played by those other than teachers in the effective use of digital video in teacher education programs. Part III addresses how to administer video for teacher education.

Edited by Christine E. Sleeter, California State University, Monterey Bay, USA, La Vonne I. Neal, Northern Illinois University, USA and Kevin K. Kumashiro, University of San Francisco, USA

Diversifying the Teacher Workforce examines efforts to diversify the teaching force in the U.S. and narrow the demographic gap between who teaches and who populates classrooms. Based on work by the National Association for Multicultural Education, this collection brings together scholars to examine why the teaching force is predominantly White and discuss how to correct this imbalance. Drawing on historical and contemporary perspectives, the essays showcase data on ways this problem is being tackled at the pre-service level, and investigate how a

Toward Diverse, Democratic, and Sustainable Communities

Rebecca A. Martusewicz, Eastern Michigan University, USA, Jeff Edmundson, University of Oregon, USA and John Lupinacci, Washington State University, USA

Series: Sociocultural, Political, and Historical Studies in Education

EcoJustice Education offers a powerful model for cultural ecological analysis and a pedagogy of responsibility, providing teachers and teacher educators with the information and classroom practices they need to help develop citizens who are prepared to support and achieve diverse, democratic, and sustainable societies in an increasingly globalized world. Readers are asked to consider curricular strategies to bring these issues to life in their own classrooms across disciplines. The text is

Educating Muslims for a Multi-Faith World

a Practical Philosophy

Matthew L.N. Wilkinson, Cambridge Muslim College, UK.

Series: New Studies in Critical Realism and Education (Routledge Critical Realism)

Educating Muslims in the Multi-Faith World makes the case for a contemporary educational philosophy of Islam to help Muslims surmount the challenges of post-modernity and to transcend the hiatuses and obstacles that Muslim face in their interaction and relationships with non-Muslims and visa-versa.

It argues that the philosophy of critical realism in its original, dialectical and meta-Real moments so fittingly 'underlabours' (Bhaskar 1975) for the contemporary interpretation, clarification and conceptual deepening of Islamic doctrine, practice and education as to suggest and necessitate a distinctive branch of critical realist philosophy, specifically suited for this purpose.

Education and the State

International perspectives on a changing relationship

Edited by Carla Aubry, University of Zurich, Switzerland, Michael Geiss, University of Zurich, Switzerland, Veronika Magyar-Haas, University of Zurich, Switzerland and Jurgen Oelkers, University of Zurich, Switzerland

Series: Routledge Research in International and Comparative Education

Schools are often the centre of local communities that underpin local knowledge, and do not simply follow a general pedagogical or economic theory; they are culturally and historically specific and therefore far from being easily comparable units. This book argues that the history and culture of each country or region is critical to educational success, and the relationship between the education and the state must be validated, both internationally and historically in order to be of actual conceptual value.

Ethnographies of Science Education

Situated Practices of Science Learning for Social/Political Transformation

Edited by Carol B Brandt, Temple University, USA and Heidi Carlone, University of North Carolina, USA

Researchers who conduct ethnography in science education tend to have a deep commitment for transforming science to improve the lives of people in underserved communities. This edited volume explores how contemporary ethnographers in science education bring to light the local production of scientific knowledge and the ways it is implicated in larger social and political struggles. The authors argue that ethnography is not only a valid approach for the study of science education, but also they contend that it is essential to the development of more equitable practices for instruction and learning.

European Perspectives on Professional Development in Teacher Education

Edited by Ken Jones, Swansea Metropolitan University, UK and Jim O'Brien, University of Edinburgh, UK

This collection focuses on the ways in which policy relating to professional development and professional learning in teacher education is changing across Europe. A common theme running through the chapters is an understanding of the importance of professional development and professional learning of educators in the success and effective operation of the education systems of the countries concerned.

2nd Edition • NEW EDITION

Expanding Curriculum Theory

Dis/positions and Lines of Flight

Edited by William M. Reynolds, Humboldt State University and Julie A. Webber

Series: Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

Expanding Curriculum Theory, Second Edition carries through the major focus of the 2004 edition—to reflect on the influence of Deleuze and Guattari's concept of "lines of flight" and its application to curriculum theorizing. What is different is that the lines of flight have since shifted and produced expanded understandings for curriculum theory and for education in general. This edition reflects events that have contributed to this shift, in particular the logic of No Child Left Behind, and the continued explosion of social media and its effect on the collective understanding of how both "knowledge" and "education" work as forms of repression. New and exciting scholarship is presented.

Globalization of Education

An Introduction

Joel Spring, Queens College and the Graduate Center of the City University of New York, USA

Series: Sociocultural, Political, and Historical Studies in Education

Continuing Joel Spring's reportage and analysis of the intersection of global forces and education, this text offers a comprehensive overview and synthesis of current research, theories, and models related to the topic. Written in his signature clear, narrative style, Spring introduces the processes, institutions, and forces by which schooling has been globalized and examines the impact of these forces on schooling in local contexts. Significant conceptual frameworks are added to this Second Edition, specifically the "economization of education,"

"corporatization of education," and the "audit state." New and updated information on global education trends is included throughout all chapters.

International Education and Development

A narrative approach

David Stephens, University of Brighton, UK

This book draws on international contexts to provide an innovative and comprehensive critique of efforts to improve schooling in the global South. It provides a critical examination of the macro 'stories' of development and international education over the past fifty years, paying particular attention to Western discourses, tensions between Western and indigenous models of development, and the emergence of new forms of educational provision and methods of learning; it examines the role narrative can play, looking at the stories of individual decision makers and the opportunities and challenges of using these for research, teaching and policy-making purposes.

Interrogating Critical Pedagogy

The Voices of Educators of Color in the Movement.

Edited by Pierre Wilbert Orelus, New Mexico State University, USA and Rochelle Brock, Indiana University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Education

Critical pedagogy is often condemned as being mostly dominated by privileged white males, bringing issues of race and gender to the forefront. This volume provides insight on how critical pedagogy can be helpful to scholars and teachers alike in their analysis of racial, gender, linguistic and political problems. It features a wide range of respected scholars who examine the way and the degree to which critical pedagogy can be used to improve education for students of color, women and other marginalized groups.

Landscapes of Specific Literacies in Contemporary Society

Exploring a social model of literacy

Edited by Vicky Duckworth, Edge Hill University, UK and Gordon Ade-Ojo, University of Greenwich, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Education

The notion of what constitutes 'literacy' has shifted over time, from the de-coding of words, cognitive skills, to multiple literacies in the 21st century. This volume makes a timely contribution to our understanding of literacy as a multi-faceted, complexly situated activity. The contributing authors represent a wide variety of theoretical and research perspectives to cover literacy in various forms, including transformative literacy, academic literacies and digital literacy. Each chapter provides the reader with a fresh perspective into a different site for literate behaviour, approaches, design and relationships.

Learning in Landscapes of Practice

Boundaries, identity, and knowledgeability in practice-based learning
 Edited by Etienne Wenger-Trayner, Independent Practitioner, Mark Fenton-O'Creevy, The Open University, UK, Steve Hutchison, The Open University, UK, Chris Kubiak, The Open University, UK and Beverly Wenger-Trayner, Learning Theorist and Consultant

If the body of knowledge of a profession is a living landscape of practice, then our personal experience of learning can be thought of as a journey through this landscape. Within Learning in Landscapes of Practice, this metaphor is further developed in order to start an important conversation about the nature of practice knowledge, identity and the experience of practitioners and their learning. In doing so, this book is a pioneering and timely exploration of the future of professional development and higher education.

Lesson Study

Research and practice

Edited by Peter Dudley, University of Leicester, UK

This book will introduce readers to Lesson Study (LS) as it has developed in the UK over ten years, and make the historical connections with LS as it developed in Japan, the US and Europe. It will explain to readers how to conduct LS in schools and in other educational institutions such as higher education settings or early years settings. Examples will be provided of compelling, externally evaluated impact outcomes for primary learners and teacher learners, and the book will offer vivid exemplars of LS in action in these settings across age ranges and curricular contexts.

Liberty and Education

A civic republican approach

Geoffrey Hinchliffe, University of East Anglia, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Education

This book takes the thinking of Quentin Skinner, Phillip Pettit and J.G.A. Pocock on republican liberty and explores the way in which this can be used to illuminate educational practice. It argues that republican liberty is distinct from both negative and positive liberty and its emphasis on liberty as non-dependency gives the concept of liberty a particularly critical role in contemporary society. The book formulates and expounds the idea that an empire of liberty requires the existence of what are termed 'liberty-bearing agents' and shows how education – with a particular emphasis on knowledge – is needed to foster the human powers so that persons can become liberty-bearing.

Negotiating Privilege and Identity in Educational Contexts

Adam Howard, Colby College, USA, Brianne Wheeler, Colby College, USA and Aimee Polimeno, Colby College, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Education

Offering an intimate and comprehensive view of affluent adolescents' inner lives and understandings, Negotiating Privilege and Identity in Educational Contexts explores these qualities and provides an important alternative perspective on privilege and how privilege works. The case studies in this volume explore different settings and lived experiences of eight privileged adolescents who, influenced by various sources, actively construct and cultivate their own privilege. Their stories address a wide range of issues relevant to the study of adolescence and the various social class factors that mediate adolescents' educational experiences and identities.

Pedagogy, Image Practices, and Contested Corporealities

Edited by Sarah Brophy and Janice Hladki

This book examines the representation of health and bodies in visual culture. It asks how visual culture provokes new ways of imagining trauma and illness, the representation of disenfranchised subjects and the mediation of bodies by technologies. The scholarship contained in this collection engages the questions of how individuals and groups visually represent human life and the social sphere and how visual culture shapes everyday life, and offers original and timely contributions to a field crucial to our understanding of the modern world.

Pierre Bourdieu and Physical Culture

Edited by Iisahunter, University of Queensland, Australia, Wayne Smith, University of Auckland, New Zealand and Elke Emerald, Griffith University, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Sport, Culture and Society

This is the first book to focus on the significance of Bourdieu's work for, and in, physical culture. Bringing together the work of leading and emerging international researchers, it introduces the core concepts in Bourdieu's thought and work, and presents a series of fascinating case studies of the application of his theory to physical culture studies. By providing an in-depth and multi-layered example of how theory can be used across the many and varied components of sport, leisure, physical education and human movement, this book should help all serious students and researchers in physical culture to better understand the importance of social theory in their work.

Practicing Core Reflection

Activities and Lessons for Teaching and Learning from Within

Frits G. Evelein, Utrecht University, The Netherlands and Fred A. J. Korthagen, Utrecht University, The Netherlands

Practicing Core Reflection features 78 concrete activities and exercises based on research. These can be used individually and in groups to support 'teaching and learning from within.' Core Reflection is an approach focused on people's personal strengths and on using practical strategies to overcome obstacles to the enactment of these strengths. It has been used in many contexts all over the world and has shown great promise in helping to re-chart the course for education and to re-think its purpose in global and democratic societies. Pragmatism, Post-modernism, and Complexity Theory

The "Fascinating Imaginative Realm" of William E. Doll, Jr.

Edited by Donna Treuit

Series: Studies in Curriculum Theory Series

The first collection of the key works of the major curriculum studies scholar William E. Doll, Jr., this volume provides an overview of his scholarship over his fifty-year career and documents the theoretical and practical contribution he has made to the field. The complicated intellectual trajectory through pragmatism, postmodernism and complexity theory not only testifies to Doll's individual lifetime works but is also intimately related to the landscape of education to which he has made an important contribution.

Queer Inclusion in Teacher Education

Bridging Theory, Research, and Practice

Olivia J. Murray, Portland State University, USA

Exploring the challenges and promises of building queer inclusive pedagogy and curriculum into teacher education, this book weaves together theory, research findings, and practical "how-to" strategies and materials. It fills an important gap by offering a clear roadmap and resources for influencing the knowledge, beliefs, and actions of faculty working with pre-service teachers. Readers will feel empowered with ideas for faculty development they can implement in their own teacher education programs. Science Teaching

The Contribution of History and Philosophy of Science, 20th Anniversary Revised and Expanded Edition

Michael R. Matthews, University of New South Wales, Australia

Science Teaching explains how history and philosophy of science contributes to the resolution of persistent theoretical, curricular, and pedagogical issues in science education. It shows why it is essential for science teachers to know and appreciate the history and philosophy of the subject they teach and how this knowledge can enrich science instruction and enthuse students in the subject. The book reveals the foundations of scientific knowledge and its connection to philosophy, metaphysics, mathematics, and broader social influences. Fully updated and expanded, the Twentieth Anniversary Edition of this classic text provides a solid foundation for teaching and learning in the field.

The Changing Landscape of International Schooling

Implications for theory and practice

Tristan Bunnell, Copenhagen International School, Denmark

Series: Routledge Research in International and Comparative Education

The number of English-medium international schools that deliver their curriculum wholly or partly in the English language reportedly reached 6,000 in January 2012. It is anticipated this number will rise to over 11,000 schools by 2022, employing over 500,000 English-speaking teachers. In this book, Tristan Bunnell explores the changing landscape of international schooling and discusses the implications of these changes, both in terms of theoretically conceptualizing the scale, nature and purpose of the field, and in terms of practically serving and administering the growing industry that international education is becoming.

Nicola Rollock, Institute of Education, University of London, UK, David Gillborn, Institute of Education, University of London, UK, Carol Vincent, Institute of Education, University of London, UK and Stephen J. Ball, Institute of Education, University of London, UK

Drawing on rich qualitative data, these internationally renowned authors reveal how black Caribbean middle-class parents attempt to navigate their children successfully through the school system, and defend them against low expectations and other manifestations of racism and discrimination. The book poses wider questions about the experiences of social mobility in the UK, and the intersection of race and class in forming the identity of the parents and their children.

The Power of Teacher Leaders

Their Roles, Influence, and Impact

Edited by Nathan Bond, Texas State University, USA

Co-published with Kappa Delta Pi, The Power of Teacher Leaders provides a comprehensive resource for understanding the ways that teacher leaders foster positive change in their schools.

Written by leading educational researchers, each chapter describes a different way that teachers are leading. Topics covered include the history of teacher leadership, becoming a teacher leader, and the effects of teacher leadership on student achievement. A cohesive edited collection, this book demonstrates how teacher leaders play an increasingly active role in improving student learning, teacher learning, and school climate.

Thomas Jefferson's Philosophy of Education

A utopian dream

M. Andrew Holowchak, Rider University, USA

Series: New Directions in the Philosophy of Education

This book offers a critical articulation of the philosophy behind Jefferson's thoughts on education. Divided into three parts, chapters include an analysis of his views on elementary and higher education, an investigation of education for both the moral-sense and rational faculty, and an examination of education as lifelong learning. Jefferson's educational rationale was economic, political and philosophical, and his systemic approach to education conveys a systemic, economic approach to living, with strong affinities to Stoicism.

Understanding the Constructions of Identities by Young New Europeans

Kaleidoscopic selves

Alistair Ross, London Metropolitan University, UK

In this book, Ross considers how young people in the 'new' European states construct their identities. Drawing on an original and unique study of a thousand young people aged between twelve and nineteen from fifteen European countries, the book reflects a consistent theme of generational differences in the ways that they discuss their local, regional, national and sometimes European and global identities. The way in which they construct their identities is described as kaleidoscopic: there is a liquidity to the process, yet it shows a pattern and possesses certain regularities. The book illustrates the complexity and depth of young people's political conceptions and socialisation.

Understanding the School Curriculum

Theory, politics and principles

Alex Moore

At a time of numerous policy initiatives and rapid social change, there is a need for curriculum designers and theorists to question the nature and function of school curricula and the purposes of formal public education. Comparing the English National Curriculum with curriculum developments around the globe, Alex Moore draws on a range of educational, philosophical and sociological theories to address the question 'What is a curriculum for?'

Understanding the School Curriculum will support all students following undergraduate and Masters courses in curriculum, public policy and education-related subjects, as well as training and practicing teachers.

Decision-Making in Educational Leadership

Principles, Policies, and Practices

Edited by Stephanie Chitpin, University of Ottawa, Canada and Colin W. Evers, University of New South Wales, Australia. Showcasing exemplary practices of school and district administrators, this research-based volume covers issues concerning the role of emotion, ethical and legal ramifications, the use of data, and complexity in decision-making. Chapter authors explore what school leaders actually know about educational problems, how they draw upon and revise theories of action for responding to problems, and which theories are tenable in educational decision-making. This important resource provides a broad and international perspective on effective models and methods of educational decision-making and shares valuable knowledge about how theory can be translated into practice in a variety of school settings.

Education Reform and the Concept of Good Teaching

Derek Gottlieb, University of Basel, Switzerland

Series: Routledge International Studies in the Philosophy of Education

Initiatives such as Race to the Top introduce new statistics and accountability systems to gauge what constitutes "good" teaching, both from an administrative standpoint and the perspective of teacher training programs. Drawing on the philosophical strategies of Ludwig Wittgenstein to break down the guiding assumptions of Race to the Top, this volume explores both the positive and the negative aspects of these policies. It then proposes a different view of teaching and learning which considers how to effectively address the problems Race to the Top seeks to confront.

TEXTBOOK

Financing Public Schools

Theory, Policy, and Practice

Edited by Kern Alexander, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, USA, Richard G. Salmon, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, USA and F. King Alexander, Louisiana State University, USA

This comprehensive textbook explores financing of public elementary and secondary education and provides tools for leaders to apply these concepts. It covers the central issues of finance that educational administrators need to know, including teacher salaries and pensions, budgeting for instructional programs, school transportation, and risk management. Diving deeper than other school finance books, the authors explore the political framework within which schools function, discuss the privatization of education, offer perspectives regarding education as an investment in human capital, and expertly explain complex financial and economic issues.

Leading and Managing Indigenous Education in the Postcolonial World

Zane Ma Rhea, Monash University, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in International and Comparative Education

This book brings together the academic fields of educational leadership, strategic change management, and indigenous education in order to provide an analysis of the provision of education services to indigenous people. Drawing on a range of theorists internationally, the book aims to establish the basis for an indigenous rights approach to the state provision of education to indigenous peoples, that includes recognition of indigenous economic, human, linguistic and cultural rights, within a complex global, postcolonial education system.

Building Communities of Engaged Readers

Reading for pleasure

Teresa Cremin, The Open University, UK, Marilyn Mottram, Fiona M Collins, Sacha Powell, Canterbury Christchurch University, UK and Kimberly Safford, The Open University, UK

Reading for pleasure urgently requires a higher profile to raise attainment and increase children's engagement as self-motivated and socially interactive readers. Building Communities of Engaged Readers highlights the concept of 'Reading Teachers' who are not only knowledgeable about texts for children, but are aware of their own reading identities and prepared to share their enthusiasm and understanding of what being a reader means.

Written by experts in the literacy field and illustrated throughout with examples from the project schools, it is essential reading for all those concerned with improving young people's enjoyment of and attainment in reading.

Making Space for People

Edited by Bernard Spolsky, Bar-Ilan University, Israel, Ofra Inbar-Lourie, Tel Aviv University, Israel and Michal Tannenbaum, Tel Aviv University, Israel

Addressing a wide range of issues in applied linguistics, sociolinguistics, and multilingualism, this volume focuses on language users, the 'people.' Making creative connections between existing scholarship in language policy and contemporary theory and research in other social sciences, authors from around the world offer new critical perspectives for analyzing language phenomena and language theories, suggesting new meeting points among language users and language policy makers, norms, and traditions in diverse contexts. Identifying and expanding on previously neglected aspects of language studies, the book is inspired by the work of Elana Shohamy.

Creating Critical Classrooms

Reading and Writing with an Edge

Mitzi Lewison, Indiana University-Bloomington, USA, Christine Leland, Indiana University-Purdue University, USA and Jerome C. Harste, Indiana University-Bloomington (Emeritus), USA

This popular text articulates a powerful theory of critical literacy—in all its complexity. Critical literacy practices encourage students to use language to question the everyday world, interrogate the relationship between language and power, analyze popular culture and media, understand how power relationships are socially constructed, and consider actions that can be taken to promote social justice. By providing both a model for critical literacy instruction and many examples of how critical practices can be enacted in daily school life in elementary and middle school classrooms, Creating Critical Classrooms meets a huge need for a practical, theoretically based text on this topic.

Critical Literacies and Young Learners

Connecting Classroom Practice to the Common Core

Edited by Ken Winograd, Oregon State University, USA

Many pre-service and beginning early childhood teachers question if critical literacy is do-able with young children, particularly in the current top-down educational climate. Critical Literacies and Young Learners shows how it is possible, even in the context of the mandates and pressures so many teachers experience, and honors the sophisticated and complex social theorists that young children are. Featuring a mix of groundbreaking work by iconic researchers and teachers and original contributions by emerging scholars and educators in the field, the text illustrates a range of approaches to doing critical literacy with young children and, at the same time, addresses the Common Core Standards.

Developing Children's Critical Thinking Through Picturebooks

A guide for primary and early years students and teachers

Mary Roche, St Patrick's College, Thurles, Ireland

This accessible text will show students and class teachers how they can enable their pupils to become critical thinkers through the medium of picturebooks. By introducing children to the notion of making-meaning together through thinking and discussion, Roche focuses on carefully chosen picturebooks as a stimulus for discussion, and shows how they can constitute an accessible, multimodal resource for adding to literacy skills, while at the same time developing in pupils a far wider range of literacy understanding.

Developing Writing Teachers

Practical Ways for Teacher-Writers to Transform their Classroom Practice

Terry Locke, The University of Waikato, New Zealand

The premise of Developing Writing Teachers is this: When teachers of writing identify as writers, it adds a special dimension to their writing pedagogy. The dual focus—on teachers as writers and the teaching of writing—engages readers in developing the disposition to write. Practical and accessible and drawing on a range of relevant research and theory, this is an ideal text for pre-service and in-service courses that cover the teaching of writing.

English L2 Reading

Getting to the Bottom

Barbara M. Birch, California State University - Fresno, USA
Series: ESL & Applied Linguistics Professional Series

English L2 Reading, Third Edition offers teachers research-based insights into bottom-up skills in reading English as a second language and a solid foundation on which to build reading instruction. Core linguistic and psycholinguistic concepts are presented within the context of their application to teaching. The goal is to balance or supplement (not replace) top-down approaches and methodologies with effective low-level options for teaching English reading. A range of pedagogical features engage readers in moving easily from linguistic details and psycholinguistic data and theory to practical explanations and suggestions for teaching.

The Achievement Gap in Reading

Complex Causes, Persistent Issues, Possible Solutions

Edited by Rosalind Horowitz, The University of Texas—San Antonio, USA and S. Jay Samuels, The University of Minnesota—Twin Cities, USA

Educators today are trying to help all children become proficient in reading in order to close academic achievement gaps. In this volume prominent scholars, experts in their respective fields and highly skilled in the research they conduct, address educational and reading research with exceptional talent from varied perspectives and share what it will take to close the achievement gap – with attention to reading. Each brings a valuable theoretical framework and an in-depth analytical frame to their interpretation of data. This book demonstrates that achievement gaps in reading are complex and multiple

Raising the bar

Christine Rubie-Davies, University of Auckland, New Zealand

Becoming a High Expectation Teacher explores three key areas in which what high expectation teachers do differs substantially from what other teachers do: the way they group students for learning, the way they create a caring classroom community, and the way in which they use goal-setting to motivate students, to promote student autonomy and to promote mastery learning.

Areas covered include:-

Formation of teacher expectations Teacher personality and expectation Ability grouping and goal setting Enhancing class climate Sustaining high expectations for students

Beyond the Classroom

Collaborating with Colleagues and Parents to Build Core Literacy

Edited by Nanci Werner-Burke, Mansfield University, USA

Go beyond the walls of your classroom to build literacy. In this book, you'll discover how you can better meet the rigorous goals of the Common Core by opening new lines of communication with colleagues, parents, and students. Learn how to help parents understand what the Common Core is really asking and how they can partner with you to improve their children's skills at home. Find out how to work with colleagues to create interdisciplinary units and cover the standards more effectively. By using these multiple aspects of building literacy, you will be better able to align your work, adjust for your students, and achieve your teaching goals.

Asymmetric Crisis in Europe and Possible Futures

Critical Political Economy and Post-Keynesian Perspectives

Edited by Johannes Jäger and Elisabeth Springler

This volume moves beyond the current literature by discussing the European crisis in terms of asymmetric interaction of national economies and uneven development. It goes beyond common approaches which analyse the crisis by focusing either on single countries or on the EU as a single entity and systematically integrates the analysis of economic or "technical" solutions to the crisis within a broader framework of global political economy.

Biopolitics, Security, International Relations

Global Power over Life

Francois Debrix, Virginia Tech University, USA

Series: Critical Issues in Global Politics

This concise and accessible new text offers original and insightful analysis into the concept of biopolitics. It surveys how biopolitical analysis is applicable to global life, global politics, and global security and the conceptual, practical, and ethical limits of various biopolitical arguments are also exposed. By exposing theories and their limits (readers are invited not so much to accept the presented theoretical narratives at face value, but rather to question biopolitical tenets and principles of thought and practice at the very same time that they are able to appreciate their theoretical richness, complexity, and diversity.

Breaking Al-Qaeda

Psychological and Operational Techniques, Second Edition

Elena Mastors, American Military University

Despite the killing of Osama bin Laden, the Al-Qaeda network he inspired is still alive and well – in some places, thriving. This book focuses on the background and history of Al-Qaeda, developments in recent years, and how and where Al Qaeda is spreading. It examines the current state of the terrorist network and what the organization and individual cells are doing to recruit, plan, and carry out attacks against the West. The book also investigates intelligence and counterterror methods to garner information on Al Qaeda and steps that are being taken to counter the continuing threat.

Contemporary Spanish Foreign Policy

Edited by David Garcia, Universidad Complutense de Madrid and Ramon Pacheco Pardo

Series: Routledge Advances in European Politics

This book examines the evolution of Spanish foreign policy since 1975, through five different presidencies, during its transformation from a dictatorial political system and backward economy to a modern European state and the present financial crisis. It explains how domestic developments and external factors have combined to shape Spain's international relations, assessing the impact of EU membership and also provides an example of how middle powers can pursue their foreign policy objectives in the international system.

Cosmopolitanism and the Legacies of Dissent

Edited by Tamara Caraus and Camil Alexandru Parvu

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

This book is a comparative, historical analysis of dissident thought and practice for contemporary debates on cosmopolitanism. Divided into two parts, the editors and contributors explore the contribution of 'paradigmatic' dissidents like Gandhi, Martin Luther King, Havel, Sakharov, Mandela, Liu Xiaobo, Aung San Suu Kyi towards a post-universalist cosmopolitan theory. Part Two examines the inherent cosmopolitanism of the seemingly 'peripheral' dissent of contemporary forms of protests, resistance, direct action like NO TAV movement and Occupy Wall Street.

Democracy, Participation and Contestation

Civil society, governance and the future of liberal democracy

Edited by Emmanuelle Avril, Université Sorbonne Nouvelle, France and Johann Neem, Western Washington University, USA

Series: Democratization Studies

Using new areas of research, this book argues that the ideals and the practices of Anglo-American democracy can be best understood by studying diverse forms of participation. The authors analyze political parties, social movements, social media, cultural diversity, identity politics, public-private actors and social cohesion to illustrate how the structure and context of popular participation play a significant role in whether, and when, citizens' efforts have any meaningful impact on those who exercise political power. The authors take crucial steps towards understanding how a vigorous public sphere and popular sovereignty can be made to work in today's global environment.

Doing Politics

Jacqui Briggs

Series: Doing... Series

Doing Politics is a detailed guide to both the study and the activity of politics which explores why we study politics, what is involved in a politics degree, and the skills and mindset that are needed to tackle the subject.

Key questions are answered, including:

Just what is politics and how does it affect us? Why does politics, and politicians, get a bad press? How do we study non-traditional forms of politics?

Assuming no prior knowledge, this lively and engaging guide is the perfect introduction to what is actually involved in the academic study of politics.

Exercising Human Rights

Gender, Agency and Practice

Robin Redhead, Kingston University, UK

Exercising Human Rights investigates why human rights are not universally empowering and why this damages people attempting to exercise rights. It takes a new approach in looking at humans as the subject of human rights rather than the object and exposes the gendered and ethnocentric aspects of violence and human subjectivity in the context of human rights. This book is significant for anyone with an interest in human rights campaigns and in the study of political images.

Face Politics

Jenny Edkins, University of Aberystwyth, UK

Series: Interventions

For Deleuze and Guattari the alternative to making faces is a dismantling of the face, which is also a politics. But what would dismantling the face entail, in practical terms? What sort of a politics is it? Is it already taking place? Is it a politics that is to be desired, a better politics, a 'progressive' politics? Or does the persistent use of images of the face in protests such as those in Manhattan, or elsewhere, before and after, with its insistence on the politics of personhood that the face embodies, tell us something different?

Facilitating Deep Learning

Pathways to Success for University and College Teachers

Julian Hermida, Algoma University, Saulte Ste. Marie, Ontario, Canada

This book provides the theoretical and pedagogical tools needed to understand the notion of deep learning and design and implement courses that encourage students to take a deep approach to learning. It covers how to design engaging and innovative teaching and learning activities that encourage students to use higher-order cognitive skills to construct knowledge and negotiate meaning. The book begins with an examination of the big picture: the institutional constraints that hinder a culture of deep learning. From there, it will deconstruct the concept of deep learning, and it will examine every element of the deep learning process.

Framing War

Public Opinion and Decision-Making in Comparative Perspective

Francesco Olmastroni, University of Siena, Italy

Series: Routledge Studies in Global Information, Politics and Society

Framing War uses the recent war on Iraq as a case study, focusing on the elite and media framing of this event in order to examine the interaction between the political elite and the mass public in three Western democracies—France, Italy, and the US—during the early and on-going stages of the military crisis. The book analyzes whether and, potentially, the extent to which decision-makers tracked and responded to public opinion in presenting their foreign policy choices.

From Pearl Harbour to the Present

John Callaghan, University of Wolverhampton, UK, Brendon O'Connor, University of Sydney, Australia, and Mark Phythian, University of Leicester, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in US Foreign Policy

The current Bush administration has frequently been labelled one of the most ideologically driven administrations in recent American history. Analysing the politics of US foreign policy, focusing on the ways it is projected, explained, and sustained from one administration to another, John Callaghan and Brendon O'Connor examine relevant documentary archives and secondary literature relating to specific administrations since the Second World War.

India-Brazil-South Africa Dialogue Forum (IBSA)

The Rise of the Global South

Oliver Stuenkel

The establishment of the IBSA as one of the principal platforms of South-South cooperation is one of the most notable developments in international politics during the first decade of the twenty-first century. While the concept is now frequently referred to in discussions about the Global South, there has not yet been a comprehensive and scholarly analysis of the history of the IBSA grouping and its impact on global order.

Offering the first full-length and detailed treatment of the IBSA, this work will be of great interest to students and scholars of International organizations, international relations and the global south.

Justice and Home Affairs Agencies in the European Union

Edited by Christian Kaunert, University of Dundee, UK, Sarah Leonard, University of Dundee, UK and John Occhipinti, Canisius College, USA

This book examines the role of agencies and agency-like bodies in the EU's Area of Freedom, Security and Justice (AFSJ). The agencies now operating in the EU's Area of Freedom, Security and Justice (AFSJ) are remarkable in the burgeoning scope of their activities, as well as their gradually increasing autonomy vis-à-vis the EU member states and the institutions that brought them to life.

Latin American Democracy

Emerging Reality or Endangered Species?

Edited by Richard L. Millet, Jennifer S. Holmes, University of Texas at Dallas, USA and Orlando J. Pérez, Central Michigan University, USA

The second edition of Latin American Democracy maintains the mix of practitioners and academic that composed the first edition. Contributors from both North and Latin America explore and assess the state of democratic consolidation in Latin America by focusing on the specific issues and challenges confronting democratic governance in the region. New chapters have been added on the process of decentralization and local government development; the factors affecting the environment and democratic governance in Latin America; and the challenges and opportunities of the increased Chinese presence in the region.

Living Legends and Full Agency

Implications of Repealing the Combat Exclusion Policy

G.L.A. Harris, Portland State University, Oregon, USA

Series: Public Administration and Public Policy

This book examines the role of women in the military and the overwhelming evidence to date that warrants repealing the combat exclusion policy of women into the military. It explores 1) How can their success serve as justification for a full repeal? 2) What is the potential impact of the repeal? 3) How will it affect the way that women and men relate to one another? 4) How can it set women on the course to full agency and representation as citizens in American society? The book includes exciting interviews with pioneering former military women giving candid views on their career paths and views about the policy.

Longue Durée of the Far-Right

An International Historical Sociology

Edited by Richard Saull, Queen Mary, University of London, UK, Alexander Anievas, University of Cambridge, UK, Neil Davidson, University of Glasgow, UK, and Adam Fabry, Brunel University, UK.

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

This volume brings together a number of UK and non-UK-based scholars to offer an original perspective on the analysis of far-right movements and politics. The principal entry point of this volume's analysis is to challenge the existing literatures on the far-right through offering a very different methodological and theoretical perspective in examining the far-right. Thus, the approach offered in this volume is that of 'longue durée' analysis whereby the far-right is understood as a product of deeper and longer-term structures of socio-economic and political development.

Making Law and Courts Research Relevant

The Normative Implications of Empirical Research

Edited by Brandon Bartels, George Washington University, USA and Chris W. Bonneau, University of Pittsburgh, USA

Series: Law, Courts and Politics

Brandon Bartels and Chris Bonneau argue that being attuned to the normative implications of one's work enhances the quality of empirical work, not to mention makes it substantially more interesting to both academics and non-academic practitioners. Their book's mission is to examine how the normative implications of empirical work in law and courts can be more visible and relevant to audiences beyond academia. Written by scholars of political science, law, and sociology, the chapters in the volume offer ideas on a methodology for communicating normative implications in a balanced, nuanced, and modest manner.

Maternal Transition

A North-South Politics of Pregnancy and Childbirth

Candace Johnson, University of Guelph, Canada

Series: Routledge Research in Gender and Politics

What are the political dimensions that are revealed in women's preferences for health care during pregnancy and childbirth? The answers to this question vary from one community to the next, and often from woman to the next, although the trends in the Global North and South are strikingly different. Employing three conceptual frames; medicalization, the public-private distinction, and intersectionality, Candace Johnson examines these differences through the narratives of women in Canada, the United States, Cuba, and Honduras.

Medieval Foundations of International Relations

Edited by William Bain

Series: Routledge Research in International Relations Theory

Recent years have seen a flourishing of work on the history of international political thought, but the bulk of this has focused on the early modern and modern periods, leaving continuities with the medieval world largely ignored. The book offers a chance to correct this misconception of the evolution of Western international thought, highlighting that the history of international thought should be regarded as an important dimension of thinking about the international and one that should not be consigned to history departments/

Michael A. Weinstein

Action, Contemplation, Vitalism

Edited by Robert L. Oprisko and Diane Rubenstein, Cornell University, USA.

Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

This book explores the oeuvre of Michael Weinstein, one of the greatest political philosophers in contemporary American and continental thought. The essays are divided between inspirational pieces that illuminate the links between Weinstein and authors within the canon of political theory and reflective pieces that use Weinstein's substantial writings to push the literature forward. The collection as a whole is intended not only to argue for a reengagement with both existential-phenomenology and vitalism, but also to suggest that Weinstein belongs in the canon of poststructural political thought.

Monuments, Memory, Contestation

Muslim Political Discourse in Postcolonial India

Hilal Ahmed

This book seeks to establish a link between two different issues — the process by which historic buildings become monuments (or the process of 'monumentalisation') and gradual transformation of these historic/legal entities into political objects. Based on this vantage point, the work makes sense of the postcolonial Muslim political discourse.

Motherhood and War

Gender, Agency and Political Violence

Linda Åhäll, University of Warwick, UK.

Series: Popular Culture and World Politics

By using a poststructuralist feminist perspective and by analysing empirical cases from a Western 'war on terror' cultural context, Åhäll seeks to demonstrate that motherhood is not simply a discourse denying women agency in political violence, but also central as to how agency in political violence is enabled. Motherhood and maternalism is 'everywhere' in war stories and, consequently, instrumental in order to understand how representations of female agency in political violence are gendered. This work will be of interest to students and scholars in areas such as gender, political violence and international relations.

Narratives and Imaginings of Citizenship in Latin America

Edited by Cristina Rojas, Carleton University, Canada and Judy Metzler, Carleton University, Canada

This book looks at transformations in citizenship in Latin America from different disciplinary perspectives including anthropology, history, urban planning, geography and political studies. It shows how citizenship is intertwined with understandings of natural spaces and environments, how indigenous politics are 'de-colonizing' western liberal notions of citizenship, and how citizenship is being transformed through local level politics and projects for development.

Nations and Democracy

Amanda Machin, University of Westminster, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Democratic Theory

Using the ideas of Wittgenstein and Lacan, Amanda Machin expertly explains that the overlapping and conflicting language games of the nation produce it as an object of desire in an uncertain world. The nation is not a pre-political thing but a matter of persistent political contestation and coalition. Providing an urgent riposte to dominant accounts, this thought provoking and highly original account demands a re-politicisation of the nation. This book will appeal to those engaged in theory and empirical research on nations and nationalism and the question of their link to democracy in a changing world, as well as those interested in psychoanalysis and Wittgenstein.

On Schmitt and Space

Claudio Minca, Royal Holloway University of London, UK and Rory Rowan, Royal Holloway, UK

Series: Interventions

This book represents the first comprehensive study of the influential German legal and political thinker Carl Schmitt's spatial thought, offering the first systematic examination from a Geographic perspective of one of the most important political thinkers of the twentieth century. It charts the development of Schmitt's spatial thinking from his early work on secularization and the emergence of the modern European state to his post war analysis of the spatial basis of global order and international law, whilst situating his thought in relation to his changing biographical and intellectual context, controversial involvement in Weimar politics and disastrous support for the Nazi regime.

Party Organization and Electoral Volatility in Central and Eastern Europe

Enhancing Voters' Loyalty

Sergiu Gherghina, Goethe University Frankfurt, Germany.

Series: Routledge Research in Comparative Politics

The Central and Eastern European electoral environment is based on weak societal roots of parties, making voter alignment fluid, which has reduced continuity of governing parties. This book elucidates a critical framework to explain voter choice in new democracies. Drawing on an original dataset including more than 5,000 MPs and 60,000 candidates, the author analyses the impact of intra-party decision-making, membership rates, and re-nomination of incumbent MPs to show how electoral volatility is driven, and how party organization can increase stability through identification with voters.

Perspectives on the Nuba Mountains Crises

Edited by Samuel Totten, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, USA. and Amanda Grzyb, University of Western Ontario, Canada

This much-needed analysis focuses on the two different but very similar campaigns of state-sponsored violence that have engulfed the people of the Nuba Mountains in Sudan, first between late 1989 and the mid 1990s and more recently in the 2010s. The book examines the two crises in detail and provides a comparative analysis of the conditions and government tactics in both cases. The authors address issues of humanitarian aid, the relatively new mandate of Responsibility to Protect, and the various factors influencing international attention to the current Nuba Mountains crisis.

Politics of Religion and Nationalism

Federalism, Consociationalism and Secessionism

Edited by Ferran Requejo, Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona, Spain and Klaus-Jürgen Nagel, Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Spain

Series: Routledge Research in Comparative Politics

In some instances, religion can be the main marker of the minority nation, whereas in others, religious differences influence the identity of a nation. Through analysis of case studies such as India, Russia, Israel, Canada, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Northern Ireland, Sri Lanka and the Basque Country, this book sheds light on the relationship between religion and nationalism. The case studies illustrate the variety of forms of interaction between religious and nationalist interests. Expert contributors examine secular nationalism in the face of existing religious differences, secessionism and the link to religious differences, and politics in which religious divisions are decreasing.

Power-Sharing and Political Stability in Deeply Divided Societies

Allison McCulloch, Brandon University, Canada.

Series: Security and Governance

This book examines the effect of power-sharing forms of governance in bringing about political stability amid deep divisions. It is the first major comparison of two power-sharing designs – consociationalism and centripetalism – and it assesses a number of cases central to the debate, including Nigeria, Sri Lanka, Fiji, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi and Northern Ireland.

Drawing on information from a variety of sources, such as political party manifestoes and websites, media coverage, think tank reports, and election results, the author reaches significant conclusions about power-sharing as an invaluable conflict-management device.

Series: Routledge Studies in US Foreign Policy

Tracing U.S. shifts from crusading to pragmatic tendencies since its rise as a great power, Widmaier counters the rationalist frameworks which cast crises as mechanisms of efficient, self-reinforcing change. Instead, integrating constructivist and historical institutionalist insights, he argues that the contradictory imperatives of a rhetorical presidency compel leaders to initially advance new values and principles, but then to reconvert them into more intellectual policy frameworks.

Race and Racism in International Relations

Confronting the Global Colour Line

Edited by Alexander Anievas, University of Cambridge, UK, Nivi Manchanda and Robbie Shilliam, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand

Series: Interventions

This text marks the long overdue arrival of – some would say return to – the “race question” in IR. Race and Racism in International Relations will provide an accessible entry point for both IR students and scholars into the literature and debates on race and racism by borrowing insights from disciplines such as history, anthropology and sociology where race and race theory figures more prominently. Drawing together a wide range of contributors, this much-needed book will be essential reading for students and scholars in a range of areas including Postcolonial studies, race/racism in world politics and international relations theory.

Reflexivity and International Relations

Positionality, Critique, and Practice

Edited by Jack L Amoureux, Wake Forest University, USA, and Brent J. Steele, University of Utah, USA.

Reflexivity has become a common term in IR scholarship with a variety of uses and meanings. Yet for such an important concept and referent, understandings of reflexivity have been more assumed rather than developed by those who use it, from realists and constructivists to feminists and post-structuralists.

Reforming Law and Economy for a Sustainable Earth

Critical Thought for Turbulent Times

Paul Anderson, University of Warwick, UK

Series: Environmental Politics

Reforming Law and Economy for a Sustainable Earth offers an extensive critique of the idea that global environmental problems can be solved within the framework of global capitalism. Anderson challenges the position that global sustainability can only be achieved via changes to the economic system. The originality of this text is in its combination of rigorous analysis of the requirements for global sustainability and a decisive statement about how to fulfill those requirements. It advances a growing literature in human-environment relations, sustainability studies, and social and political theory with a timely and insightful statement about the 21st century global environmental predicament.

Reframing Europe's Future

Challenges and failures of the European construction

Edited by Ferenc Miszlivetz, Institute for Social and European Studies and Jody Jensen, Institute for Social and European Studies

Series: Routledge Advances in European Politics

This text addresses the challenges and failures of the European construction today from an interdisciplinary perspective. It argues that the EU, the unfinished European polity, the single European market, and the set of supranational institutions, are not sustainable in their present forms. This volume seeks to overcome the weakness of short-term and partial analyses and tries to identify the deeper, structural causes of the failure of the European project, placing Europe in a historical perspective and interpreting its trajectory in a global context.

Regional Governance in Post-NAFTA North America

Building without Architecture

Edited by Greg Anderson, University of Alberta, Canada, and Brian Bow, Dalhousie University, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in North American Politics

A diverse group of contributors from the United States, Canada, and Mexico bring to bear a sophisticated and much needed examination of regional governance in North America, its historical origins, its connection to the regional distribution of power and the respective governments' domestic institutions, and the variance of its forms and function across different issue areas. At a time when scholarly interest in North America seems to be waning, even while important and interesting political and economic developments are taking place, this volume will reinvigorate the study of North America as a region, to better understand its past, present and future.

Re-Imagining North Korea in International Politics

Problematizations and Alternatives

Shine Choi, Queens University Belfast, UK.

Series: Interventions

This book examines the cultural dimensions of the international problem of North Korea through contemporary South Korean and Western popular imagination's engagement with North Korea. Building on works by feminist-postcolonial thinkers, in particular Trinh Minh-ha, Rey Chow and Gayatri Spivak, it examines novels, films, photography and memoirs for how they engage with issues of security, human rights, humanitarianism and political agency from an intercultural perspective. By doing so the author challenges the key assumptions that underpin the prevailing realist and liberal approaches to North Korea.

Resilience

The Governance of Complexity

David Chandler, University of Westminster, UK

Series: Critical Issues in Global Politics

This book analyses a range of issues and questions in terms of resilience frameworks, from educational training in schools to global ethics and from responses to shock events and natural disasters to how resilience has been discussed in the context of international policies to promote peace and development. It sets forward a new and clear conceptualisation of resilience, of use to both students, academics and policy-makers, which emphasises the complex nature of problems and policy-making.

Rethinking Borders

Globalization, Bordering, Connectivity

Anthony Cooper, Royal Holloway, University of London, UK.

Series: Routledge Studies in Global and Transnational Politics

The recent acceleration of transnationalising tendencies has brought about an increasing degree of institutional interest in borders. In this work, Cooper argues that border studies lacks a general approach to border theory and seeks to put forward a new and more productive framework within which borders can be approached and subsequently studied, shifting the terms of the debate and focusing on logics and processes of connection rather than just the construction, destruction and mobility of the borders themselves.

Sino-Indian and Sino-South Korean Relations

Comparisons and Contrasts

P. R. Chari and Vyjayanti Raghavan

This book addresses the compulsions that underlie the China's relations with India and South Korea— both increasingly mutually dependent on China for markets, trade, investments, technology, tourism, etc. It inquires into two sets of regional relationships, with China being the common linking factor. While examining the generational change in the leadership of China, India and South Korea, this study will be a significant addition to the evolving sphere of comparative regional relations.

TEXTBOOK

Southern City Politics

Redefining the Study of Urban Politics and New Issues in the U.S. South

Sarita McCoy Gregory

Southern City Politics argues that the arena of urban politics and urban studies must expand to include the southern city, shifting the focus beyond northern and Midwestern cities to the South. Sarita Gregory uses a multiple methods approach of regional survey data and polling analysis combined with case studies, news articles, and published interviews with Southern city administrators, elected officials, and citizen action groups to show the challenges that many southern cities face in a comparative light. This invaluable addition to courses in urban politics and Southern politics alike is relevant to the areas of urban studies, race and ethnicity, and political sociology.

The Changing Context of Local Democracy

Role Perception and Behaviour of Municipal Councillors

Edited by Hubert Heinelt, Darmstadt University of Technology, Germany.

TEXTBOOK

The Changing Political Map of Global Governance

Anthony Payne, University of Sheffield, UK and Stephen Buzdugan, Manchester Metropolitan University, UK

This text examines the nature and dynamics of modern global governance and its institutions, from their inception to their current forms. It offers a fresh perspective on this topic by focusing its analysis on the growing involvement over this period of poor and middle-income countries in shaping the contours of global governance. It charts the roots and explains the current rise to prominence within several key global institutions of countries such as Brazil, China, India and South Africa, setting this important political shift against the wider history of longstanding tensions in global politics between so-called 'Northern' and 'Southern' countries.

The EU's Government of Industries

Markets, Institutions and Politics

Edited by Andy Smith, the Centre Emile Durkheim at the University of Bordeaux, France. and Bernard Jullien

Series: Routledge Studies on Government and the European Union

Based upon original research on four manufactured or processed goods industries (cars, wine, pharmaceuticals and aquaculture), and driven by theory that is constructivist, institutionalist and sociological, this book sets out to analyse just what Europe governs, by whom and why. In doing so, it reveals three recurrent features of the European government of industries: its omnipresence, its incompleteness and its de-politicization. The authors show that the many gaps in the EU's mode of governing industries stem from struggles over economic doctrine as well as the continued unwillingness of many actors to accord the EU a legitimacy to act politically in the name of industrial government.

The Euro, The Dollar and the Global Financial Crisis

Currency Challenges

Miguel Otero-Iglesias, ESSCA School of Management, Paris, France

This book analyses how financial elites in the key dollar-holding emerging markets of China, Saudi Arabia, the UAE and Brazil, perceive the contest between the euro and the dollar for global currency status. It also assesses how far the Eurozone has gone in challenging US hegemony in monetary affairs through the prism of these elites. In this highly innovative and important book, Otero-Iglesias shows the importance of studying financial elites in Brazil, China and the GCC countries in order to understand the full impact, material and ideological, of the euro in the transformation of the International Monetary System.

The Global Politics of Fashion

Being Fab in a Dangerous World

Edited by Andreas Behnke, University of Reading, UK

Series: Popular Culture and World Politics

This book seeks to address and fill a puzzling omission in contemporary critical IR scholarship. Following on from the aesthetic turn in IR, critical and 'postmodern' IR has produced an impressive array of studies into movies, literature, music and art and the way these media produce, mediate, and represent international politics. By contrast, the proponents of the aesthetic turn have consistently overlooked and ignored fashion as a source of knowledge about global politics.

The Grammar of Politics and Performance

Edited by Shirin M Rai, University of Warwick, UK, and Janelle Reinelt, University of Warwick, UK.

Series: Interventions

This volume brings together important work at the interstecion of politics and performance studies. While the languages of theatre and performance have long been deployed by other disciplines such as psychology (Freud's primal 'scene'), sociology (Goffman's 'backstage'), and politics (politicians 'play' to the public, stage debates), this metaphorical attribution has seldom been taken seriously and pursued systematically to discover the actual nature of the relationship between performance as a set of behavioural practices and the forms and the transactions of these other realms.

The History of Compulsory Voting in Europe

Democracy's Duty?

Anthoula Malkopoulou, University of Uppsala, Sweden

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

This book addresses the question whether there is a duty to vote and if this is enforceable in the form of compulsory voting. Anthoula Malkopoulou presents the importance of compulsory voting today, situating the debate within the contemporary discussion on elections, representation and democracy, and questioning the historical origins of the idea in Europe. Malkopoulou also criticizes the misuse of compulsory voting and argues for its abolition after the Second World War, exposing the contingency of relevant normative claims today and the conditionality of compulsory voting.

The Political Uses of Motherhood in America

Cynthia Stavrianos, Gonzaga University, USA

Series: Routledge Series on Identity Politics

The Political Uses of Motherhood in America investigates the under-researched topic of maternal frames in contemporary women's political action, placing the motherhood frame and its usage in service of collective action at the center of its analysis. Scholars interested in women and politics, interest group politics, social movements, political behavior, motherhood studies, and framing strategies will find this book noteworthy, as it adds to a growing body of literature exploring the use of motherhood as an emerging political frame, and to the interdisciplinary discussion of contemporary discourses of motherhood.

The Politics of Governance

Edited by Till Förster, University of Basel, Switzerland. and Lucy Koechlin, University of Basel, Switzerland.

Series: Conceptualising Comparative Politics

This book seeks to contribute to a non-normative conceptualization of the emergence and transformation of government arrangements, and addresses the under-theorization of actors and agency in conventional governance theories. Editors and contributors theorize the concept of governance more concretely by analyzing the key actors and arrangements that define states of governance across different places and by examining its performance and development in particular settings and time periods. Each contribution to the edited volume is based on a case-study drawn from Africa, though the book argues that the core issues identified remain the same across the world in different empirical contexts.

The Politics of International Organizations

Views from the Inside

Edited by Patrick Weller and Xu Yi-chong

The book will set the scene through a theoretical introduction to ask the questions, and then features chapters on each IO from experts, with comments and additional insights from experienced practitioners or observers, and a conclusion that explicitly draws out the comparative lessons and contrasts the insights of practitioners from those of external observers. It seeks to develop an alternative approach to the analysis of IOs that takes account of all those involved, whether state representatives, IO leaders and members of the secretariat.

The Politics of Skilled Immigration in the United States

Maryam T. Stevenson, University of Indianapolis, USA.

Series: Routledge Research in American Politics and Governance

The Politics of Skilled Immigration in the United States explains the failure of both comprehensive immigration reform in the 2000s and the failure of skilled worker immigration-related legislation introduced subsequent to comprehensive reform between 2006 and 2008 by using strategic disagreement game theory. As both an immigration attorney and political scientist, Maryam Stevenson brings a unique perspective with which to examine the problems of the current system. This book fills the research gap on nonimmigrant visa policy and will be relevant for both practitioners and scholars of immigration policy.

The Role, Position and Agency of Cusp States in International Relations

Edited by Marc Herzog and Philip Robins

This work seeks to develop a new concept with which to analyse the actions and activities of states that tend to be relatively ignored by the discipline of International Relations (IR). As a discipline, IR has a tendency to lean towards the analytically safe. Given the current and recent dynamism of the international system that is both surprising and undesirable, Arranged around the concept of the idea of the Cusp state (and cuspness more generally), the book consists of empirical analysis of eight different countries Brazil; Iran; Israel; Japan; Mexico; Taiwan; Turkey; Ukraine.

Time, Memory, and the Politics of Contingency

Smita A. Rahman, DePauw University, USA

Series: Routledge Innovations in Political Theory

By focusing on issues of contemporary global politics through the lens of political theory, this book draws on literature across disciplines and explores the complex image of time by engaging the work of thinkers for whom time and memory have emerged as a critical issue of analysis, and unpacking the politics of contingency that emerge from such a reading. The book's new insights on political temporality will interest scholars of contemporary political theory, comparative political theory, critical theory, human rights, conflict studies, and religion and politics.

Twenty Years of Studying Democratization

Vol 2: Democratization, Democracy and Authoritarian Continuity

Edited by Aurel Croissant, University of Heidelberg, Germany and Jeffrey Haynes, London Metropolitan University, UK

Series: Democratization Special Issues

Democratization has sought – and continues to seek – to build on the enduring scholarly and of course popular interest in democracy, how and why it emerges, develops and becomes consolidated. The emphasis over the last 20 years of the journal has been contemporary and the approach comparative, with a strong desire to be both topical and authoritative. This collection of superb articles reflects these concerns.

Trajectories of Minority Rights Issues in Europe

The Implementation Trap?

Edited by Timofey Agarin, Queen's University Belfast, UK and Malte Brosig, University of Witwatersrand, South Africa

Contemporary European normative space is in part constituted by the established shared standard of minority protection. This volume analyses the diffusion into and implementation of minority rights in postcommunist Europe. Our contributors estimate the importance granted to these norms by assessing its application across the board of European states.

TEXTBOOK

Understanding Political Science Statistics

Observations and Expectations in Political Analysis

Peter Galderisi, University of California, San Diego, USA

In this text, students are introduced to a problem, asked to consider, conceptually, how one would address that problem, and then led through the derivation of the appropriate statistical formula. This applied method of teaching statistics through political science examples allows students to see the research method as problem solving. They learn the math, but only after they learn the concepts that give the math context.

In a data-driven political age, Understanding Political Science Statistics is an invaluable text that makes complex concepts accessible to today's student of political science.

US Grand Strategy and Corporate Elite Networks

Bastiaan Van Apeldoorn, University of Amsterdam, Netherlands. and Naná de Graaff, VU University Amsterdam, the Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in US Foreign Policy

This book presents a novel analysis of how US grand strategy has evolved from the end of the Cold War to the present, offering an integrated analysis of both continuity and change. In particular, the book draws on a unique data-set that consists of extensive biographical data of 30 cabinet members and other senior foreign policy officials of each of the past three administrations of Clinton, G.W. Bush and Obama. Using Social Network Analysis (SNA) in conjunction with more historical, process-tracing, qualitative analysis - the book presents a comprehensive picture of the social networks linking US grand strategy-makers to broader social forces.

Worlding Brazil

Intellectuals, Identity and Security

Laura Lima

Series: Worlding Beyond the West

This book provides a comprehensive overview of the development of thinking about security in Brazil. Lima develops a new framework for considering intellectual history in Brazil and applies it to the development of knowledge on security. This theoretical framework is then used to argue that one specific discourse of Brazilian identity has been the main source of knowledge production in the country since the 1930s. In doing this, the book puts forward a critically engaging framework for analyzing the role of intellectuals in Brazil and reassesses the exclusionary ideas embedded in the politics of identity and security.

TEXTBOOK

Contemporary Debates on Terrorism

Edited by Richard Jackson, University of Otago, New Zealand and Samuel Justin Sinclair, Harvard Medical School, MA, USA

Contemporary Debates on Terrorism is an innovative new textbook, addressing a number of key issues in contemporary terrorism studies from both 'traditional' and 'critical' perspectives.

This volume aims to bring together in one place many of the field's leading scholars to debate the key issues relating a set of 12 important controversies and questions. The format of the volume involves a leading scholar taking a particular position on the controversy, followed by an opposing or alternative viewpoint written by another scholar. In addition to the pedagogic value of allowing students to read opposing arguments in one place, the volume will also be important for providing an overview of the state of the field and its key lines of debate.

This textbook will be essential reading for all students of terrorism and political violence, critical terrorism studies, critical security studies, security studies and IR in general.

The Secret History of Mumbai Terror Attacks

Saroj Kumar Rath

This book is a hitherto neglected, intriguing and analytical description of terrorism in South Asia, centering on the diabolic Mumbai Attacks conspiracy of Pakistan's Inter-Services Intelligence; the duplicitous terror policy of the United States; and the lackadaisically self-inflicted capitulation of the Indian State.

Career Women in Contemporary Japan

Pursuing Identities, Fashioning Lives

Anne Stefanie Aronsson, Yale University, USA.

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

This book examines what motivates Japanese women to pursue professional careers in the contemporary neoliberal economy, and how they reconfigure notions of selfhood while doing so. It analyses how professional women contest conventional notions of femininity and negotiate new gender roles and cultural meanings. Based on extensive fieldwork, Anne Stefanie Aronsson explores how professional women create new social identities through the mutual conditioning of structure and self, and asks in turn how their actions change the gendering of the workforce, and how women come to understand their experiences.

China's Power and Asian Security

Edited by Mingjiang Li, S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore and Kalyan M. Kemburi, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Politics in Asia

This book maps the growth of China's political, economic, and military capabilities and its impact on the security order in Asia over the coming decades. While updating the emerging power dimensions and prevailing discourse, it provides a nuanced analysis of whether the growth of Chinese power is resulting in Beijing becoming more assertive, or even aggressive, in its behavior and pursuit of national interests, of how the key Asian countries are perceiving and reacting to the growth of China's power and how US rebalancing would play out in the context of Beijing's political, economic, and military power.

China's WTO Accession Reassessed

China Development Research Foundation

Series: Routledge Studies on the Chinese Economy

China's accession to the World Trade Organisation in 2001 was a highly significant event both for China and the wider world. This book argues that, although at the time some people doubted the likely benefits, China's WTO accession has been highly successful. It discusses how China has abided by WTO terms and how membership has contributed to China's reform, showing how China's WTO membership has been a great stimulus both for China's economy and the world economy. The book considers the subject from a range of perspectives, drawing out lessons for China's future reform and development, and its relations with the rest of the world, emphasising the need to maintain a win-win approach.

Chinese and Japanese Films of the Second World War

Edited by King-fai Tam, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Timothy Y. Tsu, Kwansai Gakuin University, Japan and Sandra Wilson, Murdoch University, Australia

This book examines representations of the Second World War in postwar Chinese and Japanese cinema. Drawing on a wide range of films and scholarly disciplines, it demonstrates the potential of war movies for understanding contemporary China and Japan. It shows how the war is remembered in both countries, including the demonisation of Japanese soldiers in postwar socialist-era Chinese films, and the pervasive sense of victimhood in Japanese memories of the war. However, it also shows how some Chinese directors have experimented with alternative interpretations of the war, and how the production of Japanese films critical of the war has continued despite the "resurgence of nationalism".

Cinema, State Socialism and Society in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, 1917-1989

Re-Visions

Edited by Sanja Bahun, University of Essex, UK and John Haynes, University of Essex, UK

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book presents a re-examination of the cinemas of a range of countries in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe in communist times. It argues that, since the end of communism in these countries, scholars of film have access to far more information about the period and are able to view the cinemas of those countries in a different way, no longer bound by an outlook which tended to view such cinemas only in Cold War terms. This re-examination of cinema presents a rich, varied tapestry, relating specific film to specific national circumstances, and viewing these cinemas more as part of the diverse "world cinema" than as a single, monolithic "Cold War Communist" cinema.

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Comparatizing Taiwan examines Taiwan's many relationalities, material as well as symbolic, over a significant historical and geographical span, and views Taiwan in relation to other islands, cultures, or nations. Through an examination of socio-cultural phenomena in Taiwan, it situates Taiwan globally, comparatively, and relationally to bring out the richness of Taiwan as such, and offers a model for studying small nations elsewhere. This truly interdisciplinary book will be welcomed by students and scholars interested in Taiwan studies, Sinophone studies, comparative cultural studies, postcolonial studies, and literary studies.

Competition in Socialist Society

Edited by Katalin Miklóssy, University of Helsinki, Finland and Melanie Ilic, University of Gloucestershire, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Russia and Eastern Europe

This book explores how the concept of "competition", which is usually associated with market economies, operated under state socialism in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, where the socialist system, based on command economic planning and state-centred control over society, was supposed to emphasise "co-operation", rather than competitive mechanisms. The book shows how the gradual adoption and adaptation of Western practices led to the emergence of more open competitiveness in socialist society and the huge effect of increasing competition on socialist psychology.

Dalit Women's Education in Modern India

Double Discrimination

Shailaja Paik, University of Cincinnati, USA.

Series: Routledge Research on Gender in Asia Series

Dalit Women's Education in Modern India is a social and cultural history that challenges the triumphant narrative of modern secular education to analyse the constellation of social, economic, political and historical circumstances that both opened and closed opportunities to Dalits. By focusing on marginalised Dalit women in modern Maharashtra, who have rarely been at the centre of systematic historical enquiry, Shailaja Paik breathes life into their ideas, expectations, potentials, fears and frustrations. Addressing two major blind spots in the historiography of India and of the women's movement, she historicises Dalit women's experiences and constructs them as historical agents.

Efficiency of Social Sector Expenditure in India

Brijesh C Purohit, Madras School of Economics, India

Government investments in social sector has always played an important role in tackling social issues and facilitated in the alleviation of poverty. Therefore, the budgetary expenditure to be mobilized for such investments needs to be efficiently allocated and utilized to maximize the greatest good. This book focuses on the social sector in India and provides an overview of the sector. The book looks at 15 major Indian states between the year 2000-2011 to see how these states had invested in social sector and whether they had met the criteria of efficient social sector investment.

Eurasian Integration – The View from Within

Edited by Piotr Dutkiewicz, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada and Richard Sakwa, University of Kent at Canterbury, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

As Central Asia and the adjacent territory become more important to the world, there is increasing interest in the region from international powers. This book considers economic, political, social and security developments, and examines the region's connections with Russia, China, Europe and the United States. Above all the book examines the concept of "Eurasia" and discusses how far the dynamics of the region are likely to lead to regional integration. The book argues that, although regional integration ought to be an appealing idea, with potential for economic benefits and increased international influence, in practice recent attempts at re-integration have not been very successful.

Eurasia's Regional Powers Compared - China, India, Russia

Edited by Shinichiro Tabata, Hokkaido University, Japan

Series: Routledge Advances in Asia-Pacific Studies

Taking a long view, and a wide perspective, this book by Japan's leading scholars on Asia and Eurasia provides a comprehensive and systematic comparison of the three greatest powers in the region and assesses how far the recent growth trajectories of these countries are sustainable in the long run. The book examines the population, resource and economic basis for the countries' rise, considers political, social and cultural factors, and sets recent developments in a long historical context. Throughout, the different development paths of the three countries are compared and contrasted, and the new models for the future of the world order which they represent are analysed.

From Conflict to Autonomy in the Caucasus

The Soviet Union and the Making of Abkhazia, South Ossetia and Nagorno Karabakh

Arsène Saporov, University of Michigan, USA

Series: Central Asian Studies

From Conflict to Autonomy in the Caucasus analyses the relation of the Soviet nationality policy and modern ethnic conflicts in the post-Soviet space. The book explains why the Bolsheviks granted autonomous status to ethnic minorities in the South Caucasus, focusing in particular on Abkhazia, Nagorno-Karabakh and South Ossetia. It questions the assumption that the Soviet leadership deliberately set up ethnic autonomies within the republics, thereby giving Moscow unprecedented leverage against each republic. By looking at the reasons why autonomy was awarded to these ethnic groups, the book highlights the roots of the modern conflicts in the Caucasus.

Gender, Nation and State in Modern Japan

Edited by Andrea Germer, German Institute for Japanese Studies, Japan, Vera Mackie, University of Wollongong, Australia and Ulrike Wöhr, Hiroshima City University, Japan

Series: ASAA Women in Asia Series

Bringing together international scholars from various disciplines, this book focuses on the gendering of the modern Japanese nation-state from the late nineteenth century to the present, through contemporary concepts of citizenship, ethnicity, sexuality, work and everyday life. The development of the modern nation-state happened simultaneously with the development of a masculine/feminine binary opposition, and references to gender relations are deeply embedded in concepts of nationalism. This book makes an important contribution to studies on formation of modern nation-states and will interest students and scholars of Japanese history, gender studies and political science.

Irregular Migration and Human Security in East Asia

Edited by Jiyoung Song, Singapore Management University and Alistair D. B. Cook, National University of Singapore

Series: Routledge Contemporary Asia Series

Irregular migration can be broadly defined as people's mobility that is unauthorised or forced, and this book expands on the existing migration-security nexus by moving away from the traditional state security lens, and instead, shifting the focus to human security. This book further develops the existing migration-security nexus and focuses on the multi-dimensional dynamics between irregular migration and human security in East Asia. It includes in-depth empirical country case-studies from the East Asian region, including China, Japan, North Korea, the Philippines, Burma/Myanmar, Cambodia, Thailand and Singapore, written by country specialists and practitioners in the field.

Islam and Pakistan's Political Culture

Farhan Mujahid Chak, Qatar University

Series: Durham Modern Middle East and Islamic World Series

This book explores the ideological rivalry which is fuelling political instability in Muslim polities, discussing this in relation to Pakistan. It argues that the principal dilemma for Muslim polities is how to reconcile modernity and tradition. It discusses existing scholarship on the subject, outlines how Muslim political thought and political culture have developed over time, and then relates all this to Pakistan's political evolution, present political culture, and growing instability. The book concludes that traditionalist and secularist approaches to reconciling modernity and tradition have not succeeded, and that a revivalist approach is more likely to be successful.

Islam in Post-Soviet Ukraine

Anna Münster, School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), UK

Series: Routledge Religion, Society and Government in Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet States

Arraid, an association of Islamic organisations in Ukraine, traces its origin back to the Islamist movements in the Middle East and it has some strong family resemblances to the Muslim Brotherhood. This book offers a balanced analysis of this new phenomenon in Ukraine with the help of insights from the Social Movement Theory (SMT). The book explores the ways that Arraid employs its structural, social (networking) and media resources for mobilisation and recruitment. Focusing on both native-born Muslims and converts from Ukrainian and Russian backgrounds provides a window into the life of observant Muslims at Arraid.

Japan's Aid

Lessons for economic growth, development and political economy

Edward M Feasel, Soka University of America, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern World Economy

The book "Japan's Aid" examines the strengths and weaknesses of Japanese aid policy in all these dimensions: in fostering economic growth in both its own economic success story and in the numerous countries to which it has served as the single largest bilateral donor over many years; and as a policy that other nations might emulate. Through a combination of insightful case studies and rigorous econometric investigation, the book presents a comprehensive examination of the pros and cons of Japan's aid.

K Pop – The International Rise of the Korean Music Industry

Edited by Jung-Bong Choi, New York University, USA and Roald Maliangkay, Australian National University

K Pop, described by Time Magazine as 'South Korea's greatest export', has rapidly achieved a large worldwide audience of devoted fans, largely through internet distribution. This book examines the phenomenon and the reasons for its success. It considers the institutions participating in its global dissemination, assesses how K Pop's ascendancy relates to post-colonial modernisation, post-Cold War politics, the Korean diaspora and what the fan fascination signifies culturally, economically and politically. Overall, the book asks how far Asian culture can be global in a truly meaningful way and explores how popular culture from a 'marginal' nation has become a global phenomenon.

Labour Market Deregulation in Japan and Italy

Hiro Watanabe, University of Sheffield, UK

Series: Nissan Institute/Routledge Japanese Studies

This book seeks to explain the differences in labour market deregulation policies between Japan and Italy despite these countries sharing a number of similar political, social, and labour market (if not cultural) characteristics. It makes a significant contribution to the existing literature by providing a theoretical and empirical analysis on the issue of labour market deregulation in these countries based on a political perspective, as opposed to an economic or sociological perspective. Further, it provides correctives to, and new perspectives on, theories related to the politics of labour market deregulation.

Leadership and Authority in Central Asia

An Ismaili Community in Tajikistan

Otambek Mastibekov, University of London, UK

This book explores the unfolding of world history in a remote corner of Central Asia: the region of Badakhshan. It offers a comprehensive overview of the history of the Ismaili community in Tajikistan and analyses the ways in which expressions of political and religious authority have evolved and how they have been adapted to different political contexts and radical social upheaval. Developing a structural explanation for the survival and evolution of religious and political authorities of Badakhshani Ismailis in times of radical social and political upheaval, this book will be of interest to scholars of Muslim societies, Political Science and Central Asian Studies.

Bidyut Chakrabarty, University of Delhi, India.

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book examines left politics in India focusing on its rise, consolidation and relative decline in the present century. Left radicalism in India is a distinct ideological phenomenon which is articulated in two complementary ways: while the parliamentary left remains social democratic in character, the left wing extremists continue to uphold the classical Marxist, Leninist and Maoist notion of violent revolution. By concentrating on the nature and also activities of these two versions of left radicalism, this book is a thorough study of the phenomenon. The author analyses the states of Kerala, West Bengal and Tripura and presents a variety of case studies of communist movements.

Gil-Soo Han, Monash University, Australia

Series: Routledge Advances in Korean Studies

The unprecedented economic success of South Korea since the 1990s has led in turn to a large increase in the number of immigrants and foreign workers in Korean industries. The aim of this book is to describe and explain the experiences of discrimination and racism that foreigners and 'new' Koreans have faced in a multicultural South Korea by looking at how society has treated the foreigners and what their experiences have been given that common discourse about race in Korea surrounds issues of Korean heterogeneity and pure blood nationalism.

Objects of Worship in South Asian Religions

Forms, Practices and Meanings

Edited by Knut A. Jacobsen, University of Bergen, Norway, Mikael Aktor, University of Southern Denmark and Kristina Myrvold, Linnaeus University, Sweden.

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Religion and Philosophy

Objects of worship are one aspect of the material dimension of lived religion in South Asia. The omnipresence of objects of worship and their use is one of the themes that cut across the religious traditions in the pluralistic religious culture of the region. Power becomes manifest in these objects and for the devotees the objects of worship may represent power regardless of religious identity. This book looks at how these objects dominate the religious landscape of South Asia, and how they are of significance not just to the religious but also the social life of the region.

Ozawa Ichiro and Japanese Politics

Old Versus New

Aurelia George Mulgan, University of New South Wales, Australia

Series: Nissan Institute/Routledge Japanese Studies

This book provides insights into the inner workings of Japanese politics by examining the political goals, behaviour, methods and practices of Japan's most famous politician of the current era - Ozawa Ichiro. These aspects of Japanese politics are analysed within the conceptual framework of 'old' and 'new' politics, which encapsulates Ozawa's efforts to accomplish key political and economic reforms on the one hand, and on the other, the reality of the 'Ozawa way', which serves to entrench existing political structures, modes and conventions.

Pakistan's Nuclear Policy

A Minimum Credible Deterrence

Zafar Khan, University of Hull, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

In May 1998, in reaction to India's nuclear weapon tests, Pakistan tested six nuclear weapons. Following this, the country opted for a policy of minimum deterrence, and within a year, Pakistan had altered its policy stance by adding the modifier of minimum 'credible' deterrence. This book looks at how this shift impacted on Pakistan's nuclear policy direction, how and if Pakistan has become one of the fastest growing nuclear weapon states in the world, and whether the concept of 'minimum' has lost its significance. It highlights the policy towards arms control and disarmament, and discusses whether these individual policy orientations are consistent with the minimum deterrence.

Post-Tsunami Recovery in Thailand

Socio-cultural responses

Monica Lindberg Falk, Lund University, Sweden

Series: The Modern Anthropology of Southeast Asia

The scope of damage brought about by disastrous events in Asia urges focus on recovery and post-disaster reconstruction from several perspectives. Addressing culture as an underpinning issue in post-disaster recovery, this book uses original material collected in Thailand after the 2004 Indian Ocean Tsunami to provide in-depth ethnography of Thailand's recovery. Using observations, narratives and material from in-depth interviews with survivors, relatives, relief workers, officials and Buddhist monks and nuns, this book contributes to the research on anthropology of disaster and to the development of research on cultural resilience and religion in post-disaster recovery.

Power, Networks and Violent Conflict in Central Asia

A Comparison of Tajikistan and Uzbekistan

Idil Tunçer-Kılavuz, Istanbul Medeniyet University, Turkey

When the Central Asian republics gained independence from the USSR, Tajikistan suffered a civil war. The factors that the literature on civil wars cites as the causes of this were also present in Uzbekistan – but this country had a peaceful transition. Examining this empirical puzzle by isolating the crucial factors that caused war to break out in Tajikistan but not Uzbekistan, this book applies a comparative approach to the broader question of why civil wars occur and challenges many common explanations. This includes highlighting the importance of elites' power perceptions, which have their origins in the interaction of structural-, process-, and network-related variables.

Public Health and National Reconstruction in Post-War Asia

International Influences, Local Transformations

Edited by Liping Bu, Alma College, USA and Ka-Che Yip, University of Maryland, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

This book considers the transformation of public health systems in major East, South and Southeast Asian countries after the Second World War. It examines how public health concepts, policies, institutions and practices were improved, how international health standards were implemented and how indigenous traditions and local concerns affected developments, sometimes with the construction of public health systems forming an important part of nation-building in post-war and post-independence countries. Throughout, the book relates public health system developments to people's health, demographic changes, and economic and social reconstruction projects.

Reassessing Orientalism – Interlocking Orientologies in the Cold War Era

Edited by Michael Kemper, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands and Artemy Kalinovsky, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Russia and Eastern Europe

Orientalism as a concept was first applied to Western colonial views of the East. Subsequently, different types of orientalism were discovered but the premise was that these took their lead from Western-style orientalism, applying it in different circumstances. This book, on the other hand, argues that the diffusion of interpretations in orientalism was not uni-directional, and that the different orientologies, Western, Soviet and Oriental, did not develop in isolation from each other and were interlocked in such a way that a change in any one of them affected the others; and that those being orientalist were active, not passive, players in shaping how views of themselves developed.

Rethinking the Decline of China's Qing Dynasty

Imperial Activism and Borderland Management at the Turn of the Nineteenth Century

Daniel McMahon, Fu Jen Catholic University, Taiwan

Series: Asian States and Empires

The many regional insurgencies and the unrest in China's borderlands at the very end of the eighteenth and in the early nineteenth centuries are regarded by scholars as evidence of government disability and the incipient decline of the imperial Qing dynasty. This book, based on extensive original research, argues that, on the contrary, the response of the imperial government went well beyond pacification and reconstruction, and demonstrates that the imperial political culture was dynamic, innovative and capable of moving with the times. Overall, the book shows that the Qing regime had sustained vigour, albeit in difficult and changing circumstances.

Reviving Ancient Chinese Mathematics

Mathematics, History and Politics in the Work of Wu Wen-Tsun

Jiri Hudecek, Charles University, Czech Republic

Series: Needham Research Institute Series

This book is a study of the life of one of modern China's most admired scientific figures, the mathematician Wu Wen-Tsun. Negotiating the conflict between progress and tradition, he found a path that not only ensured his political and personal survival, but which also brought him renown as a mathematician of international status who claimed that he stood outside the dominant western tradition of mathematics. This book traces how Wu managed to combine political success and international scientific eminence, a story which has wider implications for a new century of increasing Chinese activity in the sciences.

Revolutionary Lives in South Asia

Acts and Afterlives of Anticolonial Political Action

Edited by Kama Maclean, University of New South Wales, Australia and J. David Elam, Northwestern University, USA

Prompted by the prevalence of 'the revolutionary' in Indian political, historical and literary worlds, Revolutionary Lives explores the radical and cosmopolitan nature of anticolonialism in early twentieth century India through a biographical lens. The volume draws together ten eminent researchers from India, Europe, Australia and the US to analyse the lives of anticolonial activists, both unknown and infamous, to ask: how should we read claims to 'the revolutionary' in both contemporary and historical contexts?

Rhetoric and the Decolonization and Recolonization of East Timor

David Hicks, Stony Brook University, U.S.A

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

This book presents a compelling and original perspective of the critical period of 1974-1975 in the history of East Timor. It challenges the idea that this period of history was infused by the spirit of nationalism in which the majority Timorese partook, and which contended with other competing western -isms, including colonialism, communism, neo-colonialism, and fascism. In contrast, the book argues that the Timorese majority had little understanding of any of these alien political abstractions and that the period can be most plausibly explained in terms of a dialectic between the political culture of Dili, the capital, and the political culture of the rest of the country.

Social Movements in Taiwan's Democratic Transition

Linking Activists to the Changing Political Environment

Yun Fan, National Taiwan University

Series: Routledge Research on Taiwan Series

Focusing on activists' relationship to the changing political environment, this book analyses the trajectories of three major social movements in Taiwan during the country's democratic transition between 1980 and 2000. Specifically, it explores why the labor and environmental movements became less partisan, while the women's movement became more partisan. Providing a comparative discussion of these key social movements, this book both explores key theoretical questions and presents a rich and comprehensive analysis of social activism during Taiwan's democratic transition.

Southeast Asia and the European Union

Non-traditional security crises and cooperation

Naila Maier-Knapp, University of Cambridge, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

The EU's contemporary approach towards Asia emphasises the importance of open economies and common challenges of the 21st Century. So-called non-traditional security issues have been portrayed increasingly as an avenue to share experiences and enhance cooperation between the EU and Southeast Asia. This is the first contemporary monograph-length discussion of the EU as a politico-security actor in Southeast Asia post-Cold War. Drawing upon the historical and institutional context and a broad range of empirical case studies, it illustrates that non-traditional security crises are providing an increasingly important frame to enhance the EU as a politico-security influence in the region.

Thailand's International Meditation Centers

Tourism and the Global Commodification of Religious Practices

Brooke Schedneck

Series: Routledge Religion in Contemporary Asia Series

This book explores contemporary practices within the new institution of international meditation centres in Thailand. It discusses the development of Thai Buddhism and of western views about Thai Buddhism, relating Thai Buddhism to contemporary processes of commodification and globalisation. It examines how meditation centres are promoted internationally and considers how Thai Buddhism is taught to international tourists. Overall, it assesses why meditation practices appeal to non-Buddhists, and argues that the phenomenon demonstrates that religions do not travel as whole entities, but rather that partial elements resonate with different cultures, and are appropriated over time.

The Development of Russian Environmental Thought

Jonathan Oldfield and Denis J B Shaw, University of Birmingham

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book provides a comprehensive overview of the rich thinking about environmental issues which has grown up in Russia since the nineteenth century, a body of knowledge and thought which is not well known to Western scholars and environmentalists. It shows how in many branches of the natural sciences in late nineteenth century Russia distinct and strongly articulated representations of the earth's physical systems emerged which typically emphasised the completely integrated nature of natural systems. It goes on to discuss how Russia's distinct approach to the environment developed further during the Soviet period, and in the post-Soviet period, up to the present.

The East Asian War, 1592-1598

International Relations, Violence and Memory

Edited by James B. Lewis, University of Oxford, UK

Series: Asian States and Empires

As East Asia regains its historical position as a world centre, information on the history of regional relations becomes ever more critical. Northeast Asia saw five centuries of international peace from 1400 to 1894, broken only by one international war when Japan invaded Korea in the 1590s. This war also involved Chinese Southeast Asians and Europeans, saw the largest overseas landing in world history to date, and devastated Korea. This book gives a comprehensive analysis of the war and its aftermath, deepening understanding of East Asian international relations and providing important insights into the strategic forces continuing to operate in the region.

The Politics of Medicine in China Under Mongol Rule

Reiko Shinno, University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, USA

Series: Needham Research Institute Series

This book shows how Yuan China, the development of a new culture in which medical practice came to be considered a highly respected occupation for elite men. Further, it argues that another major step was taken toward the codification of medical knowledge and promotion of physicians' social status during the Yuan period. To explain this historical development, Reiko Shinno points to the significance of Mongol rule, medical innovation, and Neo-Confucianism.

The Russian Orthodox Church, 1917-1948

From Decline to Resurrection

Daniela Kalkandjieva, formerly Sofia University, Bulgaria

Series: Routledge Religion, Society and Government in Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet States

This book tells the remarkable story of the decline and revival of the Russian Orthodox Church under the Soviet Union. Following 1917, Bolshevik anti-religious policies led to significant church decline but in 1939 Stalin gave the Patriarch of Moscow jurisdiction over orthodox congregations in Poland and later encouraged the church to promote patriotic activities to resist the Nazis. He agreed a Concordat with the church in 1943 and continued encouraging the church in the immediate postwar period. This book uses extensive original research to bring a great deal of new information, overturning established thinking on many key points.

The Russian Presidency of Dmitry Medvedev, 2008-2012

The Next Step Forward or Merely a Time Out?

J. L. Black, Centre for Research on Canadian-Russian Relations, Canada

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

The term "tandem" was used to describe the Putin-Medvedev combination which ruled Russia from 2008 to 2012, when Medvedev was president and Putin prime minister. Many saw Putin as the real wielder of power, with Medvedev as his puppet. Others, however, saw Medvedev as a visionary with great - though as yet unfulfilled - plans. Meanwhile, many in the West regarded Medvedev favourably, giving him credit for raising expectations, making it difficult for the Russian state to return to its old ways. This book presents a comprehensive survey of the Medvedev presidency, covering all areas including politics, the economy, international relations and social developments.

The Warsaw Pact Reconsidered

Laurien Crump

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Russia and Eastern Europe

This book examines the impact that the Warsaw Pact inadvertently had on the non-Soviet Warsaw Pact (NSWP) members, by providing an opportunity to assert their own interests, emancipate themselves from the Soviet grip, and influence Warsaw Pact policy. By analysing archival evidence and examining the Soviet alliance from a fresh perspective, the book is a significant contribution to New Cold War history, and offers new insights into the multilateral dynamics of power within the Soviet bloc. By looking at specific case studies of NSWP countries, the book examines the interplay between the domestic situation in the NSWP countries and their strategy within the Warsaw Pact.

Vietnam's Socialist Servants

Domesticity, Class, Gender, and Identity

Minh T. N. Nguyen, Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology, Germany

Series: Asia's Transformations

This book analyzes the ways in which class identities are forged and contested through the practices and discourses of domestic service, which is central to middle-class domesticity in Vietnam today. Domestic workers' experiences reveal negotiations with class boundaries actively set by the urban middle class, who seek distinction through emerging notions and practices of domesticity, and this book reveals how these boundaries are ridden with gender and class anxiety, partly because of the very struggles and contestations of the workers.

Women and Climate Change in Bangladesh

Margaret Alston, Monash University, Australia

Series: ASAA Women in Asia Series

Bangladesh is not one of the countries with the greatest emissions of carbon, but it is nevertheless one of the countries most critically affected, with a significant risk of damage to lives and livelihoods due to climate change. This book assesses the impact of climate change in Bangladesh. It outlines the impact of climate change on livelihood strategies and health, focusing particularly on the impact on gender relations, showing how cultural customs and practices often work against women's important role in helping communities cope with the effects of climate change. The book argues for, and puts forward policy proposals for, encouraging women's active contribution.

Women and the Politics of Representation in Southeast Asia

Engendering discourse in Singapore and Malaysia

Edited by Adeline Koh, Richard Stockton College, USA and Yu-Mei Balasingamchow, Independent scholar

Series: Routledge Research on Gender in Asia Series

This book seeks to give an overview of how gender and representation come together in various configurations in the history and contemporary culture of Singapore and Malaysia. It examines the discursive construction of gender, sexuality and representation in a variety of areas, including the politics of everyday life, education, popular culture, literature, film, theatre and photography. Chapters examine a range of tropes such as the Orientalist "Sarong Party Girl," the iconic "Singapore Girl" of Singapore Airlines, and the figure of pious Muslim femininity celebrated by Malaysian NGO IMAN, all of which play important roles in delineating limitations for gender roles.

Women in Pali Buddhism

Walking the Spiritual Paths in Mutual Dependence

Pascale Engelmaier, University of Bristol, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Buddhism

The Pali tradition presents a diverse and often contradictory picture of women. This book examines women's roles as they are described in the Pali canon and its commentaries. Taking into consideration the wider socio-religious context – drawing from early brahmanical literature and epigraphical findings – it contrasts these descriptions with the doctrinal account of women's spiritual abilities.

Worlding Multiculturalisms

The Politics of Inter-Asian Dwelling

Edited by Daniel P. S. Goh, National University of Singapore, Singapore

Series: Political Theories in East Asian Context

This book contrasts Western and Asian notions of multiculturalism, focusing not on state issues, but rather by finding manifestations of cultural exchange. Indeed, critical cultural studies gave rise to theories of multiculturalism in the first place, and therefore this is a continuation of the search for critical practices going beyond postcolonialism and the nation-state into the inter-Asian zone.

Arab Regionalism

A Post-Structural Perspective

Silvia Feraboli, SOAS, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Middle Eastern Politics

This is a book on Arab regionalism and the power relations involved in the making of an Arab region. On an empirical level, this book focuses on the drawing of topographic and ideational boundaries in the Arab region, on Arab regional organizations, on the functional cooperation among Arab states and institutions, and on the socio-cultural infra-structure that supports the Arab region making process. On a theoretical level, this book makes a case for the analytical autonomy of Arab regionalism and for the necessity of approaching it as an actual process instead of a failed project.

Ibn Al-Arabi and Islamic Intellectual Culture

From Mysticism to Philosophy

Caner K Dagli, College of the Holy Cross, USA

This book explores the relationship between mysticism and philosophy in Islamic intellectual life by tracing the history of the concept of "oneness of being" (waḥdat al-wujūd) in the school of Ibn al-ʿArabī. The book explores how the conceptual language used by early mystical writers became increasingly engaged over time with the broader Islamic intellectual culture, until it became integrated with the latter's common philosophical and theology vocabulary.

Israel-Palestine in the News Media

Contending Discourses

Luke Peterson, University of Cambridge, UK

Series: Routledge Studies on the Arab-Israeli Conflict

Palestine-Israel in the Print News Media is concerned with conceptions of language, knowledge, and thought about political conflict in the Middle East in two national news media communities: the United States and the United Kingdom. This work argues for the existence of national perspectives which are constructed, distributed, and reinforced in the print news media. In this study, a detailed linguistic analysis of print news media coverage of four recent events in the Palestinian-Israeli conflict takes place in order to examine ideological patterns present in print news media coverage.

Justice and Peace in the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict

Yaacov Bar Siman Tov, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel

Series: UCLA Center for Middle East Development (CMED) series

In this book, Yaacov Bar-Siman-Tov argues that the link between justice and peace is an important issue requiring both sides' attention, but, given the wide and currently unbridgeable gap separating the two sides, it should be postponed to the phase of reconciliation rather than being included in the process of conflict resolution. The two-state solution is endorsed as the best and practical solution and as a first step for a "just peace" in this conflict, to be followed by reconciliation. Highly topical, this book is essential reading for scholars and researchers of International Relations, Peace Studies and the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Literary Subterfuge and Contemporary Persian Fiction

Who Writes Iran?

Mohammad Mehdi Khorrami, New York University, USA

Series: Iranian Studies

The main focus of Literary Subterfuge and Contemporary Persian Fiction: Who Writes Iran? is to identify components and elements which define Persian modernist fiction. In this process, the emphasis is placed on literary concepts and devices which provide the dynamics of the evolutionary trajectory of this modernism. This concentration also proffers an alternative in terms of literary historiography; it supports a methodological approach that considers literary narratives which occur in the margins of dominant discourses, and indeed promote non-discursivity, as the main writers of Persian modernist fiction.

Ralph Bunche and the Arab-Israeli Conflict

Mediation and the UN, 1947-1949

Elad Ben-Dror, Bar Ilan University, Israel

Series: Israeli History, Politics and Society

The book presents the fascinating story of Bunche the man within the frame tale of the UN's initial involvement in Palestine between 1947 and 1949. Bunche played an extremely significant role; as advisor to UNSCOP, which in 1947 recommended the partition of Mandatory Palestine. Subsequently, he headed the secretariat of the UNPC, which was charged with implementing the partition plan, served as the senior aide to the UN mediator, Count Folke Bernadotte, and, after the latter's assassination, himself became the head of the UN mediation effort. In this position he managed to put an end to the war by means of armistice agreements between Israel and the several Arab states.

The Muslim Brotherhood

The Arab Spring and its Future Face

Beverley Milton-Edwards, Queen's University, UK

The Muslim Brotherhood is the most significant and enduring Sunni Islamist organization of the contemporary era. Its roots lay in the Middle East but today it is both a local and global movement. The Muslim Brotherhood is variously regarded as a true force for moderation among Islamists or a facade behind which lies a terroristic fundamentalist threat which could undermine global security agendas. The Arab Spring has brought the Muslim Brotherhood to the fore of regional politics once more and its ambitions are slowly being realised as state-based power is re-ordered across the Middle East.

Transnational Islamic Actors and Indonesia's Foreign Policy

Transcending the State

Delphine Alles, Sciences Po Paris, France

Series: Rethinking Southeast Asia

This book examines the growing role of transnational Islamic Non-State Actors in post-authoritarian Indonesia and how it has affected the making of Indonesia's foreign policy since the country embarked on democratization process in 1998. The book considers for the first time the consequences of the "parallel diplomacy" undertaken by Indonesia's Islamic NSAs on the country's official foreign policy interests, explains the state's responses, and investigates the outcomes of those responses on the country's international identity. Combining field-collected data and a theoretical reflexion it offers a distanced analysis which will deepen the theoretical approaches on transnational actors.

TEXTBOOK

A Hands-On Introduction to Forensic Science

Cracking the Case

Mark Okuda, Evergreen Valley College, San Jose, California, USA and Frank H. Stephenson, PhD., Foothill College, Los Altos Hills, California, USA

This lower level forensic science textbook incorporates an ongoing fictional narrative throughout the book, entertaining students as it provides hands-on learning in order to "crack the case." The book reviews all the basic sciences essential to understand forensics, including math, physics, chemistry, and biology. The book incorporates cost effective, field-tested lab activities for schools that have restricted budgets. The final chapter culminates in a mock trial where the students testify as experts and a jury of their classmates renders a verdict. A full range of ancillaries is available to instructors.

Article 4(h) of the African Union Constitutive Act

Edited by Dan Kuwali, University of Pretoria, South Africa and Frans Viljoen, University of Pretoria, South Africa

The African Union is the only intergovernmental organization to make the responsibility to protect part of its Constitutive Act, as Article 4(h). Although interventions have occurred since the Constitutive Act came into force the AU Assembly has not invoked Article 4(h) explicitly. This book explores the potential application of this provision and the legal and policy challenges implementation faces. A key challenge is how the use of force penetrates cornerstones principles of state sovereignty and non-intervention, upon which the AU is founded. The book brings together experts in the field to analyse the legal, policy and practical aspects of implementing Article 4(h).

In unintended ways, law reforms that pursue equality may in fact harm their intended beneficiaries or worsen the disadvantage of other groups. Tackling these important issues beyond the boundaries that often confine legal scholarship, this book conducts an interdisciplinary consideration of efforts to advance equality, as it explores the developments, challenges, and consequences that arise from law reforms aiming to deliver equality in the areas of sexuality, kinship, and family relations. With an international array of contributors, After Legal Equality: Family, Sex, Kinship will be an invaluable resource for those with interests in this area.

Jessie Blackburn, University of New South Wales, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Terrorism and the Law

The Northern Ireland peace process has been heralded by those involved as a successful example of transformation from a violent conflict to a peaceful society. This book examines the implementation of the Belfast Agreement in Northern Ireland, and evaluates whether its goal to establish a normal, peaceful society has been fully realised. By evaluating the implementation of the Belfast Agreement, the book demonstrates the difficulties that transitional or post-conflict states face in attempting to wind back extraordinary counter-terrorism policies after periods of violence have been brought to an end.

Between Exemplarity and Singularity

Literature, Philosophy, Law

Edited by Susanne Luedemann, Ludwig-Maximilians University, Munich, Germany and Michele Lowrie, University of Chicago, USA

Series: Discourses of Law

The practice of exemplarity is historically rooted firmly in ancient Roman rhetoric, oratory, literature, and law, genres that also secured its transmission. Tracing the role of exemplarity from Rome through to its influence on literature, politics, philosophy, psychoanalysis and law, it shows how Roman exemplarity has subsisted, not only as a figure of thought, but also as an alternative way to organize and to transmit knowledge.

Care, Migration and Human Rights

Law and Practice

Edited by Siobhán Mullally, University College Cork, Ireland

Series: Routledge Research in Human Rights

Human rights law has belatedly begun to address the structured inequalities and exclusions that define the domain of domestic work. The continuum of exploitation that has historically defined the everyday of domestic work – exclusion from employment and social security standards and precarious migration status – have frequently been neglected. However, as in other areas of international law, it is primarily the moments of crisis, incidents of human trafficking, slavery or forced labour, that have captured the attention of human rights law. This book addresses the specific position of domestic workers in the context of evolving human rights norms.

Charterparties

Indemnities, Recourse and Collaterals

Edited by Filippo Lorenzon

At a time of great volatility in the shipping market, indemnities, guarantees and recourse actions are becoming increasingly common issues. Although the commercial purpose of such devices is rather straightforward, their enforcement gives rise to a number of complex legal issues spanning from jurisdiction and conflict of law to equitable devices. With the aim of unravelling these complexities, this book examines a number of crucial issues, including the master to sign bills of lading as presented; bailment and general principles of indemnity and contribution under the general maritime law of the United States.

Critical Transitions of Law and Politics

Mariano Croce and Michele Spanò

This book provides a fresh and accessible overview of the most innovative theoretical approaches in the field of legal and political studies. It focuses on four main transformations that are reshaping the intersection of law and politics today: new types of subjectivities and their struggle for recognition; the fragmentation of culture and rise of legal pluralism; the emergence of new techniques of government and the crisis of modern citizenship; transforming modes of functioning of legal and political institutions. Engaging work by some of the most prominent contemporary legal and political theorists, the book demonstrates how law's ties with the state are being severed.

Earth Jurisprudence

Private Property and the Environment

Peter Burdon, University of Adelaide, Law School

Series: Law, Justice and Ecology

Earth Jurisprudence: Private Property and the Environment argues that the institution of private property is anthropocentric and thus nature is not attributed any inherent value, becoming merely the matter of a human property relationship. Using the theory of Earth Jurisprudence as a guide, this book considers how an alternative conception of property might be grounded in the eco-centric concept of an Earth community. Recognising that human beings are deeply interconnected with and dependent on nature, this concept is proposed as a standard and measure for human law.

Equity and Equitable Principles in the World Trade Organization

Addressing Conflicts and Overlaps between the WTO and Other Regimes

Anastasios Gourgourinis, National and Kapodistrian University of Athens, Greece
Series: Routledge Research in International Economic Law

This book analyses how equity and equitable principles can be employed as juridical tools in the legal reasoning of judges and lawyers in World Trade Organization (WTO) disputes. It particularly focuses on disputes where there is interaction between norms derived from the multilateral trade and other international legal regimes. Bringing the literature on equity and equitable principles in international law up-to-date, this book tackles several legal problems which have emerged in WTO dispute settlement practice, and engages with the fragmentation of international law.

Irene Watson, David Unaipon College of Indigenous Education and Research, University of South Australia
Series: Law and the Postcolonial

This work is the first to assess the legality and impact of colonisation from the viewpoint of Aboriginal law. It begins by outlining the Aboriginal legal system as it is embedded in First Nation people's complex relationship with their ancestral lands. This is Raw Law: a natural system of obligations and benefits, flowing from an Aboriginal ontology. First Nations Peoples, Colonialism and International Law places Raw Law at the centre of an analysis of colonisation – thereby decentring the usual analytical tendency to privilege the dominant structures and concepts of Western law

Forensic Laboratory Management

Applying Business Principles

W. Mark Dale, Army Criminal Investigation Division and Wendy S Becker, Shippensburg University, Pennsylvania, USA

Laboratory managers are often promoted from casework duties into management, requiring preparation for a whole new set of leadership responsibilities. This book discusses well-established business tools available to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of management decision-making. It includes key chapters with case studies simulating a working laboratory in which readers can apply business tools with actual data that reinforce discussion concepts. Each chapter includes a brief review of current literature of the best management theories and practice. A web portal collects laboratory performance data and benchmarks for best practices.

Forensic Metrology

Scientific Measurement and Inference for Lawyers, Judges and Criminalists

Ted Vosk, Of Counsel, Cowan Kirk Gaston Wolff, Kirkland, Washington, USA and Ashley F. Emery, University of Washington, Seattle, USA

Series: International Forensic Science and Investigation

With contributions from professionals in forensic science, law, and engineering, this book serves as an introduction to the field of metrology, its application to the forensic sciences, and its use in the courtroom. Written for professionals and students, the text begins at a general level, demonstrating that the principles of metrology are familiar to all. It then builds to a more sophisticated level of coverage, combining the scientific machinery of metrology and forensics with the practice of law so practitioners will be able to apply the principles discussed. Examples, case studies, and diagrams are included for ease of understanding and application.

Genealogies of Legal Vision

Edited by Peter Goodrich, Cardozo School of Law, Yeshiva University, USA and Valérie Hayaert, European University Institute, Italy

Series: Discourses of Law

The growing interest in law and the visual has tended to focus in a somewhat lazy fashion upon film and law, rather than addressing the actual history of law's regimes of visual control. This book traces the complex lineage of the legal emblem and argues that the mens emblematica of the humanist lawyers was the inauguration of a visioeratic regime that continues in significant part into the present and multiple technologies of vision. Bringing together leading experts on the history of legal emblems, this collection provides a ground-breaking account of the long relationship between visibility, meaning and normativity.

Graphic Justice

Intersections of Comics and Law

Thomas Giddens

Establishing the medium of graphic fiction as a critical resource for interdisciplinary legal studies, this collection is the first to address the intersection of comics and law. Whether in their representations of lawyers, their treatment justice, law and social order, or their investment in the protection of the innocent and the punishment of guilty, graphic fiction explores human life in all its social, moral and legal complexity. In the context of a now well-established interest in cultural legal studies, this book showcases the critical potential of comics and graphic fiction as a resource for interdisciplinary legal studies and legal theory.

Human Rights and the Criminal Justice System

Anthony Amatrudo, Middlesex University Law School, UK and Leslie William Blake, University of Surrey, UK

This book brings together the relevant legal and criminological material in order to critically review the relationship between the developing body of human rights theory and practice, and the criminal justice system. Taking up a thorough analysis of this relationship, Human Rights and the Criminal Justice System examines existing legal structures, court practices, and the developing literature in criminology, law and political science. It will be of considerable interest to those with academic concerns in this area; as well as providing an accessible, yet sophisticated, resource for relevant upper level undergraduate and postgraduate courses.

Human Rights, the Rule of Law and Exploitation in the Postcolony

Blood Minerals

Mark Harris, La Trobe University, Australia

Series: Law and the Postcolonial

This book examines how the legal-economic frameworks of globalization enact colonial rule by declaring the lands that are to be exploited as void of law and position the inhabitants of the postcolonial south in a legal and moral position that facilitates economic exploitation and juridical regulation. Drawing on several exemplary situations – from Africa (the DRC and Nigeria), Asia (India), the Pacific region (Papua New Guinea and Australia) and South America (Ecuador) – Human Rights, the Rule of Law and Exploitation in the Postcolony: Blood Minerals describes how colonial rule operates in a violent and destructive cycle of mineral extraction.

Human Scent Evidence

Paola Prada, Florida International University, Miami, USA and Kenneth G. Furton, Florida International University, Miami, USA

Human scent evidence can be of critical use in many cases where other types of evidence such as DNA, fingerprints, or fibers are not readily available. This book discusses various factors and theories of human odor production, collection, preservation, and analysis, as well as the legal significance of the results. It explores historical aspects of the use of human scent in practical police work among U.S. and international law enforcement personnel. It includes experimental research findings from the author's laboratory work and examines canine scent work from multiple search categories as described in SWGDOG FBI guidelines.

Incitement in International Law

Wibke K. Timmermann, Legal Aid Western Australia
Series: Routledge Research in International Law

This book offers a comprehensive study of incitement in its various forms in international law. It discusses the status of incitement to hatred in human rights law and examines its harms and dangers as well as the impact of a prohibition on freedom of speech. The book additionally presents a detailed definition of punishable incitement. In this context, Wibke K. Timmermann argues that incitement should be recognized as the crime of persecution, where it is utilized within a system of persecutory measures by the State or a similarly powerful organization.

Intellectual Property and New Technologies

Edited by David Wishart, La Trobe University, Aus

This volume of Law in Context focuses on the legal issues raised by the digital revolution. It presents new perspectives on familiar questions about the effectiveness of intellectual property in promoting innovation and protecting privacy. The articles address such issues as:

heritage and cultural property protection in an age of instant reproduction and voracious knowledge exploitation; the difficulties faced by developing nations and by China in dealing with intellectual property; cyberspace and the implications for privacy law; improving the patent system to promote innovation; and copyright and digitisation processes in New Zealand museums.

International Trials and Reconciliation

Assessing the Impact of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

Janine Natalya Clark

Series: Transitional Justice

This book investigates the relationship between criminal trials and reconciliation, through a particular focus on the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY). Using detailed empirical data – including qualitative interviews and observations from five years of fieldwork – to analyse the ICTY's impact on reconciliation in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia and Kosovo, the book argues that reconciliation is not a realistic aim for a criminal court. Challenging many of the common assumptions about the benefits of criminal trials, this innovative extremely timely study will be invaluable for those with interests in the theory and practice of transitional justice.

Justice for Victims before the International Criminal Court

Luke Moffett, Queen's University Belfast

Series: Routledge Research in International Law

The International Criminal Court has been heralded as offering 'justice for victims' with its innovative provisions for victims, such as participation and reparations. However, the need to assess the role of victims within the Court's legal framework and jurisprudence remains pressing. Drawing on human rights law and victimology as well as international criminal law scholarship, this book analyses the extent to which the ICC can deliver justice to victims of international crimes. The book advances an innovative theory of justice for victims before setting out solutions to the current challenges and the increasing costs of international criminal justice.

Law and the Making of the Soviet World

The Red Demiurge

Scott Newton, SOAS, University of London, UK

Drawing on a wide range of sources, this book analyses the central significance of law in the design and operation of Soviet economic, political, and social institutions. Scott Newton argues here that the Soviet order was a work of law. Positing that it was an exemplary case of the uses to which law was put in twentieth century industrialised societies, this book provides an insightful account of the significance of modern law to the Soviet case, but also the significance of the Soviet case for modern law. Law and the Making of the Soviet World: The Red Demiurge will interest students and scholars of law, politics, and history; as well as those with a general interest in the Soviet state.

Lawyers and Savages

Ancient History and Legal Realism in the Making of Legal Anthropology

Kaius Tuori, University of Helsinki, Finland

Lawyers and Savages explores the rise and fall of legal primitivism, and its connection to the colonial encounter. Through examples such as blood feuds, communalism, ordeals, ritual formalism and polygamy, the book traces the intellectual revolution of legal anthropology. The book also details how legal realism drew on anthropology in order to help counter the hypothetical constructs of legal formalism. Finally, this book shows how, despite the explicit rejection, the central themes of primitive law continue to influence current ideas – about indigenous legal systems, but also of the place and role of law in development.

Militant Democracy

Undemocratic Political Parties and Beyond

Svetlana Tyulkina, University of New South Wales, Australia

This book offers a comparative look at the legal concept of militant democracy. It combines an analysis of the theoretical considerations of this concept with an investigation of its practice in a number of countries and on a diverse array of issues. The book provides a thematic treatment of militant democracy practices in a range of jurisdictions, including Australia, Turkey, Spain, Germany, Israel, India, the USA and the Council of Europe. Recent developments in the understanding of militant democracy are considered such as its possible extension to address threats other than undemocratic political parties such as dangerous religious movements and the threat of terrorism.

Moral Rhetoric and the Criminalisation of Squatting

Vulnerable Demons

Edited by Lorna Fox O'Mahony, University of Essex, UK, David O'Mahony, University of Essex, UK and Robin Hickey, Queen's University, Belfast

This collection of critical essays considers the criminalisation of squatting from a range of different theoretical, policy and practice perspectives. While the practice of squatting has long been criminalized in some jurisdictions, the last few years have witnessed the emergence of a newly constituted political concern with unlawful occupation of land. This collection explores the significance of measures to criminalize squatting, both in England and in other jurisdictions, for squatters, owners and communities, bringing in wider themes relating to political philosophy, social policy, criminal justice and the nature of ownership.

New Governance and the Role of Courts

Deliberative Democracy in the European Union

Emilia Korkea-aho

This book engages and advances the current debate on new governance by providing a much-needed analysis of its relationship to law. Focusing on the European Union, this book offers a new account of the role of the courts in new governance and demonstrates how the role of courts has been transformed by the legal and political experimentation currently taking place in the EU. This book argues that, far from undermining the power of the courts, governance regimes assist their functioning. Its analysis will be of considerable interest for lawyers, political scientists and anyone interested in the transformation of the judiciary in the era of new governance.

Protest, Property and the Commons

Performances of Law and Resistance

Lucy Finchett-Maddock, University of Sussex, UK

Series: Social Justice

This book examines the occupation of space as a mode of resistance. Drawing on the phenomena of social centres as radical political communities that use the space of squatted, rented, or owned property, the book considers how such communities offer an alternative form of law to that of the state. It also addresses the relationship between this form of law and recent protest phenomena, such as the Occupy movement. Contributing to an ongoing re-imagining of the law of property, Protest, Property and the Commons will be of interest to anyone concerned with the role of law in political protest.

Public Service Broadcasting 3.0

Legal Design for the Digital Present

Mira Burri, World Trade , University of Bern, Switzerland

Series: Routledge Research in Media Law

The digital media environment with its multiplicity of platforms and new modes of content production, distribution and access has challenged the traditional model of public service broadcasting (PSB). This book explores whether and how PSB should adapt to reflect the conditions of the digital media environment, so that it can effectively and efficiently continue to serve its public mandate in an environment of technological complexity and change. It advances a future-oriented model of Public Service Media, which is capable of matching an environment of governance and technological complexity and fluidity and which is not bound to certain national specificities.

Regulating Tobacco, Alcohol and Unhealthy Foods

The Legal Issues

Edited by Tania Voon, University of Melbourne, Australia, Andrew Mitchell, University of Melbourne, Australia and Jonathan Liberman

The need to reduce disability and premature deaths from non-communicable diseases (NCDs) is increasingly engaging international organisations and national and sub-national governments. In this book, experts from a range of backgrounds provide insights into the legal implications of regulating tobacco, alcohol and unhealthy foods, all of which are risk factors for NCDs. As individual countries and the international community move to increase targeting of these risk factors, affected industries are turning to national and international law to challenge the resulting regulations.

Roberto Esposito

Law, Community and the Political

Peter Langford, Edge Hill University
Series: Nomikoi Critical Legal Thinkers

This book provides an introduction to Roberto Esposito's increasingly influential reconceptualisation of the relationship between law and community. Focusing primarily on Esposito's works Catégories de l'Impolitique, Communitas and Bios, and Biopolitics and Philosophy, this book argues that his fundamental rethinking of the notion of community breaks with the existing framework of political and legal philosophy, critiquing its traditions and rethinking the very form of critique. Shades of Grey - Domestic and Sexual Violence Against Women

Law Reform and Society

Anna Carline, Liverpool John Moores University, UK and Patricia Easteal, Canberra University, Australia

This book investigates the 'hidden gender' of so-called neutral or objective legal principles that structure the law addressing violence against women. The book contextualizes and critiques relevant legislation, case law, and secondary studies from diverse geographical locations - including the UK, Australia, and North America. Aiming to help improve government, community and legal responses to women who experience violence, Shades of Grey - Domestic and Sexual Violence Against Women will assist law-makers, academics, policy-makers and a wider audience in understanding the complexities of violence against women, as well as the potential and the limits of law in this area.

Spatial Justice

Body, Landscape, Atmosphere

Andreas Philippopoulos-Mihalopoulos, University of Westminster, London, UK

Series: Space, Materiality and the Normative

Spatial justice is the most radical offspring of law's recent turn to space, since, as this book demonstrates, spatial justice can be found in the core of most contemporary legal and political issues – issues such as geopolitical conflicts, global commons, population movement and environmental resource scarcity. Written by a leading theorist in the area, Spatial Justice forges a new interdisciplinary understanding of space and normativity, while offering a fresh approach to current geopolitical, legal and ecological issues.

Subversive Property

Law and the Production of Spaces of Belonging

Sarah Keenan, SOAS, United Kingdom
Series: Social Justice

This book explores the relationship between space, subjectivity and property in order to invert conventional socio-legal understandings of property that revolve around possession. Drawing on feminist and critical race theory, the book shifts the focus away from the propertied subject and onto the broader spaces in which the propertied subject is located. Thinking about property in terms of space and belonging reveals new political possibilities for property. The theory of property as a spatially contingent relation of belonging offers a new and conceptually useful way of analysing a wide range of socio-legal issues.

The Concept of the Civilian

Legal Recognition, Adjudication and the Trials of International Criminal Justice

Claire Garbett, Goldsmiths College, University of London
Series: Transitional Justice

This book examines how the processes of international criminal justice construct legal recognition of the civilian victims of contemporary armed conflicts. Drawing on a detailed case-study of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY), this book examines how civilians are understood as a social and legal category of persons and how legal practices shape victim identities and redress in relation to these persons. Combining socio-legal concepts and methodologies with insights from transitional justice scholarship, Claire Garbett traces the historical emergence of the concept of the civilian.

The English Legal System

2014-2015

Gary Slapper, NYU London, UK and David Kelly, formerly at Staffordshire University, UK

Slapper and Kelly's The English Legal System explains and critically assesses how our law is made and applied. Annually updated, this authoritative textbook clearly describes the legal rules of England and Wales and their collective influence as a sociocultural institution.

Slapper & Kelly has become the classic textbook in its field, needing no introduction to UK law lecturers who have trusted its reliability and currency, recommending it to generations of students.

The Greening of European Business under EU Law

Taking Article 11 TFEU Seriously

Edited by Beate Sjøfjell, University of Oslo, Norway and Anja Wiesbrock

Series: Routledge Research in European Union Law

This book analyses the principles of sustainable development and environmental integration in the EU legal system with a particular focus on Article 11 TFEU and its impact on business in the EU. The book looks at the role played by the environmental integration principle in EU law at the level of European legislation and of Member State practice. Contributors to the volume identify the main legal issues arising from Article 11 TFEU in various policy areas affecting European businesses, such as company law, insurance and state aid. In drawing together these strands the book sets out what the requirement of environmental integration means for the regulation of business in the EU.

The Law and the Dead

Heather Conway, Queen's University Belfast, UK

This book focuses on the substantive laws around disposal of the recently deceased and associated issues around their post-mortem fate. The book looks primarily at the laws and related policy issues in England and Wales but also offers a comparative approach, drawing heavily on material from other comparable common law jurisdictions including Australia, New Zealand, Canada and the United States. The book provides an in-depth, contextual and comparative analysis of the substantive laws and policy issues around burial, exhumation and the posthumous treatment of the dead, including commemoration.

The Legal Order of the European Union

The Institutional Role of the Court of Justice

Timothy Moorhead, University of Kent, UK

Series: Routledge Research in European Union Law

The book considers the values underlying legal ordering concerning the law of the European Union and its expression through the practices of the European Court of Justice. The book examines the relationship between Union and Member State legal orders and the institutional practices of the Court of Justice in giving effect to the values associated with the Union legal order. The book combines diverse theoretical insights regarding law, along with analyses of case judgments of the Court of Justice in order to show how the EU legal order is indicative of a broader understanding of the role of values within legal orders than that portrayed in current theoretical accounts.

The Reconstruction of the Juridico-Political

Affinity and Divergence in Hans Kelsen and Max Weber

Edited by Ian Bryan, Lancaster University, UK, Peter Langford, Edge Hill University and John McGarry, Edge Hill University, UK

Reassessing the usual distinction between legal positivism and the sociology of law, this book explores the convergences and divergences in Kelsen's and Weber's interventions in the fields of political philosophy, political sociology and legal history. The book also highlights their respective conceptions of modernity, and of the legitimacy and effectiveness of law, to re-examine the assumption that Kelsen and Weber represent two radically different approaches to the study of law.

The Remaking of the Courts

Less-Adversarial Practice and the Constitutional Role of the Judiciary in Australia

Sarah Murray

The Remaking of the Courts: Less-Adversarial Practice and the Constitutional Role of the Judiciary in Australia centres on the changing nature of courts within the Australian constitutional context. In essence, the monograph explores the degree to which less-adversarial innovations and the remodelling of the judicial role can be accommodated within Australia's constitutional framework.

Third Parties' Rights and Liabilities under Bills of Lading

Edited by Filippo Lorenzon, University of Southampton, UK

As transport speed increases and global trade intensifies, contracts for the carriage of goods and attendant relationships are becoming ever more complex. This timely publication brings together expert contributions from around the globe, looking both at the theoretical background of the bill of lading as well as its application in practice today. With third party involvement at an all-time high, this text also discusses the difficult question of third party rights and liabilities under a number of different jurisdictions. Covering English, US and EU law, this work provides a comparative and authoritative source of information for maritime lawyers worldwide.

Towards a System of European Criminal Justice

The Problem of Admissibility of Evidence

Andrea Ryan, University of Limerick, Ireland

Series: Routledge Research in European Union Law

With the developing landscape of a European criminal justice sphere comes an increasing imperative for scholars and practitioners to gain some insight into the diversity that exists in the criminal justice systems of European Union Member States. This book explores the mutual admissibility of evidence; a facet of EU criminal justice that is proving difficult to realise. Drawing upon case studies from Ireland, France and Italy, and adopting a legal cultural perspective, and enriched by the author's observations of criminal trials, the book presents a detailed analysis of the developments to date in EU criminal justice and evidence law.

Urban Commons

Rethinking the City

Edited by Christian Borch, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark and Martin Kornberger, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark

Series: Space, Materiality and the Normative

This book rethinks the city by examining its various forms of collectivity – their atmospheres, modes of exclusion and self-organization, as well as how they are governed – through a critical discussion of the notion of urban commons. The idea of the commons has received surprisingly little attention in urban theory, given that the city may well be conceived as a shared resource. This book rethinks what a city might be by studying how the notion of the commons opens up new understandings of what urban collectivities are, including urban diversity, governance, belonging, sexuality, subcultures, emergencies, and creativity.

Human Smuggling and Border Crossings

Gabriella E. Sanchez

Series: Routledge Studies in Criminal Justice, Borders and Citizenship

This book contributes to the current scholarship on migration by providing a window into the lives and experiences of those behind the facilitation of irregular border crossing journeys. Based on fieldwork conducted among coyotes in Arizona - the main point of entry for irregular migrants in the United States by the turn of the 21st Century - this project goes beyond traditional narratives of victimization and financial exploitation. The testimonies of the men and women involved in smuggling reveal nuanced understandings of protection and support, smuggling's role in fostering community ties, and its changing nature in light of border and immigration enforcement.

Juvenile Justice

International Perspectives, Models and Trends

Edited by John A. Winterdyk, Mount Royal University, Calgary, Alberta, Canada

A comparative analysis of juvenile justice systems, this book features the contributions of international experts. Topics for each country represented include the history of juvenile justice, the nature and status of delinquency, current legislation and how well the legislation complies with the Standard Minimum Rules of the Administration of Juvenile Justice as defined by the UN, age limits for juvenile offenders, legal and social issues, and theoretical considerations. The book enables readers to compare the relative strengths and weaknesses of different juvenile justice models, and to examine all countries in light of the larger international phenomena of delinquency.

Land of White Gloves?

A History of Crime and Punishment in Wales

Richard Ireland, University of Aberystwyth, UK

Series: History of Crime in the UK and Ireland

The history of crime in Wales is intimately connected to questions of the nature and identity of 'the State'. Including original materials, this book is structured around the themes of the historical changes to and limitations upon the power of the state: operational, jurisdictional, 'horizontal' and 'vertical'.

Land of White Gloves? provides a comprehensive overview of the history of crime and punishment in Wales and will appeal to students and scholars of criminal justice history.

Logical Investigative Methods

Critical Thinking and Reasoning for Successful Investigations

Robert J. Girod, Robert J. Girod Consulting, LLC, Fort Wayne, Indiana, USA

This book describes how to use logic, reasoning, critical thinking, and the scientific method to conduct and improve criminal and civil investigations. The author discusses how investigators and attorneys can avoid assumptions and false premises and instead make valid deductions, inductions, and inferences. He explains how tools such as interview and interrogation can be used to detect deception and profile unknown individuals and suspects. The book is aimed at improving not only the conduct of investigations, but also the logical use of cognitive tools, analytical tools, documentation tools, and presentation tools to win cases.

Police Investigative Interviews and Interpreting

Context, Challenges, and Strategies

Sedat Mulayim, RMIT University, Australia, Miranda Lai, RMIT University, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia and Caroline Norma

Series: Advances in Police Theory and Practice

Investigative interviewing largely draws from studies in psychology. Increasingly incorporated in police training, it is also used in other settings including customs procedures, employer-employee interviews, and insurance claim investigations. A professional reference that can be used in police training or in any venue where an interpreter is used, this book examines interview challenges found in today's multilingual environments. It presents the main concepts and practices of both interpreting and investigative interviewing and explains how they can best be managed when interviews are conducted via an interpreter.

Policing Cybercrime

Networked and Social Media Technologies and the Challenges for Policing

Edited by David S. Wall, Durham University, UK and Matthew Williams, Cardiff University, UK

Cybercrime is now regarded as a major threat to society, yet common understandings of the change are developing slowly. This collection addresses the recent 'inertia' in both critical thinking and the empirical study of cybercrime and policing by adding to the literature seven interdisciplinary and critical chapters on various issues relating to the new generation of cybercrimes currently being experienced.

Questioning Capital Punishment

Law, Policy, and Practice

James R. Acker, University at Albany, USA
 Series: Criminology and Justice Studies

The death penalty has inspired controversy for centuries. Raising questions regarding capital punishment rather than answering them, Questioning Capital Punishment offers the footing needed to allow for more informed consideration and analysis of these controversies. Acker edits judicial decisions that have addressed constitutional challenges to capital punishment and its administration in the United States and uses complementary materials to offer historical, empirical, and normative perspectives about death penalty policies and practices. This book is ideal for upper-level undergraduate and graduate classes in criminal justice.

The Adult Learner

Malcolm S. Knowles, Elwood F. Holton III and Richard A. Swanson

Any adult engaged in a learning process, be that formal education, informal learning, or corporate-sponsored learning, can be described as an "adult learner". ; ; Malcolm Knowles, the founding author of this book, played a huge role in separating adult learners from child learners. His pioneering work developed the theory of andragogy, which is still relevant today and attempts to explain why adults learn differently compared to other types of learners so that learning strategies can be developed that focus on teaching adults. ; ; This book offers students and practitioners unique access to the original work and writing of Malcolm Knowles. In the new edition, current authorities in adult education and human resource development, Elwood "Ed" Holton and Richard Swanson, put Knowles' theories and work into the context of modern day adult education, linking in to new theories

Disaster Risk Management in Asia and the Pacific

Edited by Ian Davis

This book considers key trends in the Asia and the Pacific region, in terms of disaster incidence, sources of vulnerability and social and economic challenges. Eight independent internationally based authors were commissioned to write the study. The chapters are illustrated by charts, models, diagrams and tables. Throughout the study, relevant examples, drawn from the region are included to 'earth' the project in the harsh realities of risk and disaster impact.

Diversity in Organizations

A Critical Examination

Cedric Herring, University of Illinois at Chicago, Chicago, USA and Loren Henderson, Northeastern Illinois University, USA

Diversity in Organizations presents compelling evidence that directly links diversity to the bottom line. The theory is presented in an accessible manner without shying away from the contentious aspects of diversity, and provides concrete advice and guidance to those who seek to implement diversity programs and initiatives in their organizations. Students taking classes in diversity, human resource management, sociology of work, and organizational psychology will find this a comprehensive, helpful resource.

Human Resource Management in Emerging Economies

Piotr Zientara

Human Resource Management in Emerging Economies explores – by means of qualitative and quantitative research methods – the problematics of human resource management in post-communist emerging economies. The book adopts a multidisciplinary perspective, referring to theories and concepts associated with management, economics, occupational psychology and sociology, and contextualizes the discussion with a politico-historical background. This book's multi-faceted approach reflects the complex nature of the subject matter, allowing readers to develop a better understanding of the idiosyncrasies of employment relations in Eastern Europe.

International Classification of Financial Reporting 3e

Chris Nobes, Royal Holloway, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Accounting

With the growing integration of the international economy, the need for established systems of classification in financial reporting becomes ever more important. Chris Nobes asks whether classification is possible, or even useful, and offers a critical analysis of the current attempts to discern an order in the variety of accounting practices. Revised and updated to reflect the post-IFRS era, this book will be of interest to academics, postgraduates and undergraduates in international accounting, accounting theory and to international accounting professionals.

International Financial Reporting Standards

A Framework-Based Perspective

Greg F. Burton, Brigham Young University, USA and Eva K. Jermakowicz, Tennessee State University, USA

This comprehensive book links broad concepts and general accounting principles to the specific requirements of IFRS to help students develop and understand the judgments required in using a principle-based standard. It presents the concepts underlying IFRS, a framework for interpreting and applying IFRS rules, a comparison between IFRS and the US GAAP, and even a section addressing current issues on the IASB's agenda, recent developments, and expected outcomes. With cases, real-world examples, and a companion website to link theory to practice, this book is a thorough and extensive tool that will give students a competitive edge in understanding and applying IFRS.

Long-Term Community Recovery from Natural Disasters

Daniel J Alesch, Emeritus Professor, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay, USA and Lucy Arendt, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay, USA

After a natural disaster, rebuilding the physical artifact of the community is necessary, but not alone sufficient for long-term community recovery. This book addresses the need to understand how communities develop and/or decay after an extreme natural hazard event. It focuses on how these events disrupt "normal" development and change—providing an understanding of which parts of the community have to become reestablished, or made more functional, so that the community can establish or reestablish long-term viability. The book will help communities establish their "baselines" and show that, with recovery, one size does not fit all.

Market Management and Business Development in Projects

Hedley Smyth, University College London, UK

Successfully marketing and selling a project to investors is so crucial an element of project management that it dictates whether the project is funded, and as a result, whether it can go ahead. But marketing and promotion are often not part of the competent project manager's skills set.

Market Management and Business Development in Projects is a guide to the theory of marketing and selling projects in business, a process termed "business development". This book is valuable reading for all students and specialists in project management, as well as project managers in business, management, the built environment, or indeed any industry.

Monitoring Business Performance

Models, Methods, and Tools

Per Lind, Uppsala University, Sweden

Series: Routledge Advances in Management and Business Studies

Monitoring Business Performance – Models, Methods and Tools elucidates how the assumptions and perceptions that guide performance assessment are often based on models that are poor interpretations and descriptions of reality. The author scrutinizes the models underlying a number of well-known business methods and tools, and sheds light on the assumptions and subjective perceptions that undermine their effectiveness. In doing so, he offers a unique criticism of accepting business models without questioning their relevance and applicability, and highlights the need to treat models as hypotheses, rather than as certainties.

Out of the Box Thinking for Successful Managers

William F. Roth, Kutztown University, Pennsylvania, USA DeSales University, PA, USA

Through decades of teaching management theory, the author has frequently questioned many modern-day management practices. This book explains, in a user-friendly and sometimes humorous manner, why these practices are based on worn out logic that needs to be rethought. After showing where the holes lie, the book offers alternative approaches, including some that encourage a more positive and productive workplace culture. The book provides readers with simple suggestions for changes that can be highly beneficial in a well managed organization.

Project Leadership

Creating Value with an Adaptive Project Organization

Barry L. Cross, Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, Canada and M. Kathryn Brohman

Today's organizations need to introduce new products and enhance existing services faster in order to remain competitive. The common cause of project failure is that leadership fails to appreciate the extent of uncertainty and complexity in a project and therefore doesn't adapt their management structure accordingly. This book highlights how successful projects rely not just on the project team, but on the culture of executive leadership. Concepts are presented in an anecdotal manner that will suit today's leaders. The book offers straight-forward takeaways and solutions to provide executives with the tools to implement an effective project environment.

Relationship Management and the Management of Projects

Hedley Smyth, University College London, UK

Relationship management is a core skill for any project manager as they negotiate with business partners and co-ordinate between business functions. Whatever the structures and procedures an organisation has in place, they are only as good as the hands they are in, and in the project manager's ability to work effectively with those in control of the systems.

Relationship Management and the Management of Projects is a guide to successfully building and managing relationships as a project manager. This book is valuable reading for all students and specialists in project management, as well as project managers in business, management, the built environment, or indeed any industry.

The Dynamics of Open Innovation in SMEs

Pooran Wynarczyk, Newcastle University Business School, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Innovation, Organizations and Technology

Increasingly firms are moving away from carrying out R&D in-house, in isolation and secrecy, to a more open way of working involving active collaboration with other companies and institutions. Although this 'open innovation' is receiving more attention in academic research, the existing literature is largely focused on the practices of multi-national firms and generally ignores the work done by SMEs. Using a combination of theory and cutting edge quantitative investigation, this book addresses this major gap in current literature.

The Guide to Entrepreneurship

How to Create Wealth for Your Company and Stakeholders

Michael Szycher, Ph.D., Sterling Biomedical, Inc., Lynnfield, Massachusetts

Whether you want to trailblaze new products (intrapreneurship), or want to establish a new venture (entrepreneurship), this guide will serve as an invaluable resource. The book explores what constitutes entrepreneurial timber and the leadership skills to raise all the needed capital. Most new venture business failures arise from two sources: (1) opportunity is not real, or (2) the means required to pursue the idea is not available. This book will provide the aspiring entrepreneur with a "how-to-guide" to success, with concrete action plans.

Lawrence Marks, Lukasz Mazur, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA, Bhishamjit S. Chera, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA and Robert D. Adams, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA

The grand challenge for radiation oncology centers is to develop highly reliable systems and deliver value to every patient. This book is about the pathway of getting there. In a world of limited time and resources, any waste within the system serves as a distraction and as a hindrance to reliability and quality. The book describes proven concepts and examples that are borrowed from high reliability and value creation organizations to guide radiation oncology centers towards achieving their patient safety and quality goals.

Warranty Claims Reduction

A Modern Approach with Continuous Improvement Techniques

Ronald Blank, Senior Quality Engineer and Productivity Consultant

This book explains how to reduce warranty claims, thereby increasing profits by lowering warranty expenses. The book summarizes the traditional approach to reducing warranty claims by improving quality and reliability and protecting product from damage in transit. Then, it describes how to reduce warranty cost even further by taking a comprehensive approach that includes other ways of reducing warranty costs like improving warranty processing productivity, improving training, clarifying installation instructions, and supply chain management. The book ties directly into Lean improvement tools such as poke-yoke, failure mode effect analysis, and root-cause analysis.

A Short History of Economic Thought

Bo Sandelin, University of Gothenburg, Sweden,
Hans-Michael Trautwein, University of Oldenburg, Germany and Richard Wundrak, University of Greifswald, Germany

This new edition continues to offer the clear and concise coverage of the main schools of thought and paradigm shifts in the field that has become the volume's trademark. The book has been thoroughly updated throughout in order to reflect changes in the landscape of the field. Details on key thinkers, and aspects of the story such as the evolution of scholarship on growth and development, have been added or expanded, whilst not compromising on the book's concise approach.

Capitalism and the Political Economy of Work Time

Christoph Hermann, University of Vienna, Austria

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

This book will provide the first comprehensive and systematic overview of the attitudes of different schools of thought towards the issue of work time. Topics covered include assumptions on what determines the length of the work day and week, changes in production systems and their consequences for work time, as well as the struggle for shorter work hours and resulting work time regulations. In contrast to the prevailing trend, the book defends collective work time reductions as a measure to promote self-determination, equality, and an ecologically sustainable society.

Crisis System

A critical realist and environmental critique of contemporary economics
Edited by Roy Bhaskar, University of London, UK, Karl Georg Høyer and Petter Naess,
Norwegian Institute for Urban and Regional Research, Oslo, Norway

Series: Ontological Explorations (Routledge Critical Realism)

Informed by critical realist ontology, this proposed book will throw light on the nature and causes of three different, but strongly interconnected crises currently ravaging contemporary societies worldwide: an economic crisis, an ecological crisis, and a normative (or moral and political) crisis of an unjust and profoundly inequitable distribution of wealth, resources and life-opportunities.

Economic Growth and Income Inequality in China, India and Singapore

Trends and Policy Implications

Pundarik Mukhopadhaya, Macquarie University, Australia, G Shantakumar, National University of Singapore, Singapore and Bhanoji Rao, Lee Kuan Yew School of Policy, Singapore

Inequality and growth are the 2 key issues discussed in this book. Empirical evidences are analysed with a well-developed methodology for the 3 diverse societies – China, India and Singapore. Authors have attempted to analyse the links between economic growth and inequality in the light of rapid economic growth phase and adduced important policy implications. Studies on inequality and growth of China and India abound, given the comparable and very large demographic size. This book is not just one more imitation of the known titles. Several concepts and methodologies used in this book as well as the novelty of analyses and policy implications are a definitive value addition.

Economic Policy Coordination in the Euro-Area

Armin Steinbach

Series: Routledge Studies in the European Economy

The book provides a new perspective on the evolution of economic policy coordination in the European Union (EU), using the notion of externalities across countries and interdependences across policies to explain the new governance in EU economic policy. Written in response to the current Eurozone crisis, the book provides the first comprehensive analysis of measures taken during the euro crisis to improve the functioning of the European Monetary Union. It develops a unique analytical framework to explain the shift in the coordination of economic policies throughout the EU during the crisis, which led to stronger coordination between fiscal, monetary and wage policies.

Poverty and Inequality in India

K. P. Kannan

This volume critiques the much-touted claim that market-friendly economic reform policies in India will 'trickle down' to the poor and help reduce poverty and deprivation. The author provides an exclusive and empirical perspective in linking employment, poverty and inequality, with regard to the impact of the high-growth performance of the Indian economy since the early 1990s.

Edited by Emily Chamlee-Wright, Washington College, USA

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

This book argues that institutions of liberal learning should be cultivating the 'art of self-governance' and that by doing so they are better preparing their students for both the workplace and an active role in civil society than other forms of education. Drawing on economic theory, institutional analysis, education studies and more, the book explores what institutions explicitly committed to liberal learning can do on a day-to-day basis to provide the intellectual, creative and physical space in which better self-governance can be both practiced and taught.

Of Synthetic Finance

Three Essays of Speculative Materialism

Benjamin Lozano

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

Synthetic finance revolutionizes materialism such that we can now create wealth in the process of universally distributing it. While financial innovation in global capitalism provided the conditions for the 2008 financial crisis, it has also engineered a set of financial technologies with universal distributive potential. This book explains this possibility and demonstrates how it can be achieved through the use of rigorous ontological exposition of the radical, nomadic and distributive power of synthetic finance.

Routledge Handbook of the History of Global Economic Thought

Edited by Vincent Barnett, University of Birmingham, UK

The Routledge Handbook of the History of Global Economic Thought offers the first comprehensive overview of the long-run history of economic thought from a truly international perspective. Although globalization has facilitated the spread of ideas between nations, the history of economics has tended to be studied either thematically (by topic), in terms of different currents of thought, or individually (by economist). Work has been published in the past on the economic thought traditions of specific countries, but this pioneering volume is unique in offering a wide-ranging comparative account of the development of economic ideas and philosophies on the international stage.

The Political Economy and Media Coverage of the European Economic Crisis

the case of Ireland

Julien Mercille, University College Dublin

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

The European economic crisis has been ongoing since 2008 and while austerity has spread over the continent it has failed to revive economies. The media have played an important ideological role in presenting the policies of economic and political elites in a favourable light, even if the latter's aim has been to shift the burden of adjustment onto citizens. This book explains why, using a critical political economic perspective and focusing on the case of Ireland to draw conclusions often applicable to Europe and the United States. Throughout, Ireland is compared with contemporary and historical examples to contextualise the arguments made.

Utilitarianism and Malthus' Virtue Ethics

Respectable, Virtuous and Happy

Sergio Cremaschi

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Economics

This book takes a new perspective on Thomas Malthus' attitude to Utilitarianism. In particular, the book argues that moral assumptions lie at the heart of Malthus' population theory and political economy.

In exploring this concept, Cremaschi examines the debates on Malthus's Utilitarianism, in particular those between Donald Winch and Samuel Hollander. Through this analysis, the book offers a fascinating perspective on the mind of Malthus, and in particular on his ethical and theological views, and on the influences that shaped his perspectives on these issues. At the same time, the book offers a penetrating insight into the wider complexities of 18th century Anglican ethics.

Cities of the Global South Reader

Edited by Faranak MirafTAB and Neema Kudva

The Cities of the Global South Reader adopts a fresh and critical approach to the field of urbanization in the developing world, which has seen significant shifts in its thematic and geographic focus since it first began to be defined in the mid-twentieth century. This Reader is thematically structured and pulls together a diverse set of readings from scholars across the world to provide both early conversations as well as new and emerging debates to reflect the diverse trajectories of urbanization processes in the context of the restructured global alignments in the last three decades.

Companion to Urban Design

Edited by Tridib Banerjee, University of Southern California, USA and Anastasia Loukaitou-Sideris, University of Los Angeles, USA

Today urban design has emerged as an important area of intellectual pursuit, with applications at many different scales – ranging from the block or street scale to the scale of metropolitan and regional landscapes. The field interfaces with many aspects of contemporary public policy – multiculturalism, economic development, climate change, energy conservation, sustainable development, community livability, and related issues. The Companion to Urban Design covers core, foundational, and pioneering concepts through a wide selection of original contributions from internationally renowned scholars and practitioners. A must-buy for students, scholars, teachers and practitioners of urban design.

TEXTBOOK

Comparative Urban Studies

Edited by Hilary Silver

Series: The Metropolis and Modern Life

This collection of short original essays by an interdisciplinary group of cutting-edge urban scholars makes the case for the explicitly comparative analysis of cities. It not only addresses how to compare, but also why we should compare urban life across localities. Comparison is a strategy for expanding the urban imagination as well as theorizing in a globally interconnected age. Indeed, cities are increasingly comparing and ranking themselves as they compete for preeminence in an interconnected world.

Cultures and Disasters

Understanding Cultural Framings in Disaster Risk Reduction

Edited by Fred Krüger, University of Erlangen-Nürnberg, Germany, Greg Bankoff, University of Hull, UK, Terry Cannon and Lisa Schipper, Stockholm Environment Institute, Sweden

Series: Routledge Studies in Hazards, Disaster Risk and Climate Change

Why do those affected by severe flooding return early to their homes or choose not to evacuate? How is the forced resettlement of small-scale farmers living along the foothills of an active volcano in the Philippines impacting on their day-to-day lives? Making sense of such questions is only possible by understanding how the decision-making of societies at risk is embedded in culture, and how intervention measures acknowledge or neglect cultural needs. Cultures and Disasters uses an interdisciplinary and global approach to explore this key dimension of disaster management; the editors have expertly drawn together and discussed contributions from a number of leading academics in the field.

Image Analysis, Classification and Change Detection in Remote Sensing

With Algorithms for ENVI/IDL and Python, Third Edition

Morton J. Canty, Juelich Research Center, Germany

The book introduces advanced undergraduates and graduates to techniques used in the processing of remote sensing digital imagery. It is intended for people who are working with remote sensing data in image analysis and GIS environments. The material is self-contained and illustrated with many programming examples in IDL, a computer language which supports the professional graphical user interface ENVI, one of the leading environments for remote sensing imagery analysis. The new edition includes Python-coded versions of the main image analysis algorithms discussed in the text, making it accessible to students and teachers without expensive ENVI/IDL licenses.

Intergenerational Space

Edited by Robert Vanderbeck, University of Leeds, UK and Nancy Worth

Series: Routledge Studies in Human Geography

Intergenerational Space brings together leading scholars to address pressing questions about the nature of contemporary generational divisions as well as the complex ways in which members of different generations can be involved in each other's lives. It explores how particular types of spaces and spatial arrangements, such as cities, neighbourhoods, intuitions and leisure sites facilitate and limit intergenerational contact and encounters. This book also explores whether generational separation and segregation are significant social problems and, if so, how this can be improved. It will be of interest to students, academics and practitioners across the social sciences.

Knowledge and the City

Concepts, Applications and Trends of Knowledge-Based Urban Development

Francisco Javier Carrillo, Tecnológico de Monterrey, Mexico, Tan Yigitcanlar, Queensland University of Technology, Australia, Blanca García, El Colegio de la Frontera Norte, USA and Antti Lönnqvist, Tampere University of Technology, Finland

Series: Routledge Studies in Human Geography

This book underlines the growing importance of knowledge for the competitiveness of cities and their regions. Examining the role of knowledge - in its economic, socio-cultural, spatial and institutional forms - for urban and regional development, identifying the preconditions for innovative use of urban and regional knowledge assets and resources, and developing new methods to evaluate the performance and potential of knowledge-based urban and regional development, the book provides an in-depth and comprehensive understanding of both theoretical and practical aspects of knowledge-based development and its implications and prospects for cities and regions.

Reconstructing Quaternary Environments

J. John Lowe, University of London Royal Holloway, UK and Michael J.C Walker, University of Wales, Trinity St David, UK

The years since the 2nd edition of Reconstructing Quaternary Environments have seen a huge increase in the volume of literature on the Quaternary. New methods and technological advances have given rise to a number of multi-disciplinary research groups looking to offer insights into short- and long-term climatic changes. Illustrated in colour throughout, this long-anticipated new edition has been updated to address new developments and to freshly examine evidence on the history and scale of environmental changes during the period. A new final chapter demonstrates how results using these different methods and approaches can be synergised to provide an overview of global environmental change.

Territorial Cohesion in Rural Europe

The Relational Turn in Rural Development

Edited by Andrew Copus, Nordic Centre for Spatial Development, Sweden and Philomena de Lima, University of the Highlands and Islands, UK

Series: Regions and Cities

Across Europe there is a rapidly changing context for undertaking regional development. In the 20th century, development of the former planned economies (Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Slovakia), was defined by these countries differences, rather than their common ideological roots. These disparities altered over time and were marked by changing social structures. However, the ranking of regions has remained the same as core areas have strengthened their positions while the structural obstacles to the modernisation of peripheral areas have remained due to a lack of coherent regional policy.

The Internet as Second Action Space

Aharon Kellerman, University of Haifa

One of the most significant and important advancements in information & communication technology over the past twenty years is the introduction and expansion of the internet. Now almost universally available the internet brings us email, global voice and video communications, research & reference repositories, and almost unlimited opportunities for daily activities. Bridging geographical distances in unprecedented ways, the internet has impacted all aspects of our daily lives -from facilitating the running of businesses, the attainment of services and keeping in touch with friends and family. Kellerman expertly explores the concept of the internet as a second action space.

Urban Political Economy & Ecology of Automobility

Driving Cities, Driving Inequality, Driving Politics

Edited by Alan Walks

Series: Routledge Studies in Urbanism and the City

Just how resilient are our urban societies to energy, environmental and financial shocks? How might the recent series of financial crises be related to automobile dependence and patterns of urban automobile use? What can we learn from the politics of mobility and social movement within cities? This volume provides an holistic and reflexive account of the role played by automobility in differentiating social, economic and political life in the contemporary city - and the effect of city living on automobility. Split into three thematic sections, this book is a must for those working on theorizing the city and automobility, as well as those conducting empirical analyses on these issues.

Basic Services for All in an Urbanizing World

Edited by United Cities and Local Governments

UCLG's third global report on Decentralization and Local Democracy (GOLD III) examines the quality and extent of basic service provision and the current state-of-play of the local governance of basic services around the world. Each chapter is written by teams of specialists from that region. The report explains the role of local government in facilitating universal access to basic services, and the knock-on effects for reducing poverty and economic and social inequality. It includes discussions of best practices, significant case studies, emerging regional and global trends, and future challenges.

China's Foreign Relations and the Survival of Autocracies

Julia Bader, German Development Institute (DIE), Germany

Series: Routledge Explorations in Development Studies

Is the rise of China a cause of autocratic longevity? The Chinese government has frequently been criticised for propping up anti-democratic governments, whether in blocking UN sanctions on human rights violators or making huge investments in resource rich, but repressive countries.

This book investigates the rise of China as an emerging major power and seeks to answer the question whether China's rise stabilises other non-democratic leaders in the world. This important contribution is of great interest to students and researchers in Development Studies, Asian Studies, International Relations, and International Political Economy.

Conflict, Peace, Security and Development

Theories and Methodologies

Edited by Helen Hintjens, Institute of Social Studies, The Netherlands and Dubravka Zarkov, Institute of Social Studies, The Netherlands

This book addresses methodological challenges in contemporary approaches to conflict, violence and peace and development. Whilst classical approaches linked development with peace, security has become central to understandings of both war and peacetime. This book uniquely reflects on how to deal with the convergence of war and peace in the context of global development. Theoretical, methodological and ethical issues emerge from the critical reviews of academic discourses and case-study based chapters from across the world, including Sri Lanka, Ghana, Colombia and Rwanda.

Global Trends in Land Tenure Reform

Gender Impacts

Edited by Caroline S. Archambault and Annelies Zoomers

Series: Routledge Studies in Gender and Development

This book explores the gendered dimensions of recent land governance transformations across the globe, shedding light on how the intersection of these complex forces are reconfiguring livelihoods and impacting women's positions, tenure security and well-being. It brings together empirical community case studies that describe, historicize, and situate land (or land-based resource) governance transformation processes as a product of contemporary forces and regional specificities. Each contribution carefully analyzes the gendered dimensions of these transformations, exploring how women are impacted by and respond to these processes of change.

Nation-Building in the Baltic States

Transforming Governance, Social Welfare, and Security in Northern Europe

Edited by Gundar J. King and David E. McNabb, Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Washington, USA

This book explores the characteristics of the Baltic states as positioned in the northeast corridor in terms of military strife and polity development such as democratization. It then details governments' efforts to abet transparency and trust by way of developing new public and private institutions for advancements like innovation and private wealth creation. The book concludes with a realistic picture of future hurdles for this region, looking at lingering challenges and regional instabilities, policy mistakes not to be made again, and recommendations for national planning and resource management.

Religion and Urbanism

Reconceptualising Sustainable Cities for South Asia

Edited by Yamini Narayanan, La Trobe University, Australia

Religion and Urbanism contributes to an expanded understanding of the notion of 'sustainable cities' in the context of South Asia by demonstrating that religion exerts a significant influence on the nature of urban development in the region. The book argues that the multiple, often conflicting and complicated ways in which religion or the multiplicity of religions enable or challenge socially equitable and ecologically sustainable urbanisation must thus be considered in analyses of 'sustainable urban development' of the region.

Research and Fieldwork in Development

Edited by Daniel Hammett, Chasca Twyman and Mark Graham

Research and Fieldwork in Development explores both traditional and cutting edge research methods, from interviews and ethnography to spatial data and digital methods. Each chapter provides the reader with an understanding of the theoretical basis of research methods, reflects on their practice and outlines appropriate analysis techniques. The book also examines the role of new media and technologies in conducting research.

The final chapters consider the common concerns in development research and looks at the applications of ethics and risk guidelines in fieldwork. The volume is further supported by a selection of real-life case studies as contributed by global experts in the field.

Reversing Urban Decline

Why and How Sports, Entertainment, and Culture Turn Cities into Major League Winners, Second Edition

Mark S. Rosentraub, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, USA

This book explains how sports centers factor into downtown economies. Dubious planning decisions surrounding large-scale centers have led to stagnation rather than revitalization. But with the right planning, design, and financing, large-scale centers can be integrated into a development area with successful returns. Combining theory and practice, the book offers insightful, detailed studies of some of the most dramatic cases of city arena projects. The new edition incorporates longer-term data on the original case studies, and adds cases in Denver, Minneapolis, Phoenix, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Diego, as well as information on Canadian development projects.

Series: Routledge Studies in African Development

The book is a comparative study of the prominent quest for self-determination and secessionism cases in Africa. It further examines the theoretical, international law, and charters of the United Nations and the Organisation of African Unity (OAU)/African Union (AU) stand on the issue of self-determination and secessionism. It explores whether self-determination and secessionism leads to peace, stability, development and democratisation in conflict-ridden societies. The book extensively analyses factors such as geo-political, economic, security and ideological that determine the outcome of the quest for self-determination and secession.

Sentiments of Aid

Affect, Representation and International Development

Anke Schwittay, University of Auckland, New Zealand

Series: Rethinking Development

This book brings together two sets of development questions usually considered separately: the affective investments in humanitarian and development aid and the latter's use of visual representation and digital media. The author interweaves analysis of both to directly address young people's investments in charitable giving, mediated through websites and tours. Using the example of microfinance - the inclusion of the world's poor people into formal financial services - this book analyzes how the participation of financial inclusion supporters in global poverty alleviation efforts is shaped by affective sentiments, relationships and collectivities.

The European Territory

From Historical Roots to Global Challenges

Jacques Robert, The University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong

Series: Regions and Cities

Originally published in French as Le territoire européen; des racines aux enjeux globaux, this book reflects the enormous changes that Europe has experienced in the past half century. In a period of immense upheaval, the continent has experienced increased integration, largely through the development of the European Union, heightened urbanization and a changing rural landscape while economic and commercial activities have impressed their stamp on the whole scene.

The Language of Global Development

A Misleading Geography

Marcin Wojciech Solarz

Series: Routledge Studies in Development and Society

A number of essential and ubiquitous, but typically taken-for-granted, geographical concepts and assumptions underlie development theory. This book explores how in this crucial, interdisciplinary, and global field of study, terms such as "Third World" and "Global South" are commonly deployed, yet are almost never actually defined, much less critically appraised, even in critical theory. Such terms are both morally and ideologically freighted, yet in markedly different ways in different contexts and by different interpretive communities.

The Paradoxes of Aid Work

Passionate Professionals

Silke Roth, University of Southampton, UK

Series: Routledge Humanitarian Studies

This book explores the lives of people working in aid, analysing the processes that lead to the involvement in development cooperation, emergency relief and human rights work and what impact aid work has on the life-courses of aid workers, including their relationships with friends, family and partners. Rich reflexive data allows the author to theorize about the often contradictory experiences of those involved in development cooperation, emergency relief and human rights work. The book addresses power relations not just between aid recipients and donors but also among aid personnel.

TEXTBOOK

Understanding Human Ecology

A Systems Approach to Sustainability

Robert Dyball, Australian National University, Australia and Barry Newell, Australian National University, Australia

From climate change to world poverty, we are currently facing a vast array of complex challenges which are part of an inter-related web of social and natural systems. Human ecology provides an approach to these problems, a way to understand them holistically and to manage them more effectively. This book is the first to offer a coherent conceptual framework for Human Ecology - a clear method for interpreting the many systems we are part of and the problems we face. Blending natural, social and cognitive sciences with dynamical systems theory, the book offers important systems approaches for anyone looking to manage these complex problems and the transition to sustainability.

Anthropology and Anthropologists

The British School in the Twentieth Century

Adam Kuper

An entertaining and provocative account of British social anthropology. Forty years after it was first published this classic work has been revisited in light of recent scholarship and developments in the field. Kuper places British social anthropology in historical and international context, sketching its changing form and influence. He describes the careers of the major theorists, their ideas and their contributions in relation to the intellectual and institutional environments in which they worked. Radically revised, the fourth edition draws on new research to probe the colonial setting and the internal politics of the discipline.

HIV/AIDS and the Social Consequences of Untamed Biomedicine

Anthropological Complicities

Graham Fordham*Series: Routledge Studies in Anthropology*

This book makes a critical examination of how anthropological and other interpretative social science research has been utilized in the field of HIV/AIDS studies. It argues that most research uncritically addresses the epidemic in terms of the questions and the research methods favored by biomedicine, and that the failure to draw on high-quality qualitative anthropological and other social science research in the modeling of the epidemic and in the design and implementation of AIDS control interventions has rendered these less successful than they might otherwise have been.

Introducing Anthropology of Religion

Culture to the Ultimate

Jack David Eller, Community College of Denver, USA

This clear and engaging guide introduces students to key areas of the field and shows how to apply an anthropological approach to the study of religion in the contemporary world. Eller covers major traditional topics as well as important but often overlooked issues such as fundamentalism and secularization. Each chapter contains lively case studies of religions practiced around the world. The second edition features updated theoretical discussion plus new ethnographic examples throughout. There is fresh material on translocal and vernacular religion. The book includes images, a glossary, discussion questions, further reading suggestions, and a companion website.

Negotiating Territoriality

Spatial Dialogues Between State and Tradition

Edited by Allan Charles Dawson, Drew University, USA, Laura Zanotti, Purdue University, USA and Ismael Vaccaro, McGill University, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in Anthropology

Territoriality is a key concept in how we understand the interaction between governmentality and the ways in which different communities use and dwell upon the land. However, it is also an unexplored area of inquiry - certainly in terms of comparative ethnography scholarship. This volume addresses the concept of territoriality, providing a broad spectrum of ethnographic case studies of spatial governance, shedding light on different forms of spatial organization and on how modern states have interacted with traditional societies' ways of using and managing territory.

Networked Anthropology

A Primer for Ethnographers

Samuel Gerald Collins, Towson University, USA and Matthew Slover Durington, Towson University, USA

Networked Anthropology explores the increasing appropriation of diverse media platforms and social media into anthropological research and teaching. The chapters consider the possibilities and challenges of multimedia, how network ecologies work, the ethical dilemmas involved, and how to use multimedia methodologies. The book combines theoretical insights with case studies, methodological sketches and pedagogical notes. Drawing on recent ethnographic work, the authors provide practical guidance in creative ways of doing networked anthropology. They point to the future of ethnography, both inside and outside the classroom, and consider ways in which networked anthropology might develop.

The Culture Industry

Selected Essays on Mass Culture

Theodor W Adorno and J. M. Bernstein

Series: Routledge Classics

The creation of the Frankfurt School of critical theory in the 1920s saw the birth of some of the most exciting and challenging writings of the twentieth century. It is out of this background that the great critic Theodor Adorno emerged. His finest essays are collected here, offering the reader unparalleled insights into Adorno's thoughts on culture. He argued that the culture industry commodified and standardized all art. In turn this suffocated individuality and destroyed critical thinking. At the time, Adorno was accused of everything from overreaction to deranged hysteria by his many detractors. The Culture Industry is an unrivalled indictment of the banality of mass culture.

The Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism

Max Weber

Series: Routledge Classics

With an introduction by Anthony Giddens

'Ought to be a set text for the No Logo fan club.' - Steven Poole, The Guardian

Weber's best-known and most controversial work, this book remains to this day a powerful and fascinating read. The book contends that the Protestant ethic made possible and encouraged the development of capitalism in the West. Widely considered as the most informed work ever written on the social effects of advanced capitalism, it holds its own as one of the most significant books of the twentieth century. It is a work of scholarship that no informed citizen can afford to ignore. First published in English: 1930.

Michel Foucault

Series: Routledge Classics

'He is a brilliant writer.' - Maurice Cranston

In France, a country that awards its intellectuals the status other countries give their rock stars, Michel Foucault was part of a glittering generation of thinkers, one which also included Sartre, de Beauvoir and Deleuze. One of the great intellectual heroes of the twentieth century, Foucault was a man whose passion and reason were at the service of nearly every progressive cause of his time. Ethnography

Principles in Practice

Martyn Hammersley, The Open University, UK and Paul Atkinson, Cardiff University, UK

Thoroughly updated and substantially rewritten, the third edition of this popular textbook is now even more relevant and useful for students and researchers. New material includes chapters on the use of visual research methods, recent advances in feminist theory, new regimes of research regulation and a new conclusion.

Ethnography provides a systematic and coherent account of ethnographic principles and practice and also consideration of the ethical issues surrounding ethnographic research.

Throughout, the discussion draws on a wide range of illustrative material from classic and more recent studies within a global context.

An Introduction to the Sociology of Ignorance

Essays on the Limits of Knowing

Edited by Linsey McGoey, University of Essex, UK

A seminal volume in the burgeoning sociology of ignorance, this collection introduces theoretical and empirical tools for studying the productive uses of ignorance in political, social and legal organizations. From debates over death tolls during the war in Iraq, to the root causes of the global financial crisis, to poverty reduction strategies at the World Bank, contributors shed light on the unexpected ways that ignorance is actively harnessed by both the powerful and the marginalized in order to achieve different objectives.

Citizenship After Orientalism

An Unfinished Project

Edited by Engin F Isin, The Open University, UK

This collection offers a postcolonial critique of the ostensible superiority or originality of 'Western' political theory and one of its fundamental concepts, 'citizenship'. The chapters analyse the undoing, uncovering, and reinventing of citizenship as a way of investigating citizenship as political subjectivity. If it has become difficult to sustain the orientalist assumption, the question arises; how do we investigate citizenship as political subjectivity after orientalism?

Devising Consumption

Cultural Economies of Insurance, Credit and Spending

Liz McFall, The Open University, UK

Series: CRESC

Devising Consumption explores the vital role played by the financial service industries in enabling the poor to consume over the last hundred and fifty years. Spending requires means, but these industries also offered practical marketing devices that captured, captivated and enticed poor consumers. The role of these devices has been poorly understood both in the social sciences and in business studies and marketing. McFall advances the case for a more pragmatic understanding of how ordinary, dull, everyday consumption is arranged, and offers an alternative to orthodox approaches.

TEXTBOOK

Digital Sociology

Deborah Lupton

New digital media technologies have had a profound influence on everyday life and social relations for many people in developed societies, and increasingly in developing societies. This book includes many examples of how digital technologies are incorporated into everyday life by users, from social media platforms such as Twitter to technologies used by companies for the surveillance and the monitoring of consumer habits. It locates the apparently 'new' field of digital sociology within its intellectual tradition, showing the trajectory of theory and research from the days of cyber theory beginning in the 1980s until the present moment of theorising and researching 'the digital'.

Digitizing Identities

Edited by Irma van der Pløeg and Jason Pridmore

Series: Routledge Studies in Science, Technology and Society

With digitization and automation processes pervading virtually all aspects and domains of society, the routine registration of personal identifiable data is increasing at an exponential rate. This book, combining recent insights gained from several disciplines—including science and technology studies, surveillance studies, philosophy (social philosophy and philosophy of technology, and computer ethics)—with a range of empirical case studies of topics including law enforcement and policing, marketing, migration, youth care, and security, examines the ways digital technologies of identification are implicated in contemporary transformations of identity in all spheres of life.

Ethnography, Diversity and Urban Space

Edited by Mette Louise Berg, University of Oxford, UK, Ben Gidley, University of Oxford, UK and Nando Sigona, University of Birmingham, UK

Across Europe, multiculturalism as a public policy has been declared 'dead'. But everyday multiculturalism is alive and well. This book explores how people live with diversity in contemporary cities and towns across Europe. It weaves together ethnographic case studies with contemporary social and cultural theory about urban space, migration, transnationalism and everyday multiculturalism.

TEXTBOOK

Global Suburbs

Urban Sprawl from the Rio Grande to Rio de Janeiro

Lawrence Herzog, San Diego State University, USA

Series: Cultural Spaces

Global Suburbs: Urban Sprawl from the Rio Grande to Rio de Janeiro offers a critical new perspective on the emerging phenomenon of the global suburb in the western hemisphere. American suburban sprawl has created a giant human habitat stretching from Las Vegas to San Diego, and from Mexico to Brazil, presented here in a clear and comprehensive style with in depth descriptions and images. Challenging the ecological problems that stem from these flawed suburban developments, Herzog targets an often overlooked and potentially disastrous global shift in urban development. This book will give depth to courses on suburbs, development, urban studies, and the environment.

Ideology and the Fight Against Human Trafficking

Reyhan Atasü-Topcuoğlu

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

Human trafficking has become one of the most spoken-of problems of our day, and fighting it has grown into a multi-million-dollar project sector. This book is about how we all come to name various exploitative migratory experiences "human trafficking," and how we build a consensus on how to counter it.

Information Communication Technology and Social Transformation

A Social and Historical Perspective

Hugh F. Cline, Columbia University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Science, Technology and Society

This book argues that information communication technologies are not creating new forms of social structure, but rather altering long-standing institutions and amplifying existing trends of social change that have their origins in ancient times. Using a comparative historical perspective, it analyzes the applications of information communication technologies in relation to changes in norms and values, education institutions, the socialization of children, new forms of deviant and criminal behaviors, enhanced participation in religious activities, patterns of knowledge creation and use, the expansion of consumerism, and changing experiences of distance and time.

International Migration and Ethnic Relations

Critical Perspectives

Edited by Magnus Dahlstedt, Linköping University, Sweden and Anders Neergaard, Linköping University, Sweden

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

This book is a critical contribution to the understanding of the phenomena of migration and ethnicity, from a Swedish vantage point looking outwards towards a European context. It presents current academic debates and gives a theoretical overview of nine key concepts in the field of ethnic and migrations studies, but it also exemplifies how these concepts could be used in analysing specific empirical cases. It explores the following concepts: ethnicity; migration diaspora; citizenship; intersectionality; racism; right wing populism; social exclusion; and informalisation.

New Racial Landscapes

Contemporary Britain and the Neoliberal Conjuncture

Edited by Malcolm James, City University, UK, Helen Kim, London School of Economics, UK and Victoria Redclift, University of Surrey, UK

Series: Ethnic and Racial Studies

The chapters in this volume examine the racial and ethnic landscape of Britain in a contemporary era of neoliberalism and financial crisis, challenging those who suggest that we live in a post-racial society. By focusing on particular locations in Britain at a particular moment, the volume explores local stories of 'race' and racism across changing sociopolitical ground. This book is essential reading for scholars and students of race, racism, diaspora, multiculturalism, post-colonialism, transnationalism and post-race.

Oiling the Urban Economy

Land, Labour, Capital, and the State in Sekondi-Takoradi, Ghana

Franklin Obeng-Odoom, University Technology of Sydney, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in International Real Estate

Presents a critical analysis of the 'resource curse' doctrine and a review of the international evidence on oil and urban development. Examines the role of oil on property development and rights in new oil metropolis - Sekondi-Takoradi, Ghana. The author shows how institutions of varying degrees of power interact to govern land, housing, and labour in the city. He then analyses how efficient, sustainable, and equitable the outcomes of these interactions are. A comprehensive account of the tensions and contradictions in the urban economy, society, and environment of the booming Oil City. Renewable Energies

Matthias Gross, Helmholtz Centre for Environmental Research, UFZ, Germany and Rüdiger Mautz, Sociological Research Institute of Göttingen (SOFI), Germany

Series: Key Ideas

This concise book focuses on the importance of the global aspects of alternative energy consumption. Focusing on theories of energy use and possible energy transition, Renewable Energies delivers an accessible overview on the relationships between different types of energy production and their practical usages in modern societies. It evaluates different types of energy production, not independently from each other, but as culturally and socially dependent on one another. The book also reflects on challenges for social science analysis in a politically steered

READER

Reproduction

An Interdisciplinary Reader

Edited by Jennifer Reich, University of Denver, Colorado, USA and Carole Joffe

Series: Perspectives on Gender

Reproduction: An Interdisciplinary Reader takes a feminist perspective on how control of fertility plays a crucial role in matters from women's efforts to gain full citizenship to achieving their desired family size. The editors address the challenges many women face in obtaining reproductive health care services in which they are treated with dignity, and conversely how some women are subjected to unwanted services—and how these efforts intersect with class and racial inequalities. This book will bring together scholarship that explores how history, ideology, structural inequality and other social forces shape and inform contemporary reproductive policy and practice.

TEXTBOOK

Social Problems

A Human Rights Perspective

Eric Bonds, University of Mary Washington

Series: Framing 21st Century Social Issues

This short book lays out a new definition for what constitutes a social problem: the violation of a group's human rights, which are understood as commonly upheld standards about what people deserve and should be protected from in life. Evaluating U.S. society from an international human rights perspective, Bonds stresses that human rights are necessarily political and can therefore never be part of a purely objective exercise to assess wellbeing in a particular society. His approach recognizes that there is no one single interpretation of what rights mean.

This book is ideal for undergraduate sociology courses on social problems, as well as courses on social justice and human rights.

Socio-Economic Segregation in European Capital Cities

East Meets West

Edited by Tiit Tammaru, Maarten van Ham, Szymon Marcińczak and Sako Musterd, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands

Series: Regions and Cities

In recent years, society has undergone sweeping changes in the way it is impacted by government stimulation and control, the process of post-industrialisation and the globalisation of capital and labour. These changes have had a major impact on housing segmentation and residential segregation of socio-economic groups in the city. This book is about understanding processes and patterns of socio-economic residential segregation in a diverse set of European capital cities.

The Bohemian Ethos

Questioning Work and Making a Scene on the Lower East Side

Judith Halasz, State University of New York at New Paltz, USA

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

This book analyzes bohemians' often overlooked relationship to work using historical and ethnographic research on Paris and downtown New York. Halasz argues that bohemians' unconventional behaviors and attitudes towards employment and the broader work world constitute a politically charged yet increasingly precarious form of cultural resistance to hegemonic imperatives.

Series: Routledge Studies in Social and Political Thought

What is technology, and why does it have such power in our lives? In this book, Skrbina adopts a classic metaphysical approach. Drawing on the Greeks, he argues for a teleological metaphysics in which increasing order in the universe is itself defined as a technological process. All of reality thus constitutes a technical sphere, a "panteknikon," of universal scope. This volume will be an essential addition to the philosophy of technology.

The Re-Use of Urban Ruins

Atmospheric Inquiries of the City

Hanna Göbel

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

Since the 1970s, western cities have witnessed an explosion of creative strategies for the re-purposing of abandoned built environments. Through these strategies, new urban atmospheres are being created. This study examines how those new atmospheres and environments emerge, and how the sensual-aesthetic experience of abandoned built environments brings about its own politics of cultural value-making.

Troubling Multiculturalism

Edited by Hans Skott-Myhre, Brock University, Canada and J.N. Little, University of Victoria, Canada

This book explores the concern that multicultural practice in Child and Youth Care does not sufficiently examine issues of power, difference, colonialism, Whiteness, or species, to name a few. Although the title of this issue is Troubling Multiculturalism, the language within this issue stretches this term, troubles it, and at times, re-invents it.

UK Hip-Hop, Grime and the City

The Aesthetics and Ethics of London's Rap Scenes

Edited by Richard Bramwell, London School of Economics, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Ethnography

Rap is arguably the most popular poetic form in the world today, yet many studies approach it purely as an art form. This book fills a large hole in the literature, looking at UK hip-hop culture and the social and economic relations that have produced it. Richard Bramwell demonstrates how working class youths aesthetically represent their conditions of urban dwelling, and how they adapt this culture to contribute to inter-racial collaboration. Drawing on original fieldwork, this book examines the role that rap plays in everyday life within the city, and how the form allows young people to negotiate their way through Britain's social and economic tensions.

A Sociology of Football in a Global Context

Jamie Cleland, Loughborough University, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Sport, Culture and Society

This book examines the historical, social and cultural complexities of the game of football (also known as soccer) across Europe, Africa, Asia and North and South America, and charts how these can be studied in greater detail by placing the world's most popular sport in a global context. This approach subsequently allows for an analysis of the key developments within football in the twenty-first century on a chapter-by-chapter basis. The themes of the chapters each highlight the different social and cultural changes football has seen, often over a very short period of time.

Soccer, Culture and Identity in Spain

An Ethnography of Basque Fandom

Mariann Vaczi, University of Nevada, US

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Sport

This fascinating study shines new light on Spanish soccer and identity politics by examining the role that soccer plays in Basque identity, consolidated in Athletic Club of Bilbao, the century-old soccer club located in the birthplace of Basque nationalism. Based on unique, in-depth ethnographic research, and drawing on social history, anthropology, political science and sociology, the book investigates how a soccer club and soccer fandom affect the life of a community, exploring key contemporary themes in the social sciences such as identity construction and local-global processes, and placing the study in the wider context of Spanish political and sporting cultures.

Sport Management and the Natural Environment

Theory and Practice

Edited by Jonathan Casper, North Carolina State University, US and Michael E. Pfahl, Ohio University, US

With climate change and other environmental issues becoming increasingly prominent, any successful sport organization now has to incorporate environmental concerns into their business strategy, while all sport managers must understand how to implement environmental initiatives into their everyday business. Sport Management and the Natural Environment is the first book to introduce environmental theory and best practice in the context of sport management, demonstrating how sport organizations can become more effective and sustainable, and exploring the important advocacy role that sport organizations have in local and global communities.

Sport, Racism and Social Media

Neil Farrington, University of Sunderland, UK, Lee Hall, Daniel Kilvington, University of Sunderland, UK, John Price, University of Sunderland, UK and Amir Saeed

Series: Routledge Research in Sport, Culture and Society

Sport, Racism and Social Media provides the first significant, academic account of how social media is shaping the nature of racism in sport. Combining analysis of social media content with in-depth interviews with athletes, fans, campaigners and officials, and including extensive case studies of soccer, boxing, the NHL, the NBA, and cricket, the book provides important new insights on a familiar but ever changing story. It is essential reading for any student, researcher, media professional, administrator or policy-maker with an interest in sport, new media or the issue of racism in wider society.

Sports Officials and Officiating

Science and Practice

Clare MacMahon, Victoria University, Australia, Henning Plessner, University of Heidelberg, Germany, Alexandra Pizzera, German Sport University, Cologne, Raoul Oudejans, Vrije University, Netherlands, Markus Raab, German Sport University, Cologne and Duncan Mascarenhas, Glyndwr University, UK

In this ground-breaking book a team of leading international sport scientists and top level officials have come together to examine, for the first time, the science and practice of officiating in sport. Including contributions from active top-level officials, no other book has attempted to combine leading edge contemporary sport science with the realities of match officiating in this way, and therefore this book is vital reading for any advanced student of sport science, sport coaching or sport development, or any practising official or sports administrator looking to raise their professional standards.

The Philosophy of Physical Education

A New Perspective

Steven A. Stolz

Series: Routledge Studies in Physical Education and Youth Sport

This book represents the first attempt in nearly 30 years to offer a coherent philosophical defence and conceptualisation of physical education and sport as subjects of educational value, and to provide a philosophically sound justification for their inclusion in the curriculum. Representing a sophisticated and spirited defence of the educational significance and philosophical value of physical education and sport, this book will be fascinating reading for any advanced student or researcher with an interest in physical education, the philosophy of sport, or the philosophy of education.

The Serious Leisure Perspective

An Introduction

Robert Stebbins, University of Calgary, Canada and Sam Elkington, University of Bedfordshire, UK

The Serious Leisure Perspective (SLP) is a theoretical framework that can help us understand the complexities of modern leisure as both an activity and an experience. Bringing together the study of serious leisure, casual leisure and project-based leisure, it is an invaluable tool for exploring the significance of leisure in contemporary society. This book is the first comprehensive introduction to the SLP. It introduces the history of the SLP and its position alongside other social theories of leisure, and every chapter includes useful pedagogical features to help the student to understand leisure as an essential component of contemporary social life and society.

Women, Soccer and Transnational Migration

Edited by Sine Agergaard, University of Copenhagen, Denmark and Nina Clara Tiesler, University of Lisbon, Portugal

Women, Soccer and Transnational Migration represents a substantial contribution to our knowledge on the development of women's soccer, to research into sports labor migration and sport and globalization more broadly. It not only makes recommendations for future researchers, but may also serve as an important source of information for those in charge of policy. As such, it is essential reading for students, lecturers, researchers and practitioners involved in sports migration and women's sport.

Climate Change Adaptation and Development

Transforming Paradigms and Practices

Edited by Tor Håkon Inderberg, Fridtjof Nansen Institute, Norway, Siri Eriksen, University of Life Sciences, Norway, Karen O'Brien, University of Oslo, Norway and Linda Sygna, University of Oslo, Norway

While it is widely recognized that climate change will have significant impacts on the developing world, the social dimensions of vulnerability are often ignored in development projects and practices aimed at promoting adaptation to climate change. This book presents case studies that shed light on the tendency to promote policies and practices that fit conveniently into traditional development paradigms, and explores how development may need to shift focus in relation to climate change adaptation.

Adaptation to Climate Change through Water Resources Management

Capacity, Equity and Sustainability

Edited by Dominic Stucker and Elena Lopez-Gunn, Universidad Complutense de Madrid, Spain

Series: Earthscan Studies in Water Resource Management

The impacts of human-induced climate change are largely mediated by water. This book analyzes evidence from river basins around the world and identifies common barriers and opportunities for adaptation to climate change. Case studies are included from Europe, Asia, Africa, and North and South America. All chapters consider the crosscutting themes of institutional capacity, equity, and sustainability.

After Sustainability

Denial, Hope, Retrieval

John Foster, Lancaster University, UK

Many practising environmentalists already suspect that it is now too late for sustainability. This book makes clear why that is true, but rather than despairing, it explores where coming out of denial could take us. It shows where the deep environmental crisis really lies, in the way we think about ourselves and our lives as much as in our material arrangements. This in turn suggests what we might be able to retrieve from breakdown.

Culture, Development and Petroleum

An Ethnography of the High North

Jan-Oddvar Sornes, Bodø Graduate School of Business at Bodø University, Norway, Larry Browning, University of Texas at Austin, USA; University of Nordland, Norway and Jan Terje Henriksen

Series: Routledge Studies in Environmental Communication and Media

The discovery, just forty years ago, of vast oil and gas reserves in Norway's Arctic High North region created an economic titan. This original research illustrates the many challenges and opportunities now facing Norway's citizens in a region which the government has designated its top strategic priority. An ethnographic study, the book showcases interviews with 21 representative individuals from the area and reveals the various impacts petroleum development has on their regional economy and culture.

Decision-making and Radioactive Waste Disposal

Andrew Newman, Embassy of Australia, Washington DC, USA and Gerry Nagtzaam, Monash University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Waste Management and Policy

This book critically examines the phenomenon of low level radioactive waste disposal facilities siting across four international democracies – the United States, Australia, Spain and South Korea. The issue is of growing importance as since World War II the level of this waste has increased from the hundreds to the billions. The book incorporates a stakeholder theory approach to allow for a better understanding of the key players' roles and how such decisions are made as well as an 'environmental justice' perspective to better understand how some siting decisions negatively impact lower socio-economic classes and indigenous peoples.

Discourses of Global Climate Change

Martin Hultman and Jonas Anshelm, Linköping University, Sweden

Series: Routledge Studies in Environmental Communication and Media

This book demonstrates the media's role in the creation of dominant discourses on climate change and examines the arguments made by political actors in the mass media arena. Using in-depth empirical research of Sweden, a country considered by the international political community to be a frontrunner in tackling climate change, the book analyses the worldwide climate change debate. This highly original and detailed study focuses on opinion leaders and the way discourses are framed in the climate change debate, making it valuable reading for students and scholars of environmental communication and media as well environmental policy and politics.

Energy Security Cooperation in Northeast Asia

Edited by Bo Kong, University of Oklahoma, USA and Jae H. Ku

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

Drawing on cutting-edge research from leading scholars, this book investigates state preferences for regime creation and assesses state capacity for executing these preferences in Northeast Asia's energy domain, defined as the geographical area comprising the following countries – Russia, Mongolia, China, Japan, South Korea and North Korea. Specifically, the book examines questions pertaining to how states perceive the need and necessity for establishing a regime when it comes to the issue of energy and how much commitment they make to the effort in Northeast Asia.

Environmental Certification for Organisations and Products

Management Approaches and Operational Tools

Tiberio Daddi, Fabio Iraldo and Francesco Testa

Series: Routledge Research in Sustainability and Business

Environmental certification is an effective tool to manage the environmental impact made by companies, to leverage their competitive capabilities and to ensure their compliance with environmental principles in the case of production processes located in developing countries. This book provides an up-to-date overview of the different environmental certification tools and their roles and added value in a corporate management perspective. Balancing a complete theoretical presentation of the issue with an operational perspective, the book supports the adoption and implementation of environmental certification tools.

Environmental Change and the World's Futures

Ecologies, Ontologies and Mythologies

Edited by Jonathan Paul Marshall, University of Technology Sydney, Australia and Linda Connor, University of Sydney, Australia

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

The futures discussed in this book arise from awareness of the potentially disruptive impact of climate change and ecological instability on human societies. The framework embraces an appreciation of difference and non-holism, as it is unlikely that there exists one solution to the many disruptive futures perceived throughout the world. Indeed any such solution may increase the disruptive effects found in local situations. Each chapter invites reflection on diverse ways of comprehending global warming and other manifestations of major environmental change, as well as on the forms and shapers of agency that influence people's understanding and response.

Forests and Globalization

Challenges and Opportunities for Sustainable Development

Edited by Innes John, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada and William

Nikolakakis, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada

Series: The Earthscan Forest Library

Presenting a review and assessment of the current and future impacts of globalization on the world's forests, this book addresses four key themes: the effect of globalization on forests (including future trade flows); plantations as the primary source of forest products and its consequences, including plant breeding and forest health; the effect of new products such as bio-products and markets on forests; and the emergence of forest ecosystem services and their impact on the landscape and human communities. Overall, the volume provides a major synthesis of current thinking and knowledge on the topic for advanced students, as well as policy-makers and professionals.

Incomplete Streets

Processes, Practices and Possibilities

Edited by Stephen Zavestoski, University of San Francisco, USA and Julian Agyeman, Tufts University, USA

Series: Routledge Equity, Justice and the Sustainable City series

The most prolific and persistent product of the unfolding vision of 'liveable cities' and 'cities for people' has been the genesis and growth of 'complete streets,' a concept and movement that has exploded across the urban planning, transportation planning, environmental policy, sustainable communities, and other scenes. This book examines where important missing narratives in the complete streets discourse and practice result in streets that are "complete" for some but not others. It applies a critical perspective on the rhetoric and practice of complete streets that goes beyond seeing streets as merely functional spaces.

Indigenous Peoples, Customary Law and Human Rights

Land, Resources and Traditional Knowledge

Brendan Tobin, Griffith University, Queensland, Australia

Series: Earthscan Law and Sustainable Development

This highly original work demonstrates the role and importance of customary law as the primary source of law for indigenous peoples all over the world. The book reviews the relationship between customary, positive and natural law from the time of Plato up to the present day. It examines its recognition in constitutional law and in international human rights and environmental instruments. The author analyses the role of customary law in tribal, national and international governance of indigenous peoples' lands, resources and cultural heritage.

Knowledge Systems and Change in Climate Governance

Comparing India and South Africa

Babette Never, German Development Institute, Germany

Series: Routledge Advances in Climate Change Research

The book provides in-depth analysis of how India and South Africa are dealing with climate change at both national and province levels, from India's advances in solar and wind energy development to South Africa's efforts to introduce a carbon tax. Using the innovative theoretical framework of climate knowledge systems, it explores how people engage with one other, learn and act by forming communities of practice. The book identifies the drivers and barriers of climate governance, showing how different forms of scientific, technological, normative and pragmatic knowledge can aid climate governance.

Low Carbon Transitions for Developing Countries

Frauke Urban, School of Oriental and African Studies, London, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Low Carbon Development

This is the first book focusing on low carbon energy transitions for rapidly developing countries such as China and India, assessing the opportunities and barriers for transitions to renewable and low carbon energy as climate change mitigation options. It discusses the characteristics of energy systems in developing countries and how they are likely to change in the future due to increased economic growth and industrialisation. It also analyzes the role that energy modelling can play for assessing low carbon energy transitions for developing countries.

Managing Forests as Complex Adaptive Systems

Building Resilience to the Challenge of Global Change

Edited by Christian Messier, Université de Québec à Montréal, Canada, Klaus J. Puettmann and K. David Coates, British Columbia Forest Service, Canada

This book links the emerging concepts of complexity, complex adaptive system and resilience to forest ecology and management. It explores how these concepts can be applied in various forest biomes of the world with their different ecological, economic and social settings, and history. The chapters show that there is no single generally applicable approach to forest management for all settings.

TEXTBOOK

Marine Biodiversity Conservation

A Practical Approach

Keith Hiscock, Marine Biological Association, Plymouth, UK

Series: Earthscan Oceans

Effective marine biodiversity conservation is dependent upon a clear scientific rationale for practical interventions. This book is intended to provide knowledge and tools for marine conservation practitioners and to identify issues and mechanisms for upper-level undergraduate and Masters students. The main focus is on benthic species living on or in the surface substrate and immediately above. Such species are fundamental to a stable and sustainable marine ecosystem. The book is a practical guide based on a clear exposition of the principles of marine ecology and species biology to demonstrate how marine conservation has been tackled worldwide.

Nature, Choice and Social Power

Erica Schoenberger, John Hopkins University, USA

Using case studies from three different environmental domains – earth, air and water – the author challenges some of the conventional wisdoms about how our environment came to be in this state and offers a new way of thinking about how we can improve. Written in a clear and engaging style, Schoenberger underpins her argument with a political economy framework and explores the issues in the context of social injustice; with the awareness that social processes are environmental processes and that the environment cannot be detached from discussions about society. This novel and refreshing book proposes how we can build an environmentally safer future.

Nature, Environment and Poetry

Ecocriticism and the poetics of Seamus Heaney and Ted Hughes

Susanna Lidström, KTH Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm

Series: Routledge Environmental Humanities

This ecocritical book traces the environmental sensibilities of two Anglophone poets; Nobel Prize-winner Seamus Heaney (1939-2013), and Ted Hughes (1930-1998), one of the 20th century's great English poets. It follows how their respective careers follow the accelerating environmental crises of the 20th century, and how their poems address the relationship between language and ecology, nature and nation, human and animal. While both have been well-studied by critical thinkers before, this book reads their poems afresh for their understandings of local places and global crisis in the century of the environment.

Nuclear Energy Safety and International Cooperation

Closing the World's Most Dangerous Reactors

Spencer Barrett Meredith, III, Regent University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Environmental Policy

Nuclear reactor accidents in Chernobyl and Fukushima have highlighted the importance of a solid containment structure. This book examines why five post-Soviet countries operating dangerous reactors that lacked these structures first signed international agreements to close them within a few years, but instead delayed for almost two decades. This is the first academic study to evaluate the effectiveness of Western governments' efforts in the 1990s to heighten international nuclear energy safety and to examine how, despite this, safety culture remained largely unchanged by the governments operating some of the most dangerous reactors in the world.

Planning Sustainable Cities and Regions

Towards More Equitable Development

Karen Chapple, University of California, Berkeley, USA

Series: Routledge Equity, Justice and the Sustainable City series

With an audience of students, policymakers, and planning practitioners in mind, this book challenges and reconstructs three traditional premises of urban planning and policymaking – the ideas of creating diversity, fostering opportunity, and growing places – in light of on-going transformation in the structure of households, government, and the economy. This thought-provoking book advocates updating policies to reflect the transformation of our population, economy, and location preferences so that our best plans for sustainability are no longer misaligned with the toolkit available for implementation.

Promoting Sustainable Living

Sustainability as an Object of Desire

Justyna Karakiewicz, University of Melbourne, Australia, Audrey Yue, University of Melbourne, Australia and Angela Paladino, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Sustainability

This book identifies the factors that motivate people to aspire towards sustainable living and determines the role of communications in persuading people of its benefits. It traces the history of major shifts in our society that have dramatically changed our perceptions, beliefs and attitudes as related to sustainability, and explains why our current desires and dreams need to change. Finally it suggests what could be done to not only make sustainability an object of desire, but also introduce hopes and dreams for a better future into our everyday lives.

Rawls and the Environmental Crisis

Dominic Welburn, Univer

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

This book critiques the contextual framework within which Rawls's political liberalism is assessed as suitable or unsuitable for 'greening'. Challenging an emerging consensus that Rawls's political philosophy can only incorporate minimal green concerns, it offers an alternative communitarian reading of Rawls's 'well-ordered society' that allows for the possibility of a 'darker' green stewardship ethic. The book shows how attempts to rule out the green credentials of Rawls's theory form part of a wider frustration with the inability of liberal and procedurally-neutral polities to develop a new generation of environmental citizens.

Routledge Handbook of Sustainability and Fashion

Edited by Kate Fletcher, Centre for Sustainable Fashion, London College of Fashion, UK and Mathilda Tham, Goldsmiths University of London, UK

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The clothing industry employs 25 million people globally contributing to many livelihoods, yet it is also a significant contributor to the degradation of natural systems, with the associated environmental footprint of clothing high in comparison with other products. This comprehensive Handbook recognizes the complexity of aligning fashion with sustainability. It explores fashion and sustainability at the levels of products, processes, and paradigms and takes a truly multi-disciplinary approach to critically question and suggest creative responses to issues of fashion in a post-growth society.

State Compliance in International Climate Change Law

Alexander Zahar, Macquarie University, Australia

Series: Routledge Advances in Climate Change Research

This is the first book on state compliance that treats the UNFCCC, Kyoto Protocol, and their subordinate institutions as case studies in new international trends regarding state compliance. Drawing on a wide range of sources, this book clarifies the multiple layers of state compliance within the evolving international and transnational climate change regime. It provides a conceptual framework and mode of evaluation of the regulatory elements that have evolved to date. It comments on the current fragmentation and possible future unification of accountability and enforcement elements.

Sustainable Practices in Geoenvironmental Engineering, Second Edition

Raymond N. Yong, North Saanich, British Columbia, Canada, Catherine N. Mulligan, Concordia University, Quebec, Canada and Masaharu Fukue, Tokai University, Shizuoka, Japan

Since the publication of the first edition there have been numerous developments on sustainability assessment tools and practices. The new edition has four new chapters regarding monitoring and assessment, more details on treatment technologies, both in situ and ex situ, and discussions on the mitigation of geodisasters. Additional sections have been added to discuss sustainability assessment protocols, industrial ecology methodologies and the impact of the development of energy sources, including shale gas exploration, and tight oil recovery. All remaining chapters have been updated and expanded.

The Biosphere and the Bioregion

Essential Writings of Peter Berg

Edited by Cheryll Glotfelty, University of Nevada, USA, Eve Quesnel and Peter Berg

Series: Routledge Environmental Humanities

As one of the originators of the concept of bioregionalism, Peter Berg (1937-2011) is a founding figure of contemporary environmental thought. As arguably the nation's first post-environmentalist, in the 1970s Berg perceived the negative direction the environmental movement was taking and began to articulate a more positive and pro-active alternative, centred on the concept of bioregions. This book introduces readers to the biospheric vision and post-environmental genius of Berg, with original tributes from twenty prominent writers and thinkers, whose reflections illuminate facets of Berg's continuing importance and offer fresh angles on bioregionalism.

The Governance of Rangelands

Collective Action for Sustainable Pastoralism

Edited by Jonathan Davies, International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN), Kenya, Pedro Herrera, Entretantos Foundation, Ancares Leonese Biosphere Reserve, Gama S.L., and the University of Valladolid, Spain and Pablo Manzano, formerly IUCN, Nairobi, Kenya

Rangelands are typically large areas of open landscape, characterised by native vegetation which is often determined primarily by grazing livestock. In some countries such livestock are owned by nomadic pastoralists and the grassland or shrubland is common land. As this book shows, this creates a major challenge for governance and institutions. It aims to improve our understanding of the importance of governance and how it can be strengthened in order to prevent degradation of rangelands and ensure their sustainability and that of pastoralist livelihoods. A series of country case studies is presented, drawn from a wide spectrum of examples from around the world.

The Hartwell Approach to Climate Policy

Edited by Steve Rayner, University of Oxford, UK and Mark Caine, London School of Economics, UK

Series: The Earthscan Science in Society Series

Drawing on a rich history of heterodox but increasingly accepted views on climate change policy, this book brings together in a single volume a series of key, related texts that define the 'Hartwell critique' of conventional climate change policies and the 'Hartwell approach' to building more inclusive, pragmatic alternatives. It tells of the story of how and why conventional climate policy has failed and, drawing from lessons learned, how it can be renovated. With contributions from leading scholars in the field this work presents a stinging critique of current climate policy and a constructive primer for how to improve it.

The Limits of the Green Economy

Anneleen Kenis and Matthias Lievens

Series: Routledge Studies in Environmental Policy

This book examines the risk that the 'green economy' is not so much about greening the economy, as it is about economising the green message. The authors unravel the myth of the green economy in all its dimensions – from emissions trading to sustainable consumption, population control and technological optimism. Taking a critical approach, the book offers a highly original perspective on the social and ecological consequences of a global economic system attempting to tackle climate change within the confines of capitalism.

The Politics of Carbon Markets

Edited by Benjamin Stephan, University of Hamburg, Germany and Richard Lane, University of Sussex, UK

Series: Environmental Market Insights

Today's beleaguered yet expanding carbon market represents a type of relationship between economy and ecology scarcely imaginable forty years ago. This collection brings together a comprehensive array of perspectives to critically scrutinise the development and on-going maintenance of this global carbon market. The book's contributors recognise that the market itself, as well as the notion of the environment that it instantiates, is highly political and contested; thus the chapters investigate the market system and its insertion into and influence on climate and environmental governance within the global political economy.

Towards Low Carbon Cities in China

Urban Form and Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Edited by Sun Sheng Han, University of Melbourne, Australia, Ray Green, University of Melbourne, Australia and Mark Wang, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Low Carbon Development

This book explores the relationship between urban form and Greenhouse Gas (GHG) emissions based on new empirical evidence from four Chinese cities. Drawing on the findings of a four-year research project, it discusses characteristics of GHG emissions in China, the relevant policies on emissions control, and the associated economic and environmental challenges that China faces. The book uses four diverse case studies to explore the association between urban form and GHG emissions, suggesting ways of reducing emissions, analysing residents' attitudes towards GHG emissions reduction and identifying priority areas for further research.

Urban Sustainability in Theory and Practice

Circles of Sustainability

Paul James, RMIT University, Melbourne, Australia

This book responds to the crises of sustainability in the world today by providing a practical and conceptual guide for rethinking urban engagement. It provides a means of reflexivity learning about urban sustainability in the process of working practically for positive social development and projected change. The book challenges assumptions about sustainability practices while providing tools for modifying them. It emphasizes the necessity of a holistic understanding of urban life and rewrites existing dominant understandings of the social whole that reduce environmental questions to externalities and social questions to background issues.

New Approaches to Reducing Waste Generation and its Environmental Impacts

Ana Paula Bortoleto, University of Sheffield, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Waste Management and Policy

As prosperity levels rise, so too does the level of products and services manufactured. For decision makers facing a growing waste burden, it is imperative that more sustainable waste management programmes are based on an understanding of the complex relationship between waste prevention policies and individual behavior regarding waste generation. This book examines the interplay, taking a close look at the role of motivation, difficulties, values and constraints.

Water Politics and Spiritual Ecology

Custom, environmental governance and development

Lisa Palmer, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Explorations in Environmental Studies

This book addresses a critical need for a sustained geographical and anthropological inquiry into the social issues of water governance. Exploring the ritual ecological practices, contexts and scales through which use, negotiation over and sharing of water occurs at the local level, this book shows the complex functioning and social, cultural, economic and environmental interdependencies of hydrological societies. It examines the difficulties local communities face in having their rights recognised and their efforts to maintain and assert control of their waterscapes in the face of rapidly changing water governance institutions.

Workplace Safety and Health

Assessing Current Practices and Promoting Change in the Profession

Thomas D. Schneid, Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, USA

Series: Occupational Safety and Health

The safety profession often clings to the basic beliefs and practices which evolved during the early years after the announcement of the Occupational Safety and Health Act in 1970. This book reviews and challenges many of the commonly accepted practices as well as misconceptions about safety in the workplace and provide new and innovative options for safety professionals to consider. It examines many of the basic assumptions in the safety profession and challenge the reader to assess and evaluation their activities in search of a better and more effective way of achieving the results necessary to be

A Hospitable World? Organising Work and Workers in Hotels and Tourist Resorts

Edited by David Jordhus-Lier, University of Oslo, Norway and Anders Underthun, Norwegian University of Science and Technology, Norway

Series: Contemporary Geographies of Leisure, Tourism and Mobility

This book explores the organisation of work, worker identities and worker strategies in hotel workplaces, as they are located in heterogeneous labour markets being changed by processes of globalisation. It uses an explicitly geographical approach to understand how different groups of workers experience and respond to challenges in the hospitality industry, and is based on recent theoretical debates and empirical research on hotel workplaces in cities as different as Oslo, Goa, London, Las Vegas and Toronto. It is valuable reading for all those interested in hospitality, tourism, human geography and globalisation.

Ecotourism

David A. Fennell, Brock University, Canada

This book continues its tradition of touching on many of the most important questions about the purity and potential of ecotourism in the face of so many competing demands—demands that will not go away because they appear to a function of who we are at the very core; a function of human nature. This book is a useful aid to students, giving an authoritative and comprehensive review of key issues that continue to both plague ecotourism and make it one of the most dynamic sectors in the tourism industry. TEXTBOOK

Tourism and Public Policy

James Kennell, University of Greenwich, UK and Samantha Chaperon, University of Greenwich, UK

This new text will critically examine tourism policy alongside the instrumental uses of tourism in other areas of public policy. The first part of the book introduces the notion of public policy for tourism and explores why it is necessary for the control of the industry, various approaches to tourism policy, distinction between policy and planning and the instruments employed to put policy into action. The second part looks at the relationship between tourism and other fields of public policy, analysing a specific form of tourism of relevance to each policy area. International case studies are integrated throughout to show policy in practice.

Tourism Geography

Critical Understandings of Place, Space and Experience

Stephen Williams, Staffordshire University, UK and Alan A. Lew, Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, AZ, USA

Tourism Geography develops a critical understanding of how different geographies of tourism are created and maintained. Drawing on both historical and contemporary perspectives, the discussion connects tourism to key geographical concepts relating to globalization, mobility, new geographies of production and consumption, and post-industrial change. The new edition has been fully updated to have an international focus, with global case studies and broader based content.

Tourism, Religion and Pilgrimage in Jerusalem

Kobi Cohen-Hattab, Bar Ilan University, Israel and Noam Shoval, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel

Series: Contemporary Geographies of Leisure, Tourism and Mobility

The book traces tourism and pilgrimage in Jerusalem from the late Ottoman era to the reunification of the city under Israeli rule. The city's evolution is shown to be intertwined with its tourist industry, as tourist sites, accommodations, infrastructure, and services transform the city's structures and open spaces. At the same time, tourism is wielded by various parties in an effort to gain political recognition, to bolster territorial control, or to garner support. It will be valuable reading to students, academics and researchers in the fields of tourism, religious studies, geography, history, cultural studies and anthropology.

Trust, Tourism Development and Planning

Edited by Robin Nunkoo, University of Mauritius, Mauritius and Stephen L.J. Smith, University of Waterloo, Canada

Series: Contemporary Geographies of Leisure, Tourism and Mobility

The dynamics of trust and distrust are central to understanding modern society, social relations and development processes. This book for the first time situates trust within the context of tourism development and planning. It theoretically explores the relationship by reviewing how diminishing societal trust may have adversely affected tourism planning systems, the role of trust in good tourism governance and sustainable tourism, how trust can be used as a facilitator of participatory tourism planning, political trust in tourism institutions, power and how tourism development can be a basis for trust creation among society members by using social capital theory.

Age in the Workplace

Challenges and Opportunities

Edited by Donald M. Truxillo, Portland State University, USA and Franco Fraccaroli, University of Trento, Italy

This book looks at the implications of an increasingly aging workforce for organizations seeking to motivate and manage individual employees and teams. With an international focus, it addresses these critical issues from the individual and psychological perspectives. It looks at a range of topics including the motivation of older workers – to work and to retire; what organizations can do to attract and retain the talent of older workers; how to improve relations and productivity among age-diverse teams; how to design jobs to support older and younger talent. Categorical and Nonparametric Data Analysis

Choosing the Best Statistical Technique

E. Michael Nussbaum, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, USA

With detailed coverage of categorical and nonparametric statistics, this book provides a conceptual framework for choosing the appropriate type of test in various research scenarios. The assumptions of each test and the factors that impact validity and statistical power are reviewed. Each chapter features clear explanations, Exploring the Concept boxes, examples from the behavioral and social sciences that demonstrate varied applications, how to use the tests in SPSS & EXCEL, and problems to test understanding. The website features datasets and more. The book appeals to advanced students and researchers in these disciplines. Prerequisites include t-tests and ANOVA.

Face Recognition

The Effects of Race, Gender, Age and Species

Edited by James Tanaka, University of Victoria, Canada

Although most people are good at face recognition, we are particularly good at recognizing the faces of individuals who share our race, gender, age and species. What factors might account for this type of bias in face recognition? This collection considers the issue of how our identity influences the type of perceptual experience that we have to faces, which, in turn, influences the processes of face recognition.

Heavy Work Investment

Its Nature, Sources, Outcomes and Future Directions

Edited by Itzhak Harpaz, University of Haifa, Israel and Raphael Snir, The Academic College of Tel Aviv-Yaffo, Israel
Series: Applied Psychology Series

Since its introduction, interest in the Heavy Work Investment (HWI) model has increased considerably. This book illustrates the development of HWI conceptualization, theory, and research. It compares workaholism, as a "negative" HWI subtype, with work devotion, as a "positive" HWI subtype. Prominent international researchers address timely and important topics in HWI, including: personality factors of workaholism, work-life balance, cross-cultural similarities and differences in HWI, work addiction and technology, HWI and retirement, and intergenerational similarities in work investment.

IBM SPSS for Intermediate Statistics

Use and Interpretation, Fifth Edition

Nancy L. Leech, University of Colorado at Denver, USA, Karen C. Barrett, Colorado State University, USA and George A. Morgan, Colorado State University, USA

This book reviews how to choose the statistic based on the design, interpret output, and write about the results to help readers analyze data using SPSS 22. Readers learn to: assess data reliability; determine whether data meet the assumptions of statistical tests; and calculate and interpret effect sizes and power. Basic statistics is reviewed along with chapters on MLM, MANOVA, and factor analysis. The key SPSS windows needed to perform the analyses are provided along with annotated output, interpretation questions, and problems for review. Data sets, SPSS syntax, and instructors' materials are on the web. This text is ideal for students and researchers in a variety of disciplines.

Improving Survey Methods

Lessons from Recent Research

Edited by Uwe Engel, University of Bremen, Germany, Ben Jann, Peter Lynn, University of Essex, UK, Annette Scherpenzeel, Utrecht University, NL and Patrick Sturgis, University of Southampton, UK
Series: European Association of Methodology Series

This book reviews the latest statistical and methodological research on survey research techniques to help improve the reliability of survey generated data. The various methods studied are reviewed along with the resulting empirical evidence and insights gained from the results. The evidence is based on field- or quasi-experimental research, observational or simulation studies or a combination thereof. The book examines: survey modes and response effects, interviewers and survey error, asking sensitive questions, conducting web surveys and access panels, coping with non-response, and handling missing data. This book is ideal for students or professionals who employ survey research methods.

Latent Variable Modeling Using R

A Step By Step Guide

A. Alexander Beaujean, Baylor University, USA

This accessible guide focuses on lavaan to help readers understand latent variable model (LVMs) and their analysis in R. The reasoning behind the syntax selected is provided along with multidisciplinary examples. Chapters feature key terms, interpretations of output, examples of how to write about the results, exercises with solutions, and related readings. The website provides the data for the examples and exercises and R syntax so readers can replicate the analyses. Readers learn to enter data into R and obtain and interpret values. Written for R and LVM novices, the book prepares students and researchers to write about and interpret LVM results obtained in R.

Leadership and Coherence

A Cognitive Approach

Nathan W. Harter, Christopher Newport University

Series: LEADERSHIP: Research and Practice

Leadership and Coherence investigates how leaders justify their decisions, and how they bring about coherence amongst followers. Taking a cognitive approach, it builds on the work of Hannah Arendt to attempt a phenomenology of judgment, examining how the moral imperative experienced by leaders can be shared by their community so both leader and led are guided by a mutual purpose. Through biographical case studies of historical leaders, this book illustrates how successful leaders operate in a turbulent world, not only making their own decisions but also gathering likeminded followers to share in a common vision and shared sense of purpose.

MATLAB for Behavioral Scientists, Second Edition

David A. Rosenbaum, The Pennsylvania State University, USA, Jonathan Vaughan, Hamilton College, USA and Brad Wyble, The Pennsylvania State University, USA

Written for those with no programming experience this text walks behavioral science students and researchers through the process of programming using MATLAB. Readers learn to perform any computational function to solve their research problems. Each principle is illustrated with usable code. Each chapter opens with objectives followed by commands required to accomplish those goals. Sample code and output and chapter problems demonstrate how to write a program and explore a model so readers can see the results obtained using different values. A web site provides solutions to problems and the program code output and examples. Ideal for those who wish to get up and running in MATLAB.

Network and Adaptive Sampling

Arijit Chaudhuri, Indian Statistical Institute, Kolkata, India
Combining the two statistical techniques of network sampling and adaptive sampling, this book illustrates the advantages of using them in tandem to effectively capture sparsely located elements in unknown pockets. It shows how network sampling is a reliable guide in capturing inaccessible entities through linked auxiliaries. The text also explores how adaptive sampling is strengthened in information content through subsidiary sampling with devices to mitigate unmanageable expanding sample sizes. Empirical data illustrates the applicability of both methods.

Psychology of Sustainability

An Applied Perspective

Robert G. Jones, Missouri State University, USA

Psychology of Sustainability: An Applied Perspective examines the many psychological factors that lead to human behavioral effects on the environment. Since applied psychology is concerned with defining criteria and finding precursor variables that can be manipulated, each chapter applies elements from a basic research area into the context of criteria specific to sustainability. Readers will find new ways of framing questions related to human adaptability and evolutionary psychology. Psychology of Sustainability is ideal for students or professionals who are looking to contribute to the conversation.

Rethinking Creativity

Contributions from social and cultural psychology

Edited by Vlad Petre Glăveanu, Aalborg University, Denmark, Alex Gillespie, London School of Economics, UK and Jaan Valsiner, Clark University, USA

Series: Cultural Dynamics of Social Representation

This edited volume aims to renew the theory of creativity from the perspective of socio-cultural psychology. It brings together eminent social and cultural psychologists who study dynamic, transformative and emergent phenomena and invites them to conceptualise creativity in ways that depart from mainstream definitions and theoretical models existing in past and present literature on the topic. These contributions challenge us to think outside the "box" of current understandings and assumptions that have often led research on creativity to dead ends and paradoxical conclusions, and offer what amounts to a cultural, situated and extended model of what creativity is or can be.

Psychology Serving Humanity: Proceedings of the 30th International Congress of Psychology

Volume One: Majority World Psychology

Edited by Saths Cooper, President, International Union of Psychological Sciences and Kopano Ratele, Institute for Social and Health Sciences, University of South Africa, South Africa

This is the first of two volumes collecting the key proceedings of the 30th International Congress of Psychology, the first to be held in Africa in the 123 years of its history. The theme of the conference was "Psychology Serving Humanity", a recognition of psychology's unfulfilled mission in the majority world and a reflection of what that world requires from psychology.

These proceedings are published in the hope that all psychologists, especially those located in well-resourced institutions in the West, confront the divided reality that characterizes Psychology so as to creatively consider the opportunity opened up by the growing field at the peripheries.

The theme of the conference was "Psychology Serving Humanity", a recognition of psychology's unfulfilled mission in the majority world and a reflection of what that world requires from psychology.

These proceedings are published in the hope that all psychologists, especially those located in well-resourced institutions in the West, confront the divided reality that characterizes Psychology so as to creatively consider the opportunity opened up by the growing field at the peripheries.

Statistical Methods in Psychiatry Research and SPSS

M. Venkataswamy Reddy, National Institute of Mental Health and Neuro Sciences (NIMHANS), Bangalore, India

This book has been prepared to help psychiatrists expand their knowledge of statistical methods and fills the gaps in their applications as well as introduces data analysis software. The book emphasizes the classification of fundamental statistical methods in psychiatry research that are precise and simple. Professionals in the field of mental health and allied subjects without any mathematical background can easily understand all the relevant statistical methods and carry out the analysis and interpret the results in their respective fields without consulting a statistician.

Statistical Power Analysis

A Simple and General Model for Traditional and Modern Hypothesis Tests, Fourth Edition

Kevin R. Murphy, Landy Litigation and Colorado State University, USA, Brett Myers, Griffith University, Australia and Allen Wolach, Professor Emeritus, Illinois Institute of Technology, USA

Through the use of simple procedures and examples, this text shows readers with little expertise in statistics how to obtain the values needed to carry out the power analysis for research. Numerous examples demonstrate how to choose the criterion for defining statistically significant outcomes. The book reviews how to determine: the sample size needed to achieve desired levels of power; the level of power needed in a study; the size of effect that can be reliably detected by a study; and criteria for statistical significance. The book helps students and researchers design and diagnose existing studies. A web based calculator and data sets allow users to perform all of the book's analyses.

Teaching Psychology

A Step-By-Step Guide

Sandra Goss Lucas, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, USA and Douglas A. Bernstein, University of South Florida, USA

This volume provides for preparing and teaching an entire course in psychology. Based on best principles and effective psychological and pedagogical research, it offers practical suggestions for planning a course, choosing teaching methods, integrating technology appropriately and effectively, developing student evaluation instruments and programs, and ideas for evaluation of your own teaching effectiveness. It is intended as a self-help guide for relatively inexperienced psychology teachers, whether graduate students or new faculty, but also as a core reading assignment for those who train psychology instructors.

The New Behaviorism

Second Edition

John Staddon, Duke University, USA

This groundbreaking book presents a brief history of behaviorism, and critically analyzes radical behaviorism, its philosophy and applications to social issues. It also shows how experimental cognitive psychology currently has an undisciplined indulgence in "mental life". The author proposes a 'new behaviorism' that provides a unified framework for the science of behavior that can be applied both to the laboratory and to broader practical issues such as law and punishment, the health-care system, and teaching. This second edition is a completely rewritten and much expanded version of the first edition, published nearly 15 years earlier.

The Psychological Development of Girls and Women

Rethinking change in time

Sheila Greene, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland.
Series: Women and Psychology

This thoroughly revised new edition updates Sheila Greene's groundbreaking work on the psychological development of girls and women. Greene analyzes competing discourses on time, age and development which all play an active role in constructing the lives of girls and women. Greene's alternative account describes women's psychological development as constantly emerging and changing in time, rather than as static and fixed by their nature, socio-cultural context, and personal history. The book will continue to be essential reading for students and researchers in the psychology of women, developmental psychology and women's studies.

The Psychology of Becoming a Successful Worker

Research on the changing nature of achievement at work

Satu Uusiautti, University of Lapland, Finland and Kaarina Määttä, University of Lapland, Finland

Based on the authors' research into the phenomenon of success at work, this book provides a positive, human-strength-based approach to success and contributes a fresh viewpoint to the modern demanding and hectic work life. Success at work is described as a combination of several elements, including working conditions, other areas of life, and an employee's individual characteristics. Drawing from the theory of positive psychology and outlining new theoretical ideas illustrated with case studies from actual employees, this book will ignite thoughts about what success at work is and can be and about how to recognize factors enhancing or hindering success in one's own context.

Understanding Employee Engagement

Theory, Research, and Practice

Zinta Byrne, Colorado State University, USA
Series: Applied Psychology Series

Understanding Employee Engagement: Theory, Research, and Practice exposes the science and practice of employee engagement. Grounded in theory and empirical research, this book debates the definitions of engagement, provides a comprehensive evaluation of empirical findings in the engagement field including a focus on international findings, and offers implications for science and practice in organizations. Employers can learn how to foster and drive engagement to increase productivity and happiness, and researchers can master the existing engagement literature and begin to study the many propositions and new models Byrne proposes throughout the book.

Warring with Words

Narrative and Metaphor in Politics

Edited by Michael Hanne, University of Auckland, New Zealand, William D. Crano, Claremont Graduate University, USA and Jeffery S. Mio, California State Polytechnic University, USA

Series: Claremont Symposium on Applied Social Psychology Series

This volume is the first to bring together a team of eminent scholars from this wide range of disciplines - including social psychology, political science and international relations -- to document current thinking on the many ways in which 'narrative' and 'metaphor' function as cognitive and rhetorical instruments in discourse around politics and to explore the potential for the two perspectives to be employed more often in combination. It focuses particularly on the prevalence of dysfunctional political narratives and metaphors and the potential for them to be critiqued and effectively amended.

Working Memory and Ageing

Edited by Robert H. Logie, University of Edinburgh, UK and Robin G. Morris, King's College Hospital, London, UK

Series: Current Issues in Memory

This book brings together international research leaders to address major questions about how age affects working memory. The chapters dispel some popular myths about cognitive ageing, while presenting the state of the science on how and why working memory functions as it does throughout the adult lifespan. The first volume to provide an overview of the burgeoning literature on changes in working memory function across healthy and pathological ageing, it will be of great interest to advanced undergraduates, postgraduates and researchers in psychology and related subjects concerned with the effects of human ageing.

Treating gambling addiction through relationship

Liz Karter, Level Ground Therapy, London, UK

Why do so many women with gambling addiction relapse? Lifelong recovery requires much more than to just stop gambling. By following the story of a real women's group for problem gambling over the course of a year, Liz Karter explains how, for women, both the cause of and the cure for gambling addiction lies in relationship. The author shares themes which run through each women's group, such as fear of trusting others and the guilt, shame and risk associated with being truly seen and heard. This book provides a unique opportunity to gain a very personal insight into the group process, both for therapists and for women wishing to understand their addiction.

A critical realist exploration

David Pilgrim

Series: Ontological Explorations (Routledge Critical Realism)

Understanding Mental Health: a critical realist perspective steers a middle way between psychiatric positivism and the nihilism of the recent French poststructuralist tradition. It relies on the guidance of neither psychiatry nor social science (with the discipline of psychology being an ambivalent participant in both camps), though all of this range of disciplinary knowledge provides my subject matter. Instead, the guidance comes from philosophy, one of Foucault's three legs on the milking stool of human science, but from one of his critics, Roy Bhaskar. He and others in his wake have offered us an escape route from the cul-de-sac options of naive realism and unending postmodern scepticism.

Building a Better Man

A Blueprint for Decreasing Violence and Increasing Prosocial Behavior in Men

William Seymour, Children's Hospital of Wisconsin, USA, Ramel Smith and Hector Torres, The Chicago School of Psychology, Illinois, USA

Building a Better Man presents an empirically validated and theory-based discussion of masculinity in modern America, but it also does much more than that—it interweaves a diverse group of compelling personal stories with an exploration of aggression and masculinity in the socialization of boys and men. Clinicians and group leaders will find that the approach laid out in Building a Better Man leaves clients feeling understood more than judged, which provides a different motivation for change and can set treatment on an entirely different and infinitely more productive path.

Clinical Psychology

A Neurocognitive Perspective

Edited by Jan Mohlman, William Paterson University, New Jersey, USA, Thilo Deckersbach, Massachusetts General Hospital, USA and Adam Weissman, Child/Adolescent Treatment Center, New York, USA

The purpose of this book is to introduce clinical psychologists, other mental health practitioners, and researchers to the neurocognitive approach to assessing and treating psychiatric disorders. It will provide a basic introduction to the research that integrates conventional clinical diagnostic methods with neuropsychological testing, cognitive assessment strategies, functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI), electroencephalography (EEG), and other psychophysiological models. Readers will learn how these measures can be used to elucidate target domains of dysfunction that extend beyond the framework provided by the DSM and inform the optimal treatment of psychiatric disorders.

Counseling Widowers

Jason M. Troyer, Maryville College, Tennessee, USA

Series: The Routledge Series on Counseling and Psychotherapy with Boys and Men

Working with widowers can be one of the most challenging parts of a therapist's career. Counseling Widowers builds from the latest developments in grief research and men's studies to bridge the gap between counseling practice and the needs of bereaved men. In these pages, therapists will find tools for adjusting their clinical strategies to work more effectively with these men. Through a more empathic understanding of widowers, therapists can help them build from their strengths as they face the loss of their partner.

The Price of Love

The selected works of Colin Murray Parkes

Colin Murray Parkes, St Christopher's Hospice, UK, Life President of Cruse Bereavement Care

Series: World Library of Mental Health

In the course of a long career Colin Murray Parkes, one of the most important and influential psychiatrists working in the field of bereavement and loss, has produced a body of work which can be considered truly ground-breaking. The papers included here have been carefully selected and annotated to show how Parkes' thinking has developed during a career as researcher, practitioner and educator. In each section of the book psychological and social causes are paired with consequences and interventions (both preventive and therapeutic) and explored from Western and cross-cultural perspectives, all with Parkes' customary clarity and compassion.

An Emotionally Focused Workbook for Couples

The Two of Us

Veronica Kallos-Lilly, Vancouver Couple & Family Institute, Vancouver, Canada and Jennifer Fitzgerald, University of Queensland, Queensland, Australia

Intended to help couples who are in Emotionally Focused Therapy, this workbook is designed to easily integrate guided reading and reflections into the therapeutic process. The material is presented in a recurring format: Read, Reflect, and Discuss. Readings help couples look at their relationship through an attachment lens, walking them through the process of creating a secure relationship bond. Reflections invite readers to engage with the material personally, expanding their own awareness and ability to tune into their partner. Discussion sections suggest relationship-building exercises and a framework for conversations that promote safety, disclosure, and engagement.

Solving Modern Family Dilemmas

An Assimilative Therapy Model

Patricia Pitta, St. John's University, New York, USA

Series: Family Therapy and Counseling

The "modern family" presents new challenges for the mental health provider. To succeed within this framework, Patricia Pitta introduces readers to Assimilative Family Therapy. She instructs how to be sensitive to the many unique contexts presented by the modern family and its individuals, such as age, ethnicity, culture, racial background, gender, sexual preference, marital status, and many more. Using simple pedagogical elements, Dr. Pitta walks readers through the integration of evidence-based theories and therapies, such as systems, psychodynamic, and cognitive behavioral, ensuring that readers gain a thorough understanding of how to help their clients.

Common Complaints in Couple Therapy

New Approaches to Treating Marital Conflict

Joan Lachkar, in private practice, California, USA

Joan Lachkar identifies the common complaints that couples and individuals typically bring into marriage and couple therapy. Each of her chapters revolves around a specific situational conflict, with guidelines and treatment suggestions offered to the therapist. It is vignette-heavy, with detailed descriptions of theoretical technique, methodology, and diagnostic distinctions. The theoretical concepts drawn on include psychoanalysis, object relations, self-psychology, attachment theory, DBT, mindfulness, and others.

The Critical Role of Parenting in Human Development

Marianna S. Klebanov and Adam D. Travis, Northern California Kaiser

The Critical Role of Parenting in Human Development contains studies on brain development, trauma, and epigenetics to demonstrate how the transmission of negative parenting patterns can lead to PTSD and re-traumatization. The authors include findings from MRI and fMRI studies to examine the effects of trauma, and delve into attachment studies to understand the parent/child relationship. The book also addresses therapies for addressing trauma-related symptoms and policies for lawmakers. Interdisciplinary in nature, this book is a much-needed resource for professionals and students in the psychology, psychotherapy and related mental health, and child welfare fields.

Community and In-Home Behavioral Health Treatment

Lynne Rice Westbrook, Transitional Family Services, Georgia, USA

Community and In-Home Behavioral Health Treatment provides an overview of the evidence-based treatments that can be utilized in natural (home and community) environments. Its core approach is Person Centered Mental Health Treatment Planning, which is based upon the assessment of the patient's strengths, needs, abilities, and preferences. This type of therapy is a very viable alternative to clients who have not had success in traditional therapy, or who have trouble paying for traditional therapeutic services, and allows the mental health professional a unique glimpse into the patient's everyday stressors, supports, and living conditions.

The Selected Works of Jeremy Holmes

Jeremy Holmes, University of Exeter, UK
Series: World Library of Mental Health

For three decades Jeremy Holmes has been a leading figure in psychodynamic psychiatry in the UK and across the world. He has played a central role in promoting the ideas of John Bowlby and in developing the clinical applications psychiatric and psychotherapeutic of Attachment Theory in working with adults. Drawing on both psychoanalytic and attachment ideas, Holmes has been able to encompass a truly biopsychosocial perspective. As a psychotherapist Holmes brings together psychodynamic, systemic and cognitive models, alert to vital differences, but also keenly sensitive to overlaps and parallels.

Body-States: Interpersonal and Relational Perspectives on the Treatment of Eating Disorders

Edited by Jean Petrucelli, Director and Co-Founder of the Eating Disorders, Compulsions & Addictions Service; Supervising Analyst, Teaching Faculty, William Alanson White Institute, NYC; and Adjunct Clinical Professor of Psychology at NYU's Postdoctoral Program

Eating disorders are about various body-states and their relational meanings which create and 'allow' these states existence. The split of mind/body or body/mind functioning is enacted in many arenas in the eating disordered patient's life. Patients believe that disciplining or controlling his or her body is a means to psychic equilibrium and interpersonal effectiveness. These collected papers deconstruct the essential role of understanding body-states in the interpersonal treatment of eating disorders.

Through the linking of symptoms, understanding their emotional and interpersonal meanings, in the context of the therapy relationship, eating disordered patients can find their way out.

Erotic Revelations

Clinical Applications and Perverse Scenarios

Andrea Celenza, Training and Supervising Analyst at the Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute, Assistant Clinical Professor at Harvard Medical School

This book delves into erotic desires and fantasies ... above all, how our sexuality expresses our inner being and defines the ways in which we engage in the psychoanalytic situation. Andrea Celenza addresses the 'desexualization' of the psychoanalytic field by reclaiming sexuality as one of the many nexes that are of central concern to the patient. She illustrates a wide range of erotic manifestations (for both therapist and patient) and offers recommendations to practitioners for dealing with erotic material when it arises. With a strong clinical focus, this book will redefine how to work with many aspects of sex and gender in clinical psychoanalytic practice.

Formless Infinity: Clinical Explorations of Matte Blanco and Bion

Riccardo Lombardi, is in private practice in Rome, Italy, and teaches at the Roman Psychoanalytic Institute of the International Psychoanalytic Association (IPA). He is Training and Supervising Analyst of the Italian Psychoanalytic Society.

Series: The New Library of Psychoanalysis

In contemporary psychoanalysis, a key concept and aim of clinical practice is to distinguish the limit or boundary in any mental state. Without this boundary-setting, the patient has nothing but the 'formless infinite' of primitive mental states. This book draws on the work of Matte Blanco and Bion to explore how analysts can work with patients to explore and ultimately contain their primitive mental states. It covers core concepts such as the unconscious, the role of the body in analysis, time, and death. Lombardi draws out the clinical implications of Matte Blanco's work, presenting numerous clinical examples of working with psychosis and other severe pathologies.

Imaginary Existences

A Psychoanalytic Exploration of Phantasy, Fiction, Dreams and Daydreams

Ighes Sodre, Fellow and a Training and Supervising Analyst of the British Psychoanalytical Society. Psychoanalyst in private practice.

Series: The New Library of Psychoanalysis

This book interweaves psychoanalytic knowledge and extensive clinical experience with insights derived from readings of great literature in an imaginative and creative manner, demonstrating how these two ways of thinking – psychoanalysis and literary criticism – organically relate to each other. This is simultaneously a psychoanalytic book and a book about literature, illuminating the imaginative possibilities present within both the psychoanalytic encounter and the act of reading fiction. The psychoanalytic ideas presented have their basis in the work of Freud and Klein and their followers; the innovative writing about the great authors in Western literature is equally scholarly and lucid.

Through the linking of symptoms, understanding their emotional and interpersonal meanings, in the context of the therapy relationship, eating disordered patients can find their way out.

Melanie Klein and Marcelle Spira: Their Correspondence and Context

Jean-Michel Quinodoz, Psychoanalyst in private practice in Geneva, Switzerland

The book publishes 45 letters Melanie Klein wrote to the Swiss psychoanalyst Marcelle Spira between 1955 and 1960 as well as 6 rough drafts from Spira. They were discovered in Spira's library after her death in 2006. As only a few of the letters that Klein wrote to her colleagues have been preserved, this moving, historically important correspondence enlightens the last five years of Klein's creative life.

Minding the Body

The body in psychoanalysis and beyond

Alessandra Lemma, Tavistock and Portman NHS Foundation Trust, London, UK

Series: New Library of Psychoanalysis 'Beyond the Couch' series

This book outlines the value of a psychoanalytic approach to understanding the body and its vicissitudes and for addressing these in the context of psychotherapy and psychoanalysis. The chapters cover a broad but esoteric range of subjects that are not often discussed within psychoanalysis such as the function of breast augmentation surgery, the psychic origins of hair, the use made of the analyst's toilet, transsexuality and the connection between dermatological conditions and necrophilic fantasies. The book is based on the author's extensive clinical experience as a psychoanalyst and psychologist.

Myths of Termination

What patients can teach psychoanalysts about endings

Judy Leopold Kantowitz, Training and supervising analyst, Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute, Associate Clinical Professor, Harvard Medical School

Series: Psychological Issues

Psychoanalysis can make a huge difference in the lives of patients, their families and others they encounter. Myths have developed, however, about how psychoanalysis should end – what patients experience and what analysts do. These expectations come primarily from accounts by analysts in the analytic literature which are often perpetuated in an oversimplified form in teaching. Patients' perspectives are rarely presented. Exploring the accounts of 82 former analysands, she illustrates the diversity of psychoanalytic endings and ways of maintaining analytic benefits after ending; in presenting patients' experiences the author provides correctives for some myths about termination.

The Conscience and Self-Conscious Emotions in Adolescence

An integrative approach

Frans Schalkwijk, Psychotherapist and psychoanalyst in private practice, The Netherlands

The consequences of apparent moral failings in an individual are something that can be seen frequently in the media and in everyday life. One issue that is rarely addressed in public discussion about someone's 'lack of conscience' is any thought as to how the conscience actually functions. In this book, Schalkwijk presents a new definition of the conscience as a psychic function in which self-conscious emotions and empathy are dominant. Accessibly written and incorporating case studies and detailed notation throughout, this is a highly practical work ideal for psychoanalysts, psychiatrists, psychologists, students and professionals working with children, adolescents and adults.

The One and the Many

Relational Approaches to Group Psychotherapy

Edited by Robert Grossmark, is in private practice in New York City and teaches at the National Institute for the Psychotherapies, the Eastern Group Psychotherapy Training Program and the Doctoral Program in Clinical Psychology at the City University of New York and Fred Wright, Emeritus Professor of Psychology at The John Jay College of Criminal Justice of The City University of New York. He is in private practice

This volume applies advances in relational psychoanalysis to the theory and practice of group psychotherapy. In this volume the Editors bring together leading writers in the group psychotherapy field, both psychoanalysts and group therapists, who have integrated ideas from contemporary relational psychoanalysis. Together, they constitute a vibrant and dynamic new wave in group psychotherapy and psychoanalysis that challenge much accepted wisdom and practice in the field, including classic group psychotherapy ideas regarding the therapist's role, the group-as-a-whole and unconscious processes in group.

Torments of the Soul

Passions, Symptoms, Dreams

Antonino Ferro, in private practice, Pavia, Italy

Series: The New Library of Psychoanalysis

In this book, Ferro sets out what he sees as the task of contemporary psychoanalysis. Following Bion, he focuses on the importance of the apparatus for generating, containing and transforming previously unmanageable emotions with a clinical psychoanalytic context. He also explores Bion's concepts of 'reverie' and 'waking dream thought', suggesting treating every communication of the patient as a dream, and using this as a technical device to deconstruct and move beyond the concreteness of the words the patient uses. The analyst need to respond with his own reverie, which then becomes the 'royal road' to the unconscious communication of the patient.

Jung's Theory of Personality

A modern reappraisal

Clare Crellin, Retired consultant clinical psychologist, UK

Series: Research in Analytical Psychology and Jungian Studies

This book provides a re-appraisal of Carl Jung's work as a personality theorist. It offers a detailed consideration of Jung's work and theory in order to demystify some of the ideas that psychologists have found most difficult, such as Jung's religious and alchemical writings. The book shows why these two elements of his theory are integral to his psychology of personality and goes on to propose a framework on which to base a collaborative research programme that could provide much needed and, at present, unavailable validation data for some of Jung's key theoretical concepts.

The Psychological Roots of Modernism: Picasso and Jung

William A. Sikes, University of Pennsylvania, USA

A radically new interpretation of Picasso's life and work by an important Jungian scholar, this is an exciting contribution to the fields of both Jungian psychology and cultural criticism. All of Picasso's major works, from the Blue period masterpieces to the abstractions of mature Cubism, are examined as part of a single narrative which directly challenges our assumptions and provides an entirely new perspective on the signature achievements of the modernist movement. The book's powerful application of Jung's psychology and its radically new perspectives on Picasso's art make it essential reading for students in the fields of art history and Freudian and Jungian psychology.

Adolescent Violence in the Home

Restorative Approaches to Building Healthy, Respectful Family Relationships

Gregory Rountt, King County Courthouse, Seattle, USA and Lily Anderson, King County Courthouse, Seattle, USA

Adolescent Violence in the Home uses the Step Up framework, developed by the authors and in use in court systems and organizations around the world, to situate violent behaviors in the context of power and the intergenerational cycle of violence. Readers will come away from this book with a profound understanding of the social and individual factors that lead youth to use violence and how adolescent violence affects parents, and they'll also learn about a variety of interventions that specifically address teen violence against parents.

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

Integration of Cognitive, Neuropsychological, and Psychodynamic Perspectives in Psychotherapy

Edited by Francine Conway, Adelphi University, USA

For many researchers, clinicians, teachers, patients, and family members, the discourse on ADHD has been occurring in silos. Traditional ADHD camps are organized primarily in terms of neurological and cognitive perspectives and to a lesser extent psychoanalytic/psychodynamic perspectives. Those with an interest in ADHD have not been able to obtain a comprehensive understanding of the disorder and consequently have been restricted in psychotherapy treatment options. This book argues for the integration of the three perspectives on ADHD.

Cutting Down: A CBT workbook for treating young people who self-harm

Lucy Taylor, South London and Maudsley NHS, UK, Ulrike Schmidt, Institute of Psychiatry, UK and Mima Simic, South London and Maudsley NHS, UK

This book, based on a manualised cognitive-behavioural treatment pack piloted and evaluated by the authors, aims to help those treating adolescents. Cutting Down provides a structured four-part programme, including information on how to use the workbook and deliver the treatment, as well as providing handouts and homework that professionals can print out and give to sufferers. Using 'virtual patients', the book introduces the narratives of other sufferers, to highlight how self-harm can begin and how sufferers can be helped.

Residential Interventions for Children, Adolescents, and Families

A Best Practice Guide

Edited by Gary M. Blau, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, Maryland, USA, Beth Caldwell, Caldwell Management Associates, Massachusetts, USA and Robert E. Lieberman, Kairos, Inc., Oregon, USA

Now more than ever there is a need to ensure that best practices are being used in residential programs. As the focus on costs and outcomes increase, residential programs must clearly demonstrate that the interventions provided are efficient and effective. This book encourages readers to think strategically about how agencies, communities and systems can identify and implement actions that lead to positive change and how to work more collaboratively to improve the lives of children and adolescents who have experienced emotional and behavioral life challenges and their families.

The Routledge Handbook of Attachment: Assessment

Edited by Steve Farnfield, University of Roehampton, UK and Paul Holmes, In Private Practice, East Sussex, UK

The Routledge Handbook of Attachment: Assessment provides, in one volume, a detailed discussion of the formal measurement tools available to assess attachment across the age range, including with families. It contains comprehensive chapters on many attachment-based validated procedures for assessing parenting and evaluating risk, to enable professionals to decide what type of assessment is appropriate, who should conduct it and the usefulness of the results. The book provides a detailed account of assessment measures of attachment to enable practitioners at all levels (including academic research workers) to decide which assessment procedure will best meet their need.

The Routledge Handbook of Attachment: Implications and Interventions

Edited by Paul Holmes, In Private Practice, East Sussex, UK and Steve Farnfield, University of Roehampton, UK

This title offers an introduction to therapies produced as a result of the popularity of attachment studies. These therapies can be divided into two categories: those that are 'attachment-based', in that they use evidence-based attachment assessments in their development, or 'attachment-informed', in that the theories have been integrated into the practice of existing schools of therapy. Discussing how an understanding of formal assessments of attachment can be used to inform interventions to assist and protect children, this is an indispensable guide for clinical psychologists, psychiatrists and social workers working with children and families, clinicians in training and students.

Why Love Matters

How Affection Shapes a Baby's Brain

Sue Gerhardt, In private practice, Oxford, UK

Why Love Matters explained why love is essential to brain development in the early years of life, particularly to the development of our social and emotional brain systems. In this new edition, Sue Gerhardt succinctly incorporates research from the last decade, including developments in the field of epigenetics, mirror neurons, and the impact of economic adversity on stress symptoms, as well as a new chapter on pre-natal research. The final chapter describes the positive developments in understanding infant mental health over the past decade and outlines the opportunities and obstacles to further change.

Therapeutic Metaphors for Children and the Child Within

Joyce C. Mills, Phoenix Institute of Ericksonian Therapy, Arizona, USA and Richard J. Crowley, In private practice, California, USA

Metaphors constellate a healing array of unconscious learnings and resources in child and family therapy, and they can be some of the most powerful tools in a clinician's toolbox. The fully updated and revised edition of Therapeutic Metaphors for Children and the Child Within presents an extraordinarily effective method for creating and using metaphors in therapy. In its pages, clinicians will find a history of metaphor's use and an explanation of how the brain understands metaphors, and they'll be introduced to skills that will change the way they communicate with clients of all ages.

Therapeutic Practice in Schools Volume Two

The contemporary adolescent: A clinical workbook for school-based counsellors, psychotherapists and arts therapists

Edited by Lyn French, Director, Space for Creative Learning and Support, East London. and Reva Klein, A Space for Creative Learning and Support, East London, UK

Engaging troubled or troublesome adolescents in therapy can make an enormous difference to their lives. However, encouraging them to make a commitment to an introductory block of sessions and then supporting them sensitively and effectively enough to enable a therapeutic alliance to be formed can be challenging for the school therapist. This book introduces key features of adolescence before going on to explore some of the main challenges which therapists face working with this age group. Featuring a wealth of clinical material, it will serve as a practical and accessible handbook for trainee and qualified school-based counsellors, psychotherapists, arts therapists and play therapists.

Framing Global Health Governance

Edited by Colin McInnes, Aberystwyth University, UK and Kelley Lee, Simon Fraser University, Canada

Globalisation influences patterns of health and disease worldwide as well as how decisions on health are made and organised. Despite some successes in developing better global governance for health, progress overall has been disappointingly slow, especially given the number of health crises today. This book explores how progress has often been limited, but also on occasion assisted, by the role of ideas. It identifies how health issues, such as HIV/AIDS and pandemic influenza, are framed in such a way as to resonate with a set of ideas, or worldviews, associated with particular policy communities. This book was originally published as a special issue of Global Public Health.

Religious Responses to HIV and AIDS

Edited by Miguel Munoz-Laboy, Temple University, USA, Jonathan Garcia, Columbia University, USA, Joyce Moon-Howard, Columbia University, USA, Patrick A. Wilson, Columbia University, USA and Richard Parker, Columbia University, New York, USA

Drawing on a wide range of methodologies, the book documents a diverse portfolio of religious responses to HIV and AIDS on the local and global levels. This book goes beyond the psychology of religion, which is often based on how religion is used to cope with illness. It seeks to examine the role of religious institutions and cultures as key players in civil society, and to examine not only psychological factors, but social, cultural, economic and political dimensions of religious responses to the AIDS epidemic.

The Public Shaping of Medical Research

Patient Associations, Health Movements and Biomedicine

Edited by Peter Wehling and Willy Viehöver

Series: Routledge Studies in the Sociology of Health and Illness

Patient organizations and social health movements offer an illuminating example of civil society engagement and participation in scientific research. Combining an international selection of empirical case studies with conceptual discussion, the book discusses how public participation can contribute to, as well as restrict, the democratization of scientific knowledge.

Contested Issues in the Evaluation of Child Sexual Abuse

A Response to Questions Raised in Kuehnle and Connell's Edited Volume

Edited by Kathleen Coulborn Faller, University of Michigan, USA and Mark D. Everson, University of North Carolina, USA
This book represents a significant contribution to the highly contested debate surrounding how allegations of child sexual abuse should be evaluated. Despite decades of substantial research in this sensitive area, professional consensus remains elusive. The chapters in this collection feature both challenges to make this an essential resource that moves the debate forward.

Domestic Violence in Diverse Contexts

A Re-examination of Gender

Sarah Wendt, University of South Australia, Australia and Lana Zannettino, Flinders University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in the Sociology of Health and Illness

This book puts women's experiences of domestic violence at its centre, whilst acknowledging their many diverse and complex identities. Concentrating on the various forms of domestic abuse and their manifestation within different contexts, it argues that gender is centrally implicated in the factors that shape violence across all these areas.

Rural Families and Reshaping Human Services

Edited by Jeanne F. Cook, Keith Alford, Jennifer Uhrich and Pat Conway

This collection presents creative strategies and programs designed to address needs of families in the context of rural communities. Even before the most recent worldwide economic crisis, many rural families in the United States struggled to meet basic needs. As needs in rural communities have expanded, services have shrunk. This book identifies rural families' needs, including social supports during pregnancy, identification of adolescent risk behaviours, child safety, and basic services such as food and health care.

Phage Therapy

Oleg Tolmachov, Imperial College, London, UK and Tanya Tolmachova, Imperial College, London, UK

Phage therapy is the treatment of diseases caused by bacterial infections, employing bacteriophages as anti-bacterial agents. This healing strategy is getting its second wind driven by advances in robotic screening and nanotechnology. The book provides comprehensive coverage of the topic with the currently available data exposed and critically evaluated. It examines bacterial receptors and phage anti-receptors from the point of view of development of effective therapeutic phage cocktails and considers the cytotoxicity of phages and immune reaction issues. The book also discusses possible avenues for the commercialization of phage therapy technology and its ethical and legal aspects.

Biomarkers in Cardiovascular Diseases

Edited by Dimitris Tousoulis, Athens University Medical School, Greece and Christodoulos Stefanadis, Athens University Medical School, Greece

The establishment of precise and reliable biomarker tests for the early stages of cardiovascular disease (CVD) is of great importance and can be the cornerstone in the prevention of future CVD. This book focuses on the presentation and evaluation of the most promising classical and novel biochemical markers used in these diseases, which include coronary artery disease, hypertension, heart failure, hyperlipidemia, and peripheral arterial disease. The book reviews the underlying pathophysiological characteristics of each biomarker, as well as potential clinical implications in daily practice.

Biomarkers of Brain Injury and Neurological Disorders

Edited by Kevin K. W. Wang, Zhiqun Zhang, University of Florida, Gainesville, USA and Firas H. Kobeissy, University of Florida, Gainesville, USA

This book explores the recent advances in the techniques and platforms used in biomarker research that have revolutionized the way we study, diagnose, and treat brain injury conditions. The contributors describe different biomarker studies pertaining to brain injury and other neurological disorders and analyze the different models and technologies used to identify these biological markers. The book includes findings from "Omics research" that have been utilized to decipher and identify such biomarkers. It discusses protein, microRNA, and altered gene profiles and reviews neurological disorders such as multiple sclerosis, Charcot-Marie-Tooth disease, and prion and Alzheimer's disease.

Mechanobiology of the Endothelium

Edited by Helim Aranda-Espinoza

The endothelium is an excellent example of where biology meets physics and engineering. It has to convert mechanical forces into chemical signals to maintain homeostasis and even more, the endothelium controls the immune response, drug delivery through the vasculature, and cancer metastasis. Basic understanding of these processes is starting to emerge and applications from drug delivery to imaging modalities are already using the knowledge so gained. This book reviews current knowledge in mechanobiology of the endothelium and its implications for the development of theranostic devices.

Research for the Radiation Therapist

From Question to Culture

Edited by Caitlin Gillan, University of Toronto, Canada, Lisa DiProspero, University of Toronto, Canada, Nicole Harnett, University of Toronto, Canada and Lori Holden, University of Toronto, Canada

This book addresses a wide range of topics, from the principles of evidence-based practice to the process and dissemination of research to unique considerations such as clinical trials, patenting, and health services research. One of the more unique aspects of the scope of this book is the inclusion of chapters relating to the dissemination of knowledge, manuscript publication, and how to build an academic research program. Each chapter focuses on introducing the reader to foundational principles, methodology, and terminology, and highlight case studies of radiation therapist research or experience that is relevant to provide contextual examples and inspiration to readers.

Chemically Bonded Bioceramics

Edited by Leif Hermansson, Doxa AB, Uppsala, Sweden

This book describes new biomaterials based on nanostructural chemically bonded bioceramics, which are widely used as general construction materials, but have found new applications as biomaterials. These biomaterials are produced in situ and in vivo mainly using hydration reactions, that is, reactions between phosphates, silicates, or aluminates and water. The text treats general and specific properties of these materials in detail. It also describes the potential application area for these new materials.

A Practical Guide to Selecting Gametes and Embryos

Edited by Markus Montag, IVF Laboratory, University Clinics Heidelberg, Departments of Gynecological Endocrinology and Fertility Disorders, Heidelberg, Germany

The development of current technologies in assisted reproduction to identify the most viable oocyte, sperm, or embryo is one of the most discussed topics in symposia. However, most of these technologies have not yet become part of the daily routine in the IVF laboratory. Accompanied by numerous figures and descriptions, this practical guide to selecting gametes and embryos presents an overview of established and developing technologies for the embryo laboratory. International authors provide practical hints on collection techniques, quality control, noninvasive techniques, biopsy testing, and aneuploidy testing by FISH and array-CGH.

Applied Epidemiology Using R and RStudio

Tomas J. Aragon, University of California, Berkeley School of Public Health, California, USA

This book fills the gap as an introduction to R specifically for epidemiologists. It presents all the necessary background to get started with R, work with R data objects, and manage epidemiological data in R. It then covers data analysis and graphics for addressing problems in epidemiology, including the key topics of confounding and outbreak analysis. The text is packed with exercises to enhance understanding and detailed worked examples using real data from epidemiological studies.

A Text and Color Atlas 5E

Edited by Jonathan Botting, Dermatological Surgeon, Chelsea and Westminster Hospital and Queen Mary's Hospital, UK and Julia Schofield, Principal Lecturer, School of Postgraduate Medicine, University of Hertfordshire and Consultant Dermatologist, United Lincolnshire Hospitals NHS Trust, UK

An essential resource on skin and minor surgery, this illustrated text and color atlas provides an authoritative and systematic guide to commonly performed minor surgical and dermatology procedures. Divided into four main color-coded sections, the book covers essential background information including postoperative management and aftercare, the key knowledge required for diagnosis and management, and the skills necessary to perform procedures step by step. Accompanied by video clips, the book is designed for all trainees and practitioners, including experienced surgeons, dermatologists, family doctors, nurses, and the supporting healthcare team.

Pocket Medical Statistics

An A-Z for Critical Appraisal, Second Edition

Filomena Pereira-Maxwell, Formerly Lecturer in Medical Statistics, St Bartholomew's and the Royal London School of Medicine and Dentistry, now based in Washington, USA

This concise dictionary of essential statistical terminology has been designed specifically with the needs of the clinician and health care practitioner in mind. Avoiding the complex language that is so often a feature of statistics and research methodology, this text provides clear and succinct explanations, clarifying meaning and showing the interdependencies between important concepts. This edition includes enhanced explanations of statistical concepts and methods—including more illustrative content—for greater accessibility. The book makes frequent use of examples from the medical literature, with reference to landmark studies, ensuring clinical relevance.

Timothy RJ Nicholson, Institute of Psychiatry, London, UK and Donald RJ Singer, University Hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire, UK

This book is an A-Z listing of the 500 most commonly prescribed drugs. Each entry contains key prescribing information and provides information on safety issues, warnings, drug errors, and adverse effects. The book supplies practical guidance on drug selection and includes prescribing protocols and guidelines, information for complicated prescriptions, and concise management summaries for the common medical emergencies. It includes the new European Resuscitation Council algorithms and clinically useful reminders of basic pharmacology. It puts all the "must-have" information that junior doctors, nurse prescribers, and medical students need at their fingertips.

Analysis of Competing Risks Data

Concepts, Methods and Software

Ronald Geskus

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

This practical book helps biomedical and epidemiological researchers extend their knowledge and skills in the analysis of standard time-to-event data to the competing risks setting. The author explains the main concepts that play a role in competing risks analyses, including the independence assumption with respect to censoring and truncation, cause-specific cumulative incidence, and competing risks as the simplest form of a multi-state model. Analyses can be performed using the survival R package.

Antioxidants in Sports Nutrition

Edited by Manfred Lamprecht, University of Graz, Centre for Physiological Medicine, Austria

Antioxidant use in sports is controversial due to existing evidence that it both supports and hurts athletic performance. This book presents information on antioxidants, specifically for athletes, and their roles in sports nutrition. It stresses how antioxidants affect exercise performance, health, and immunity. Chapters cover oxidative stress; basic nutrition for athletes; major dietary antioxidants; sports supplements; performance/adaptation to exercise; antioxidants role in health and immunity; reviews on vitamins C, E, beta carotene, and minerals in sports nutrition; and roles polyphenols play in high-performance sport.

Bayesian Networks

With Examples in R

Marco Scutari and Jean-Baptiste Denis, Unité de Recherche Mathématiques et Informatique Appliquées, INRA, Jouy-en-Josas, France

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

This text introduces graduate students to Bayesian networks using a hands-on approach through simple yet meaningful examples in R. It explains the whole process of Bayesian network modeling, from structure learning to parameter learning to inference. The book describes discrete Bayesian, Gaussian Bayesian, and mixed networks. It gives a concise but rigorous treatment of the fundamentals of Bayesian networks and offers an introduction to causal Bayesian networks. It also evaluates real-world examples, including a landmark causal protein signaling network paper and graphical modeling approaches for predicting body composition.

Carbohydrate Chemistry

Proven Synthetic Methods Volume 3

Edited by Rene Roy, Université du Québec a Montreal, Canada and Sebastien Vidal, University of Lyon, Villeurbanne, France

Series: Carbohydrate Chemistry

This book compiles reliable protocols for preparation of intermediates for carbohydrate synthesis or other uses in the glycosciences. Protocols and methods are verified independently to ensure reproducibility. The text includes more detailed version of protocols published previously and published by others in the past or in not readily available journals. It also contains protocols developed in the authors' laboratories or elsewhere, even from a long time ago. Childhood Obesity

Prevalence, Pathophysiology, and Management

Edited by Rexford S. Ahima, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, USA

The prevalence of childhood overweight and obesity has increased worldwide in recent decades. Obesity in childhood is associated with a wide range of serious health complications and an increased risk of premature illness and death later in life. This book presents childhood obesity trends across multiple demographics and discusses the contributing genetic and environmental factors. It demonstrates the adverse health consequences of childhood obesity both as they relate to childhood and as they last into adulthood and presents multiple methods for obesity treatment included community and family-based intervention, pharmacotherapy, and surgical procedures.

Climate Change

The Principles and Applications in Horticultural Science

Edited by M. L. Choudhary, Bihar Agricultural University, Sabour, Bhagalpur, India, V. B. Patel, Bihar Agricultural University, Sabour, Bhagalpur, India, Md. Wasim Siddiqui, Bihar Agricultural University, India and S. Sheraz Mahdl, Bihar Agricultural University, India

Climate change is already affecting, and is likely to increase, invasive species, pests, and disease vectors, all adversely affecting agri-horticultural crop productivity. Advances in agricultural knowledge, science, and technology will be required to develop improved crop traits, for example temperature, drought, pest, and salt tolerance. This book gives readers an understanding of the issues and includes suggestions for ways to mitigate adverse climate change effects on crops. It covers nutrition and production as well as crops' resistance to biotic and abiotic stress caused by climate change.

Climate Change and Coastal Ecosystems

Long-term Effects of Climate and Nutrient Loading on Trophic Organization

Robert J. Livingston

Series: CRC Marine Science

Based upon a four decade longitudinal study of river-estuarine systems in the Northeast Gulf of Mexico, this book provides a detailed comparative analysis of the long-term data with specific references to similarities and differences in system response to nutrient loading (natural and anthropogenic) and long-term climatological cycles. It includes specific references to noted changes in the climate of the study regions over the four decades of field operations. The unique database will allow a totally new approach to the differentiation of anthropogenic processes relative to natural conditions in a series of river-estuarine systems.

Climate Change Effect on Crop Productivity

Edited by Rakesh S. Sengar, Sardar Vallabh bhai Patel University of Agriculture & Technology, Meerut, India and Kalpana Sengar, Sardar Vallabh bhai Patel University of Agriculture & Technology, Meerut, India

This book analyses the global consequences to crop yields, production, and risk of hunger of linked socio-economic and climate scenarios. Potential impacts of climate change are estimated for used to evaluate consequent changes in global cereal production, cereal prices and the number of people at risk from hunger. The crop yield results elucidate the complex regional patterns of projected climate variables, CO₂ effects, and agricultural systems that contribute to aggregations of global crop production.

Clinical Nutrition

The Interface Between Metabolism, Diet, and Disease

Edited by Leah Coles, Baker IDI Heart and Diabetes Institute, Prahran, Australia

The field of clinical nutrition as a whole seeks to consider the nutrition of patients within the healthcare system, paying attention to the interactions between diet, nutrition, and disease. To that end, this book discusses nutrition as both a contributing and managing factor in relation to diseases such as obesity and diabetes. It also presents malnutrition as a contributing factor to such diseases and considers the efficacy of micronutrient supplementation. It ends by looking at some of the recent developments and future trends in the field of clinical nutrition.

Displaying Time Series, Spatial, and Space-Time Data with R

Oscar Perpinan Lamigueiro, ETSIDI-UPM, Madrid, Spain

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC The R Series

Focusing on the exploration of data with visual methods, this book presents methods and R code for producing high-quality graphics of time series, spatial, and space-time data. It illustrates how to display a dataset starting with an easy and direct approach and progressively adding improvements that involve more complexity. Practical examples using real-world datasets help readers understand how to apply the methods and code. The graphics, data, and R code are accessible from the author's website.

Functional Foods

The Connection Between Nutrition, Health, and Food Science

Edited by Leah Coles, Baker IDI Heart and Diabetes Institute, Prahran, Australia

This new book presents a variety of important research on functional foods—foods that have another role related to disease prevention or health. The first section of the book includes chapters on the complicated relationships between nutrition, physical and mental health, and disease. Section 2 focuses on the connection between health science and food, and presents a number of case studies on the possible uses of functional foods. The book discusses important methods for nutritional interventions in relation to diseases such as obesity and other prominent health concerns in modern society.

Genetics, Genomics and Breeding of Eucalypts

Edited by Robert J. Henry

Series: Genetics, Genomics and Breeding of Crop Plants

Eucalypts are used for the production of paper products, firewood, charcoal, potential feedstocks for bioenergy and biomaterials, as ornamentals and landscape trees, and in land rehabilitation. Eucalypt breeding is at an early stage with many plantings being only at the first stages of domestication. The relatively small genomes of these species make the application of molecular genetics approaches attractive. The application of modern genomics will accelerate the development of improved eucalypts for a wide range of uses. This book brings together diverse information on the genetics, genomics, and breeding of these important forest species.

Genetics, Genomics and Breeding of Peanuts

Edited by Nalini Mallikarjuna, International Crop Research Institute for Semi-Arid Tropics (ICRISAT), India and Rajeev K. Varshney, ICRISAT, Patancheru, India

Series: Genetics, Genomics and Breeding of Crop Plants

Peanut, an amphidiploid, is an important food and oil crop and has an interesting evolutionary history. This book provides a glimpse of the advances in genetic resources and genomics research of peanut made during the last decade. It contains an overview of germplasm, advances in genetic and genomic resources, genetic and trait mapping, proteomic and transcriptomic analyses, functional and comparative genomics studies, and molecular breeding applications. This book should prove useful to students, teachers, and young researchers as a ready reference to the latest information on peanut genetics and genomics.

Herbal Drugs as Therapeutic Agents

Amritpal Singh, Herbal Consultant, Mohali, India

Phytochemicals are the mainstay of therapeutics of herbal or botanical medicine. Research on phytochemicals is conducted worldwide and several have been screened for clinical trials, including promising anticancer agents withaferin-a and camphothecin. This book provides a scientific understanding of the mode of action of these molecules, targeting only those phytochemicals and herbal extracts that are subjects of recent pharmacological investigations. Chapters such as industrial crops for steroid manufacturing and anticancer potential of sesquiterpenoids make readers eager to learn more about the commercial viability of phytochemical and herbal extracts.

Human Longevity

Omega-3 Fatty Acids, Bioenergetics, Molecular Biology and Evolution
Raymond C. Valentine, University of California at Davis, USA and David L. Valentine

Human cells are protected from the ravages of aging by defensive systems including novel mechanisms against membrane oxidation introduced in this book. The book proposes a unified concept in which aging cells faced with declining energy production by mitochondria and the relatively high cost of protecting membranes against oxidation are triggered by energy stress to activate programmed cellular death. It includes case histories illustrating the duality of polyunsaturated membranes in aging and longevity. It also explains the relationship between membrane unsaturation and longevity leading to a unified concept of aging.

Insect Molecular Biology and Ecology

Edited by Klaus H. Hoffmann, University of Bayreuth, Germany

Insects have one of the widest distributions on the globe because they have adapted to extreme ranges of environments. This book presents current entomological research, where molecular tools help to advance traditional ecological studies. Chapters include insect-insect and insect-plant interactions, mechanisms of environmental adaptation, and use of insect biotechnology in pest and vector control. The book may help to combine powerful methods in molecular biology with exciting issues in ecology in order to understand why insects become "masters of survival."

Interrelationships Between Corals and Fisheries

Edited by Stephen A. Bortone, Ph.D., Gulf of Mexico Fishery Management Council, Tampa, Florida, USA

Series: CRC Marine Biology Series

There is extensive concern about the impact of fishing on coral reef structure and, conversely, the impact of decreasing coral on fisheries, and stress on coral reefs seems to be increasing due to global warming, coral disease, and pollution. Written by a team of notable authorities in coral reef research and fisheries management, this book examines the short- and long-term consequences of trends in coral health for fisheries. Its inclusive coverage makes this an important resource for coral reef specialists, fishery scientists and managers, marine and conservation biologists, zoologists, ecologists, environmental planners, and students.

Accessible to ecological researchers, this book is the first to introduce ecological sampling methods from a statistical viewpoint. It starts with classic random sampling methods and then covers more advanced forms of sampling, including adaptive, line transect, and plotless sampling. It also describes trend analysis, resource selection, and mark-recapture methods. The book presents the necessary theory but mainly focuses on showing readers how to apply the methods, incorporating many examples and case studies as well as software.

Marine Algae

Biodiversity, Taxonomy, Environmental Assessment, and Biotechnology

Edited by Leonel Pereira, University of Coimbra, Portugal, Joana Patricio, University of Coimbra, Portugal and Joao Magalhaes Neto, University of Coimbra, Portugal

This book is divided into three thematic areas. The first covers a revision of the taxonomy of algae, based on the algae portal, as well as the general aspects of biology and the methodologies used in this branch of marine biology. The second subject area focuses on the use of algae in environmental assessment, with an intensive implementation in Western economies and some emerging economies. The third topic is the potential use of algae in various industries including food, pharmaceuticals, cosmetics, agricultural fertilizers, and the emerging biofuels industries.

Melatonin

Therapeutic Value and Neuroprotection

Edited by Venkatramanujan Srinivasan, Gabriella Gobbi, Samuel D. Shillcutt and Sibel Suzen

There is a growing interest in the field of melatonin research concerning its neurobiological mechanisms as well as its repercussions in clinical practice. A decrease in melatonin production and receptors results in numerous dysfunctions in the body. This text explores melatonin's neuroprotective effects and discusses the therapeutic potential of melatonin and melatonin agonists in treating neurodegenerative diseases. In addition to addressing the neuroprotective role of melatonin, the book also explores its protective roles in other tissues such as the brain, heart, and liver.

Molecular Modeling at the Atomic Scale

Methods and Applications in Quantitative Biology

Edited by Ruhong Zhou, IBM T.J. Watson Research Center, Yorktown Heights, New York, USA

Series: Series in Computational Biophysics

Developments in molecular modeling from experimental and computational techniques have enabled a wide range of biological applications. This timely summary reflects the recent advances in bridging novel algorithms and high performance computing with characterization of important biological processes, such as folding dynamics of key proteins. It encompasses the perspectives of leading experts on this transformation in molecular biology, illustrating with state of the art examples how molecular modeling approaches are being applied to critical questions in modern quantitative biology.

Molluscan Communities of the Florida Keys and Adjacent Areas

Their Ecology and Biodiversity

Edward J. Petuch, Florida Atlantic University, Boca Raton, USA and Robert F. Myers

Taking a novel community-driven approach, this book represents the first comprehensive overview of the ecology and biodiversity of the Phylum Mollusca in the area of southern Florida commonly known as the Florida Keys and those areas that surround it. The 20 marine ecosystems and their associated molluscan assemblages are arranged by the CMECS (Coastal Marine Ecological Classification Standard) system, emphasizing the hierarchical relationships determined by substrate type, bathymetry, and salinity. The book includes hundreds of color graphics of gastropods and bivalves, every major marine habitat in the Florida Keys, and living mollusks in their habitats.

Suitable as a reference or textbook, this book on morphodynamics leads the readers to pose their own questions and sharpen their interpretive skills. It is copiously illustrated with more than 125 plates of the authors' own distinctive drawings. The book is divided into two parts, with the first part laying out the topic of morphodynamics and the interaction of form in evolution, taphonomy, and paleontology. The second part shows the application of those principles across the diversity of life.

Nitrogen Management in Crop Production

Nand Kumar Fageria, National Rice & Bean Research Center of Embrapa, Santo Antônio de Goiás, Brazil

The judicious use of nitrogen in crop production is highly desirable for both economic and environmental reasons, because much of the nitrogen applied to crop plants goes unused, resulting in environmental problems and waste. This book reviews the practical and theoretical aspects of nitrogen management in crop production. Chapters address the functions of nitrogen, nitrogen loss in the soil-plant system, diagnostic techniques for nitrogen requirements, management of soil organic matter, nitrogen interaction with other nutrients, biological nitrogen fixation by legumes, and management practices to improve nitrogen use efficiency in crop plants.

Nutrition and Bariatric Surgery

Edited by Robert F. Kushner, Northwestern Comprehensive Center on Obesity, Chicago, Illinois, USA and Christopher D. Still, Geisinger Obesity Research Institute, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA

While bariatric surgery can lead to positive effects, it can also result in increased risk for nutrient malabsorption, deficiency, and clinical complications. This book addresses the dietary and nutritional care of the bariatric surgery patient. It explores the physiological changes that underlie selective nutrient malabsorption, preoperative nutritional assessment and dietary care of the patient through the surgery process, and nutritional clinical complications manifesting in anemia, neurological disorders, metabolic bone disease, and protein-calorie malnutrition. It also covers special populations, including adolescents and pregnant and lactating patients.

Nutrition and Epigenetics

Edited by Emily Ho and Frederick Domann

Series: Oxidative Stress and Disease

This book covers new information on the action of diet and nutritional determinants in regulating the epigenetic control of gene expression in health and disease. There are seven sections, and each section comprises a number of focused reviews on a given theme. This book is a resource to basic scientists and clinical researchers interested in nutrition, aging, and metabolic diseases.

Nutrition-Infection Interactions and Impacts on Human Health

Edited by Mohan Pammi, Jesus G. Vallejo and Steven A. Abrams

This book provides a summary of the current state-of-the-art evidence of nutrition-infection interactions including relevant clinical and basic science research and its impact on health and disease. It explores the role of nutrition in health and disease as well as effects of both under and over nutrition. Chapters cover roles of GI microbiota; enteric syndromes; immune-nutrients; pro/pre- and post biotics; HIV infection; nutrient-drug interactions; infection-nutrient interactions in special populations; and identifying future research directions for nutritional and anti-infective strategies.

Obesity Epidemiology, Pathogenesis, and Treatment

A Multidisciplinary Approach

Edited by Rexford S. Ahima, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, USA

The book provides a comprehensive perspective on the subject of obesity epidemiology, pathophysiology, and management of obesity. The chapters provide a better understanding of obesity and obesity-related diseases and offer an integrative framework for individualized dietary and exercise programs, behavior modification, pharmaceutical approaches, surgery, and population interventions to reduce the growing epidemic of obesity.

Pests of Fruit Crops

A Colour Handbook, Second Edition

David V Alford, Formerly Regional Entomologist and Head of Entomology, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Cambridge, UK

This new edition focuses on insect and mite pests affecting fruit as well as hop and nut crops in both temperate and subtropical climates. Some of the fruits covered include pome fruits, stone fruits, cane fruits, strawberries, bush fruits, grapevines, citrus fruits, nuts, figs, and olives. The book covers life histories, distribution, and status of pests with a focus on damages caused to these fruit crops. The work is profusely illustrated with over 1,150 color photographs, and coverage is directly relevant to all of Europe.

The Mediterranean Way of Eating

Evidence for Chronic Disease Prevention and Weight Management

John J.B. Anderson and Marilyn C. Sparling

This book presents evidence-based research that validates the traditional Mediterranean way of eating with respect to health. It offers information about an enjoyable, healthy way of eating that has stood the test of time, along with practical suggestions for incorporating the Mediterranean diet into daily life. The book addresses nutrients found in Mediterranean foods, how they function in the body, and why they are essential for optimal health. It highlights the Mediterranean diet's effectiveness in weight management and prevention and treatment of various chronic diseases.

Urban Ecology

An Introduction

Ian Douglas, University of Manchester, UK and Philip James

This textbook sets out what we know now and how we can use that knowledge of urban ecology to build and maintain a better, more sustainable urban future; it also identifies what we still need to know. It discusses the components of urban ecology and the role of nature in people's everyday lives. It provides the science that underlies the changing natural scene and the management tools needed to ensure that cities become both capable of adapting to climate change and more beautiful and more sustainable places in which to live.

Edited by L. E. Frostick, University of Hull, Hull, UK, R.E. Thomas, University of Hull, UK, M.F. Johnson, Loughborough University, Loughborough, UK, S.P. Rice, Loughborough University, Loughborough, UK and S.J. McLelland, University of Hull, Hull, UK

Series: IAHR Design Manual

Users Guide to Ecohydraulic Experimentation gives an overview of organism-environment interactions in marine and freshwater aquatic systems and provides guidance to those wishing to use hydraulic experimental facilities to explore ecohydraulic processes. By highlighting the current state of our knowledge, this design manual will act as a guide to the use of living organisms in physical models and experiments and help scientists and engineers understand limitations on the use of surrogates. Its primary purpose is to disseminate the extensive knowledge and experience of ecohydraulic experimentalists involved in HYDRALAB IV as part of the PISCES research project.

Ecotoxicology

Effects of Pollutants on the Natural Environment

Colin Walker

This book explains the science behind the harmful effects of pollutants to the natural environment, and relates this subject to the chemical defense mechanisms in plants and animals that have occurred in nature since early times on the evolutionary scale. It outlines the basic issues and principles of ecotoxicology, how ecotoxicity is measured, biomagnification of persistent pollutants in food chains, toxic effects at different levels of biological organization, the development of resistance to pesticides and other biocides, and some problems of inorganic pollution.

Heavy Metal Contamination of Water and Soil

Analysis, Assessment, and Remediation Strategies

Edited by Elham Asrari, Payame Noor University, Shiraz, Iran

Although adverse health effects of heavy metals have been known for a long time, exposure to heavy metals continues and is even increasing in some areas. Remediating heavy metal contaminated soils and water is necessary to reduce the associated health and ecological risks, make the land resource available for agricultural production, enhance food security, and scale down land tenure problems. This book discusses the causes and the environmental impact of heavy metal contamination. It then explores many exciting new methods of analysis and decontamination currently studied and applied in the field today.

Biomaterials

A Basic Introduction

Qizhi Chen, Monash University, Clayton, Australia

Biomaterials is a multidisciplinary subject, involving materials science, engineering, cell biology, and medicine. This textbook therefore provides an appropriate balance between depth and breadth of coverage, sufficient to enable understanding of the most important concepts and principles at the right level by students from a wide academic spectrum. This project has been developed from extensive lecture notes created by Dr. Chen in the teaching of biomaterial at Monach U, since 2008.

Biotechnology and Science Fiction

Edited by Rosalyn W. Berne, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, USA

This book melds essays on biotechnology written by scientists into science fiction stories. It opens a conversation about the morality of what we may one day be, and what it may mean to be human as our biotechnological endeavors continue to evolve. The biotechnology "revolution," launched on a global scale many decades ago, has taken a direct course toward re-creating life. Yet there are still many choices to be made in shaping the future that it may one day make possible. The book motivates readers toward deep reflection and continual discourse, which is essential if biotechnology is to evolve in ethical, meaningful, and sustainable ways.

Basic Statistics and Pharmaceutical Statistical Applications, Third Edition

James E. De Muth, University of Wisconsin - Madison, USA
Series: Pharmacy Education Series

This book serves as an introduction to statistics for undergraduate and graduate students in pharmacy as well as a reference guide for professionals in various pharmacy settings. Designed specifically for non-statisticians, the text avoids heavy mathematics and concentrates on the practical application of the most commonly employed statistical tests. This edition introduces new statistical tests and includes Excel and Minitab applications for descriptive and inferential statistics.

Equivalency and Noninferiority Testing in Clinical Trials

Issues and Challenges

Tie-Hua Ng, Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, Maryland, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Biostatistics Series

This book focuses on the rationale of choosing the noninferiority (NI) margin as a small fraction of the therapeutic effect of the active control in a clinical trial. It discusses issues of estimating the effect size based on historical placebo control trials of the active control. The book also covers basic concepts related to NI trials, such as assay sensitivity, constancy assumption, discounting, and preservation. Other topics described include patient populations, three-arm trials, and testing equivalence of three or more groups.

Nanotechnology and Drug Delivery

Edited by José L. Arias, University of Granada, Spain

Nanotechnology offers a revolutionary and definitive approach for the efficient delivery of drug molecules to non-healthy tissues and cells. This first volume of a series of two volumes analyzes the basics in the development of drug-loaded nanoplatfoms, the so-called nanomedicines. Special attention is given to physicochemical engineering, pharmacokinetics, biocompatibility and biodegradability, representative nanoplatfoms (based on lipids, polymers, cyclodextrins, metals, carbon, silica, iron oxides, etc.), and advanced nano-engineering strategies for passive, ligand-mediated, and/or stimuli-sensitive drug delivery and release.

Project Management for Research and Development

Guiding Innovation for Positive R&D Outcomes

Lory Mitchell Wingate

Series: Best Practices and Advances in Program Management Series

Many successful research and development (R&D) companies have already realized the benefits of applying project management processes for achieving better project results. The key is to apply proven project management principles in a way that enables R&D and innovation. This book explains how to apply project management to obtain positive outcomes in R&D and innovation projects. Each chapter includes diagrams, surveys, checklists, and question-answer forms to guide readers in determining where their activity falls along a project spectrum, and to help them structure their own R&D or innovation project.

Re-inventing Drug Development

Edited by Jeffrey S. Handen

The biopharmaceutical industry has entered an era of unprecedented change and challenge, characterized by increasing pricing pressures, rising rates of attrition in the product development lifecycle, and decreasing scientific innovation. The most successful products are losing patent protection, and pipelines have been unable to fill the gap. This book explores the evolving definition of innovation in therapeutic product development and begins to examine its effects on and implications to the life sciences R&D industry vis-à-vis collaboration, communication, and integration

Sample Size Calculations for Clustered and Longitudinal Outcomes in Clinical Research

Chul Ahn, University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center, Dallas, USA, Moonseoung Heo, Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Bronx, New York, USA, Song Zhang, University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center, Dallas, USA and Mimi Kim

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Biostatistics Series

Sample size calculation is an important component at the design stage of clinical trials, health outcomes, and behavioral research. This book deals with how to estimate sample size for correlated outcomes, such as clustered data and longitudinal data. It provides sample size formulas incorporating intracluster correlation and the variability in cluster sizes. It also describes how missing data and correlation structures affect the sample size estimates in longitudinal data using generalized estimating equation (GEE) and mixed model approaches.

Beneficial Microbes in Fermented and Functional Foods

Edited by Ravishankar Rai V and Jamuna A. Bai

This book focuses exclusively on the beneficial effects of microbes in food. The section on traditional and modern fermented foods covers the role of microbes and their diversity in fermented foods, interaction between the different microflora present in fermented food products, development of starter cultures to improve the nutritional and sensory quality of fermented foods, and factors and processes affecting the safety of various fermented foods. The second section focuses on microbes in and as functional foods: probiotics, prebiotics and synbiotics.

Clinical Aspects of Functional Foods and Nutraceuticals

Edited by Dilip Ghosh, Director, Nutriconnect, Sydney, Australia, Debasis Bagchi, University of Houston College of Pharmacy, Texas, USA and Tetsuya Konishi

This book provides an extensive overview of various clinical aspects of functional foods and nutraceuticals. It contains information on diverse nutritional challenges and potential health benefits from functional foods and nutraceuticals. Chapters cover functional foods in human health, food–drug interactions, global regulatory frameworks and systems, seed to clinic approach, innovative new food products, personalized nutrition in public health, functional foods in medicine, and future roles of functional foods and nutraceuticals.

Dairy Microbiology and Biochemistry

Recent Developments

Edited by Barbaros Ozer, Ankara University, Turkey and Gülsün Akdemir-Evrendilek, Abant İzzet Baysal University, Bolu, Turkey

This book covers recent developments in types, classifications, and genetic traits of indigenous milk microorganisms and dairy starter cultures. It also discusses biochemical reactions taking place in different dairy products and microorganisms involved in such reactions. The text provides strategies for rapid detection of pathogenic and non-pathogenic organisms in milk and milk products and safety systems for dairy processing. It concludes with a discussion of the effects of non-thermal processing technologies on milk microorganisms and biochemical reactions in milk products.

Food Engineering Fundamentals (Volume I of Handbook of Food Processing and Engineering)

Edited by Theodoros Varzakas, Higher Institute of Kalamata, Greece and Constantina Tzia, National Technical University of Athens, Greece

Series: Contemporary Food Engineering

This book provides an up-to-date review of food processing and engineering phenomena. It addresses the basic principles of food engineering technologies used in food processing operations around the world, combining theory with a practical hands-on approach. The book explores the basic and applied aspects of food engineering from mass transfer and heat transfer to steam and boilers, heat exchangers, fluid flow, and novel food processes such as membrane technology. It describes the physico-chemical and microbiological methods for each preservation methodology and addresses interactions between different food constituents.

Handbook of Indigenous Foods Involving Alkaline Fermentation

Edited by Prabir K. Sarkar, University of North Bengal, Siliguri, India and M.J. Robert Nout, Wageningen University, The Netherlands

Series: Fermented Foods and Beverages Series

This book describes the history, culture, production, microbiology, biochemistry, nutritional value, and roles of the diet of indigenous alkaline fermented foods of the world. The rise in pH during the production of these foods results in an environment that makes the substrate unsatisfactory for the growth of undesirable microorganisms and determines what microorganisms can survive, multiply, and carry out the fermentation. This book emphasizes the microbiological and biochemical processes in the fermentations and the factors that influence the development of the characteristic microbiota and the biochemical and organoleptic changes induced by them.

Intestinal Microbiota in Health and Disease

Modern Concepts

Edited by Eduardo J. Schiffrin, Nestlé Research Center, Vevey, Switzerland, Philippe Marteau, Denis Diderot Paris 7 University, France and Dominique Brassart, Nestlé Nutrition, Vaud, Switzerland

Now considered an organ with defensive and metabolic capabilities, the intestinal microbiota plays a major role in the local host immune system development and education. It contributes to the generation of a homeostatic balance characterized by the capacity to react against pathogens while remaining hyperresponsive/tolerant against commensals. This homeostatic response depends on bacteria and bacterial product sensing by innate immune cells and their molecular asset at the intestinal mucosa. This book captures the enormous progress that has been accomplished in this field in recent years.

Local Food Environments

Food Access in America

Edited by Kimberly B. Morland

This book describes the landscape of local food environments through research methods and documented impacts. It provides information on the complex nature of food delivery systems as well as the historical and political trends that shaped them over time. Chapters cover community perspectives on food shopping in the US; economic and agricultural policies shaping US food environments; geography of food environments; study design, measurement, and analytical issues; local environments, behavior, and health; food delivery outside the US; local action to modify food environments; and local, state, and federal policy changes.

Nanoparticle- and Microparticle-based Delivery Systems

Encapsulation, Protection and Release of Active Compounds

David Julian McClements, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, USA

This book covers the formation, properties, characterization, and application of different kinds of colloidal delivery systems that can be utilized within the food industry, including surfactant-based, emulsion-based, and biopolymer-based systems. The book takes a traditional colloid science approach to the subject with particular emphasis on the practical aspects of formulation of particulate and emulsion-based delivery systems for pharmaceutical and food applications. It covers active ingredients drawn from proteins, carbohydrates, and lipids as well as mineral-based active ingredients. The book describes particle characteristics and explains mechanical particle fabrication methods.

Novel Techniques in Sensory Characterization and Consumer Profiling

Edited by Paula Varela and Gastón Ares, Universidad de la República, Montevideo, Uruguay

Sensory characterization is one of the most powerful, sophisticated, and extensively applied tools in sensory science. This book focuses on sensory characterization of food and non-food products, providing an overview of classical and novel alternative methodologies. A complete description of the methodologies is provided, accompanied by detailed information for implementation, discussion of examples of applications, and case studies. The implementation of the majority of the methodologies is performed in the statistical free software R, making the book accessible for people unfamiliar with complex statistical software.

Architect's Pocket Book

Ann Ross and Jonathan Hetreed

This handy pocketbook brings together a wealth of useful information that student and professional architects need on a daily basis, whether on site or in the studio.

The book provides guidance on a range of tasks, from complying with the Building Regulations, to helping with planning, use of materials and detailing.

Compact and affordable, the Architect's Pocketbook has been used by successive generation of architects and designers. This is the famous little blue book that you can't afford to be without.

Metric Handbook

Planning and Design Data

David Littlefield, University of the West of England, UK

The Metric Handbook is the major handbook of planning and design data for architects and architecture students. Covering basic design data for all the major building types it is the ideal starting point for any project.

As well as buildings the book deals with broader aspects of design such as materials, acoustics, lighting, and general design data on human dimensions and space requirements. This handbook really is the unique reference for solving everyday planning problems. It has been significantly updated in reference to the latest construction standards and new building types, with sustainable design integrated into chapters. Over 100,000 copies sold to successive generations of architects and designers – this book belongs on every design office desk and drawing board.

The Structural Basis of Architecture

Bjorn N. Sandaker, Oslo School of Architecture, Norway, Arne P. Eggen, Oslo School of Architecture, Norway and Mark R. Cruvellier, Cornell University, USA

One of the most important subjects in the education of an architect is building structures. This textbook is by authors teaching and working in both architecture and structural engineering fields.

Approached in a qualitative, discursive manner, the subject is illustrated by many photographs of architectural projects and structural behaviour diagrams. Examples are drawn from both historical and contemporary projects. This new edition, perfect as a course text, includes plenty of worked-out examples and problems.

An Introduction to Low Carbon Domestic Refurbishment

Peter Rickaby and Construction Products Association

An Introduction to Low Carbon Domestic Refurbishment comes in two parts. The first describes the fundamentals and preliminary considerations of planning a low carbon refurbishment project, before exploring various components of a house. In the second section, a series of case studies provide examples real-world low carbon refurbishment projects and products.

Updated for Approved Document L, changes to permitted development rights, and other issues around planning and funding, it encompasses the latest research and expands its discussion of air-tightness and ventilation, water labelling, and lighting – plus brand new references and case studies.

Architectural System Structures

Integrating Design Complexity in Industrialised Construction

Kasper Sánchez Vibæk, Former Associate Professor at CINARK, The Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts, Denmark.

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

In line with the so-called systems sciences the book rejects the prevalent scientific view that the degree of detail 'automatically' enhances understanding and explanative power of complex phenomena. It establishes the idea of a systems view on buildings and architectural design that through the use of flexible constituent elements facilitates discussion and decision making about how architectural wholes are appropriately put together as assemblages of what the current and future building industry is capable of producing. This book is for all those interested in the processes of architectural creation and realisation specifically attached to time, place and cultural context.

Architectural Temperance

Spain and Rome, 1700-1759

Victor Deupi

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

Architectural Temperance outlines the artistic relations between Madrid and Rome from 1700 to 1759, under the first two Bourbon monarchs. Victor Deupi explores why a nation such as Spain would temper her own building traditions with the larger, global trends of Roman art – both ancient and modern – rather than cultivate her own national and regional architectural traditions.

Including previously unpublished documents and letters that shed light on the theoretical debates that shaped mid-18th century architecture in Madrid and Rome, Architectural Temperance provides a new insight into 18th century Spanish architecture in English.

Architecture and Armed Conflict

The Politics of Destruction

Edited by JoAnne Mancini, National University of Ireland, Maynooth and Keith Bresnahan, OCAD University, Canada

Architecture and Armed Conflict is the first multi-authored scholarly book to address architectural destruction from a comparative, interdisciplinary perspective, considering multiple conflicts, multiple time periods, and multiple locations. Bringing together specialists from a range of relevant fields and drawing on a range of global case studies, this book provides the first synthetic body of research on the complex, multifaceted subject of architectural destruction in the context of conflict.

Architecture and Movement

the Dynamic Experience of Buildings and Landscapes

Edited by Peter Blundell Jones, University of Sheffield, UK and Mark Meagher, University of Sheffield, UK

This book explores the concept of the users' experience when moving through cities, landscapes and places. The experience of movement through buildings, cities, landscapes and in everyday life is the only involvement most individuals have with the built environment on a daily basis. Yet this concept of user experience is often neglected in architectural study and practice. This book tackles this complex subject for the first time, providing the wide range of perspectives needed to tackle this multi-disciplinary topic. The wide selection of contributors include academics and practitioners and discuss cases from across the US, UK, Europe and Asia.

Architecture and the Welfare State

Edited by Mark Swenarton, Tom Avermaete, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands and Dirk van den Heuvel, TU Delft, The Netherlands

Architecture and the Welfare State is the first book to explore the architecture of the welfare state in Western Europe from an international perspective. With chapters covering Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Sweden and the UK, the book explores the complex role played by architecture in the formation and development of the welfare state in both theory and practice. Some of the themes include explorations of the role of the built environment in the welfare state as a political project and the role of welfare state projects in promoting consumer culture and economic growth.

Daylighting and Integrated Lighting Design

Christopher Meek, University of Washington, USA and Kevin Van Den Wymelenberg

Series: PocketArchitecture

This book provides architects, building designers, and students with clear direction for the successful inclusion of daylight and integrated electric light in buildings. It presents design teams with the performance analysis resources, energy saving estimates and user satisfaction results they need in order to make informed decisions regarding daylighting and lighting design. Part of the PocketArchitecture Series, this is the ideal pocketbook for any designer serious about reducing the energy impact of their buildings.

Design in the Borderlands

Edited by Eleni Kalantidou, Griffith University, Australia and Tony Fry, Griffith University, Australia

Design in the Borderlands aims to contribute to 'thinking futures' by adding to the increasingly significant debate between design, in the context of the history of Western modernity, and decolonial thought. The book makes an important contribution to advancing post-geographic understandings of physical and virtual boundaries and draws on perspectives from diverse geo-cultural and theoretical positions including architecture, design theory and history, sociology, critical theory and cultural studies. The geographic scope of the chapters ranges across Europe, the Middle East, Africa, South America, Asia, and the Pacific.

Developing Your Design Process

Six Key Concepts for Studio

Albert C. Smith, Ryerson University, Toronto, Ontario, Canada and Kendra Schank Smith, Ryerson University, Toronto, Ontario, Canada

This book is your primary source for acquiring knowledge of how and why you design. It will help you understand how architects think and learn why you should educate yourself about design culture. You'll explore what leads to a strong concept, realize the importance of sketching and drafts, focus your original concept into a visible idea, and learn to identify the strengths and weaknesses of your concept. You'll also be introduced to the language of design, architectural terminology, historic precedents, and designers. Illustrated throughout with international examples of work by professionals and students of architecture and other related design professions.

Fashion Design for Living

Edited by Alison Gwilt, Reader in Fashion and Sustainability, Sheffield Hallam University, UK

This book seeks to reveal new ways of designing and making fashion garments, which can lead towards the creation of fashion products that enhance and enrich our lives. It includes global case studies from leading practitioners and researchers from the US, Australia, UK, and Europe. These accounts reveal an approach to fashion design that can focus on users, lived experiences, actual and everyday problems or scenarios, which often remain unfamiliar or aside from the fashion design process applied in industry. This book is aimed at students in fashion design, academics and design professionals.

Humanitarian Architecture

15 stories of architects working after disaster

Edited by Esther Charlesworth, RMIT University, Melbourne, Australia and Adrian Marshall

This book documents and analyses the expanding role for architects in designing projects for communities after the event of a natural disaster. The fifteen case studies featured in the book illustrate how architects can use spatial sensibility and integrated problem-solving skills to help alleviate human and natural disasters. The interviews and supporting essays show built environment professionals collaborating with post-disaster communities as facilitators, collaborators and negotiators of land, space and shelter. The goal is social and physical reconstruction, not just shelter 'projects' that 'build' houses but leave no economic footprint or longer-term community infrastructure.

Permutation Design

Buildings, Texts and Contexts

Kostas Terzidis, CEO and co-founder of Organic Parking Inc., USA

A permutation is an ordered arrangement of elements in a set. In our case, the set is design and the elements are design components, such as lines, shapes, forms, or spaces.

This book comprehensively addresses theories, techniques, and examples of permutation design in order to fully demonstrate to the reader the full range of possibilities this method represents. The significance of such an approach to design is enormous, paradigmatic, and far-reaching. It provides an alternative method for design analysis, synthesis, and evaluation that is based on computational force rather than pure human intelligence alone.

Interior Architecture and the Design Principles of Remodelling Existing Buildings

Sally Stone

Re-readings is an authoritative testament to the complex process of remodelling existing buildings. Although buildings have always been reused, the process of doing so has rarely been treated as an artform. By attracting prestigious architects to its practice, it would appear that remodelling, once the dowdy cousin of the more glamorous architecture, has gained a new respectability. Re-readings responds to remodelling as an artform, making sense of the considerable structural, aesthetic, environmental, contextual and programmatic challenges of remodelling existing buildings.

Space Unveiled

Invisible Cultures in the Design Studio

Edited by Carla Jackson Bell, Carla Jackson Bell, Director of Multicultural Affairs, College of Architecture, Design and Construction, Auburn University

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

Since the early 1800s, African Americans have designed signature buildings; however African American architects, especially women, have remained invisible in architectural history, theory and practice.

Traditional architecture design studio education has been based on a split between design and production teaching. As the result of current teaching models, African American architects tend to work on the production or technical side of building rather than in the design studio.

Space Unveiled is a significant contribution to the study of architecture education, and the extent to which it has been sensitive to an inclusive cultural perspective.

Structure As Architecture

A Source Book for Architects and Structural Engineers

Andrew Charleson

Both an exploration and celebration of structure, this book presents structure as an indispensable aspect of architecture, in terms of form, function and aesthetics. Using over four hundred photographs of contemporary case studies, the book shows that where structure is thoroughly integrated into the making of architecture, it adds layers of richness to a design and enhances the realization of architectural design concepts. Now in its second edition, the author has completely overhauled the contents, editing old material and including up-to-date material for new and old reader alike. Case studies feature contemporary buildings from countries across the globe.

Sustainability & Scarcity

A Handbook for Green Design and Construction in Developing Countries

Peter Ozolins, Peter Ozolins Architects, USA

Sustainability and Scarcity addresses a gap in the literature on green building recognized by many in the fields of international development, architecture, construction, housing and sustainability. The book describes the nature of green building in the developing world, elaborating the main issues that define sustainability in those contexts. Numerous case studies throughout the book serve to illustrate the concepts and provide examples of green building strategies in places of limited resources. Fully illustrated with technical drawings and in full colour the book is an essential practical guide for practitioners and policy-makers working in the poorest nations.

Traditions

The "Real", the Hyper, and the Virtual In the Built Environment

Nezar AlSayyad, University of California, Berkeley, USA

A continuation of the author's engagement with the subject of tradition in the built environment, he interrogates the meaning and practices of tradition in the twenty-first century, looking at three distinct categories of the built environment: the 'real', the hyper, and the virtual. He argues that normative discourses which conceive of tradition as a place-based, temporally situated concept, as a static authoritative legacy of a past, and as a heritage owned by certain groups of people can no longer be sustained. Instead, he calls for recognition that the main qualities of tradition are transient, fleeting, and contingent.

1951 Exhibition of Architecture

Guide to the Exhibition of Architecture, Town Planning and Building Research

Edited by Harding McGregor Dunnett, Nottingham University, UK and Alan Powers
Series: Studies in International Planning History

The Festival of Britain is known for its South Bank exhibition promoting British science and art to the post-war world, but one of the most important elements was the Architecture Exhibition based in Poplar, East London. This exhibition was used to demonstrate the principles of modern town planning that were laid out by Abercrombie in his County of London Plan.

The project was an effective demonstration of planning ideas adopted since the 1930s by influential planners, taking the village as a model and retaining the terraced house as a housing option among medium rise flats. The guide is revealing of the broader thinking in English planning in the mid century.

Alternative Visions of Post-War Reconstruction

Creating the Modern Townscape

Edited by John Pendlebury, Erdem Erten and Peter Larkham, Birmingham City University

The history of post Second World War reconstruction has recently become an important field of research around the world; Alternative Visions of Post-War Reconstruction is a provocative work that questions the orthodoxies of twentieth century design history. This book provides a key critical statement on mid-twentieth century urban design and city planning, focused principally upon the period between the start of the Second World War to the mid-sixties. The various figures and currents covered here represent a largely overlooked field within the history of 20th century urbanism.

Ecological Urbanism: The Nature of the City

Susannah Hagan, University of East London, UK

Ecological Urbanism: The Nature of the City seeks to rebalance the ecological narrative and its embryonic modes of practice with the narratives of urbanism and its older, deeply embedded modes of practice. It examines the implications for cities; and the designers of cities, now we are required to again address their metabolic as well as social and formal dimensions. It also explores the extent to which environmental engineering and natural systems design can become drivers for the remaking of cities in the 21st century. Above all, it argues that sooner rather than later, urbanism needs to become environmentally literate, and environmental design needs to become culturally literate.

Europe Rehoused

Elizabeth Denby and Elizabeth Darling, University College London, Oxford Brookes University.

Series: Studies in International Planning History

Europe Rehoused was one of the most influential housing texts of the 1930s and is still widely cited. Written by the housing consultant Elizabeth Denby, it offered a survey of social housing built across Europe since the end of World War One with the aim of informing British policy makers.

Denby advocated the incorporation of social amenities alongside well-designed and equipped flats and houses, ideally sited within urban areas; by the late 1930s she was a pioneering advocate of mixed development.

Housing Policy in the United States

Alex F. Schwartz, New School University, USA

The classic primer for its subject, Housing Policy in the United States, has been substantially revised in the wake of the 2007 near-collapse of the housing market and the nation's recent signs of recovery. This book offers an overview of the field, but also includes new information on how the crisis has affected the nation's housing challenges, and the extent to which the federal government has addressed them, including a new chapter on the foreclosure crisis. The most recent data on housing conditions, discrimination, finance, and programmatic expenditures is included. Infrastructural Lives

Urban Infrastructure in Context

Edited by Stephen Graham, Newcastle University, UK and Colin McFarlane, University of Durham, UK

This is the first book to describe the everyday experience and politics of urban infrastructures. It focuses on a range of infrastructures in both the global South and North and examines how day-to-day experience and perception of infrastructure provides a new and powerful lens to view politics, economics, cultures and ecologies. The chapters present diverse cases and perspectives connected by a shared sense of infrastructure not just as a 'thing', a 'system', or an 'output', but as a complex social and technological process that enables – or disables – particular kinds of action in the city.

Innovative Approaches to Researching Landscape and Health

Open Space: People Space 2

Edited by Catharine Ward Thompson, University of Edinburgh, UK, Peter Aspinall, University of Edinburgh, UK and Simon Bell, University of Edinburgh, UK

The rise in obesity, sedentary lifestyles and mental ill-health means there is a growing need to better understand the relationships between outdoor environments, lifestyles and health. Innovative and international in appeal, this is a detailed analysis of methodological advances, providing evidence-based solutions to the problems of unhealthy places and lifestyles.

With a unique reputation in this field, the OPENspace directors have drawn together international experts in landscape, health and the environment. Their pioneering methods will better inform policy and practice relating to both urban and rural environments, making this a valuable resource for researchers and practitioners.

Lighting & Controls

Transitioning to the Future

Stan Walerczyk, CLEP, HCLP, LC, Consultant
 This book helps you make good lighting decisions and will be a very useful hands-on tool for anyone involved with engineering, maintenance, purchasing, specification, retrofits, remodels, and new construction for interior or exterior lighting applications. It gives very practical ways to maintain and update existing lighting systems and how to plan for the future. Key points include LED lighting, maintenance costs, achieving low power density, disadvantages of LED T8s, and human centric lighting.

Low Impact Living

A Field Guide to Ecological, Affordable Community Building

Paul Chatterton, University of Leeds, UK
Series: Earthscan Tools for Community Planning
 The inspirational story of one project that shows how you can become involved in building and running your neighbourhood. The author, co-founder of Lilac (Low Impact Living Affordable Community), explains how a group of people got together to build one of the most ecological, affordable cohousing neighbourhoods in the world. The book starts with the values that motivated and guided the project's members and outlines how they were driven by challenges and concerns over the need to respond to climate change and energy scarcity. Low Impact Living provides clear and easy to follow advice for community groups, practitioners and government, and is heavily illustrated with drawings and photographs.

Manual of Urbanismo

Karl Brunner and Arturo Almandoz, Professor Arturo Almandoz, Department of Urban Planning, Universidad Simón Bolívar, Caracas, Venezuela, and Adjunct Professor, Pontifical Catholic University of Chile (PUC), Santiago de Chile

Series: Studies in International Planning History

Unlike European countries where the consolidation of town planning was based on legislative reforms, Latin America's urbanismo mainly stemmed from urban plans for national capitals and metropolises. Karl Brunner was hired in Chile, Colombia and Panama from the late 1920s to advise in the professional and academic domains, marking a shift from the so-called École Française d'Urbanisme (EFU) of Haussmannesque descent towards the Austrian-German Städtebau. Brunner translated his Manual de Urbanismo – the first textbook published in Latin America about the new discipline and the first to incorporate examples from local cities.

Moscow in the Making

Ernest Simon, Shena Simon, WA Robson, J Jewkes and Stephen Ward, Oxford Brookes University, UK.

Series: Studies in International Planning History

This book, published in 1937, reported on a four week visit to Moscow in 1936 to study the making of Moscow as a showpiece Soviet capital. At its core was the 1935 General Plan for the Reconstruction of Moscow but the book was a study of planning in the Soviet rather than the Western sense. Thus it covered many aspects of the city's social and economic life including governance and town planning.

The book made a significant contribution towards the growing arguments in 1930s Britain and other parts of the Anglophone world for a bolder, more comprehensive and more state-led approach to planning. These arguments had an important impact in shaping the policies adopted in the 1940s.

Natural Burial

Landscape, Practice and Experience

Andy Clayden, Sheffield University, UK, Trish Green, Hull York Medical School, University of Hull, UK., Jenny Hockey, University of Sheffield, UK and Mark Powell, Queen's University Belfast, UK

This book unravels the many different experiences, meanings and realities of natural burial. In the short time since its creation, the natural burial movement has flourished and we can now reflect on new providers, new landscapes and a hybrid of new and traditional rituals. This survey of natural burials draws on interviews with those involved in the natural burial process providing a variety of viewpoints on the concept as a philosophy and landscape practice. Site surveys, design plans and case studies illustrate the challenges involved in creating a natural burial site, and a longitudinal case study of a single site investigates the evolving nature of the practice.

New Ideals in the Planning of Cities, Towns and Villages

John Nolen and Bruce Stephenson, Rollins College, Florida

Series: Studies in International Planning History

John Nolen's New Ideals in the Planning of Cities, Towns and Villages is the most thorough assessment of city planning written by an American practitioner before 1920. It records the interplay of urban reform in Europe and the United States, the rise of the planning expert, the design of new towns and the technique for directing urban expansion on systematic lines. Most importantly, it documents the blueprint for investing the "peace dividend" of the Great War to make urban life "more fit for democracy".

Planning Against the Political

Democratic Deficits in European Territorial Governance

Edited by Jonathan Metzger, Stockholm University, Sweden, Philip Allmendinger, University of Cambridge, UK and Stijn Oosterlynck, K.U. Leuven, Belgium

This book brings together a number of highly innovative and thought provoking contributions from European researchers in territorial governance-related fields such as human geography, planning studies, sociology, and management studies. The contributions share the ambition of highlighting troubling contemporary tendencies where spatial planning and territorial governance can be seen to circumscribe or subvert 'due democratic practice' and the democratic ethos. The book also functions as an introduction to some of the central strands of contemporary political philosophy, discussing their relevance for the wider field of planning studies and the development of new planning practices.

Planning and Design for Future Informal Settlements

Shaping the Self-Constructed City

David Gouverneur

This is the first book to address future informal settlements at the global scale. It argues that to foster favourable conditions for the sustainable evolution of future informal cities, planners must consider the same issues that are paramount in formal urban developments. The book suggests that the vitality of informality, coupled with good spatial design, can support the efficient use of resources. Through case studies, the book demonstrates the contributions and limitations of different attempts to plan ahead for urban growth, and provides a robust framework for planners and designers, policy-makers, NGOs and local governments working to improve living conditions in developing cities.

James Schwab

In 1998, the American Planning Association published the first guidebook for local planners confronting all types of natural disasters: flood, earthquake, tornado, wildfire, and hurricane. Now APA has issued a report with the latest policies and procedures. The updated manual offers a no-nonsense explanation of the benefits -- and limitations -- of planning for unpredictable events. Case studies from big cities and smaller towns show what it takes to come back stronger from a natural disaster.

Principles of Planology

Grondslagen der planologie

JM de Casseres and JE Koos Bosma, VU University Amsterdam, Netherlands.

Series: Studies in International Planning History

Between the World Wars the talent of Dutch town planner J.M. de Casseres found expression in two visionary books and a clutch of influential articles.

De Casseres made it his life's work to elevate the art and craft of town planning to academic status, classifying the international planning body of knowledge and making it accessible and applicable. The results of this work are reflected in de Casseres's publications and his urban design proposals for towns across the Netherlands.

This republication of six de Casseres articles in translation and their original Dutch language form brings this key thinker into reach for a wider research audience.

Revising Green Infrastructure

Concepts Between Nature and Design

Edited by Daniel Czechowski, Technische Universitaet Muenchen, Freising, Germany, Thomas Hauck and Hausladen Georg, Technische Universität München, Germany

This book addresses the theme of "green infrastructure" from the perspective of landscape architecture. It brings together the work of selected ecologists, engineers, and landscape architects who discuss a variety of theoretical aspects, research projects, teaching methods, and best practice examples in green infrastructure. Each chapter discusses its two aspects: hardware and performance. Hardware describes the tool or device used as a green infrastructure, whereas performance indicates the output or product of a green infrastructure.

Second Nature Urban Agriculture

Designing Productive Cities

Andre Viljoen, University of Brighton, UK and Katrin Bohn, TU Berlin, Germany

This book is the long awaited sequel to "Continuous Productive Urban Landscapes: Designing Urban Agriculture for Sustainable Cities". It updates and extends the authors' concept for introducing productive urban landscapes, including urban agriculture, into cities as essential elements of sustainable urban infrastructure. Driven by the imperatives of climate change mitigation, changing economics, demographics, lifestyle expectations and resource supply, the spatial ideas embodied within the CPUL concept have entered the international urban design discourse.

Society and Environment: A Historical Review

Jaqueline Tyrwhitt, Nottingham University, UK and Ellen Shoshkes, Toulon School of Urban Studies and Planning, College of Urban and Public Affairs, Portland State University.

Series: Studies in International Planning History

Jacqueline Tyrwhitt (1905-1983) was a British town planner and educator. These four texts illustrate how her synthesis of Geddes' bioregionalism and the utopian ideals of European Modernist urbanism influenced post-war academic and professional practice in urban planning and design internationally.

Tyrwhitt's contributions to The Town and Country Planning Textbook provided a scientific humanist theoretical framework for the field. She paid attention to the urban core and noted the limitations of the Garden City ideal and called for a more creative approach to civic design, inspired by a love for existing places considered as a whole, in their regional setting.

Stories of Cosmopolitan Belonging

Emotion and Location

Edited by Hannah Jones, University of Warwick, UK and Emma Jackson, University of Glasgow, UK

This book brings together work from interdisciplinary scholars researching migration and belonging, using their original research to argue for greater attention to how emotion is deeply embedded in social structures. Taking the reader through research encounters spiralling out from London, through English suburbs and European cities to homes and lives in Jamaica, Puerto Rico and Mexico, the contributors show ways in which international migrations and connections criss-cross and constitute local places. The book will be a valuable resource for students and scholars in sociology and urban studies, and for policy makers interested in innovative perspectives on social

The Condition, Improvement and Town Planning of the City of Calcutta and Contiguous Areas

The Richards Report

EP Richards, Richard Harris and Robert Lewis

Series: Studies in International Planning History

The early twentieth century saw the birth of the modern planning movement. In India these ideas inspired several specialized reports after 1900; the most complete of which was the Richards Report on Calcutta published in 1914.

Its concerns included the building and widening of roads, slum clearance and improvement, legislation, and suburban planning. Richards emphasized that conditions in Calcutta differed greatly from those in urban Britain, but his report exemplifies the attempt by British planners, along with Indian elites, to impose their vision on colonial cities. This report remains a crucial insight into the development of modern town planning during the colonial period in India.

The Garden City Movement Up-To-Date

Ewart Gladstone Culpin and Stephen Ward, Oxford Brookes University, UK
Series: Studies in International Planning History

This work was written and compiled by the then Secretary of the Garden Cities and Town Planning Association in 1913. It shows just how much the conception of the garden city had been broadened from Howard's original texts.

Alongside the garden city, recognition is now given to the burgeoning numbers of garden suburbs and garden villages. Many examples of these are identified and briefly described, including many which are small and now little known, greatly adding to the interest of the publication.

The Planning of a New Town

London County Council and John R Gold, Oxford Brookes University, UK
Series: Studies in International Planning History

The publication of The Planning of a New Town in 1961 aroused remarkable interest. Its pages described a private new town, sponsored by the London County Council (LCC), to be built at Hook in Hampshire; a scheme that innovatively combined Garden City/New Town traditions with sensitivity to modern design.

The report itself proved extremely popular even though the New Town had been abandoned before any construction took place. Analysing the world as it might have been not only identifies choices that were once available for shaping the built environment, it also often reveals once-cherished hopes and aspirations about how people might live in cities.

The Spacemaker's Guide to Big Change

Design and Improvisation in Development Practice

Nabeel Hamdi, Oxford Brookes University, UK
Series: Earthscan Tools for Community Planning

This book gives definition to participatory practice as a necessary form of activism in planning and provides guidance on how practice can make space for big and lasting change. It points to ways of building synergy and negotiating our way in the social and political spaces in between conventional and often competing ideals. The purpose of practice is to give structure to our understanding of the order and disorder in our cities today, then to disturb that order when it has become inefficient or inequitable. The book explains how practice can offer a new platform from which to be more creative, more integrated, more relevant, more resourceful – more strategic.

Town and Country Planning in the UK

J Barry Cullingworth, University of Delaware, USA and Vincent Nadin, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands

Town and country planning has never been more important to the UK, nor more prominent in national debate. Planning generates great controversy: whether it's spending £80m and four years' inquiry into Heathrow's Terminal 5, or the 200 proposed wind turbines in the Shetland Isles. At a different scale telecoms masts, take-aways, house extensions, and even fences are often the subject of intense local conflict. The revised 15th edition of 'Town and Country Planning' provides not only a ready source of information on planning policies, tools, procedures and topical issues - all set in historical context - but has been fully updated to include: The implications of the 2008/9 Planning Act.

Town Planning for Australia

George Taylor, Nottingham University, UK and Robert Freestone, University of New South Wales, Australia.

Series: Studies in International Planning History

George Taylor's Town Planning for Australia was the first dedicated book on the subject of urban planning published in Australia. Journalistic and ideological in style, it sets out a robust vision for a specifically Australian approach to planning and development of towns in a young country.

Taylor was a controversial figure, a political activist who brought the NSW Town Planning Association into existence and played a key role in publishing and promoting planning into the 1920s. His wife Florence Taylor was the first female qualified architect and trained engineer in Australia, and an important figure in the history of planning and publishing in Australia.

Traffic in Towns

A Study of the Long Term Problems of Traffic in Urban Areas

Colin Buchanan and S Gunn, University of Leicester, UK

Series: Studies in International Planning History

Traffic in Towns, also known as the Buchanan Report, is regarded as one of the most influential planning documents of the twentieth century. The report reflected mounting concern about the impact on Britain's towns and cities of rapid growth in the ownership and use of motor vehicles. Its purpose was to evaluate policy options for reducing the threat of traffic congestion to urban circulation and quality of life. In focusing attention on the effects of mass motorization on the urban environment, Traffic in Towns set the terms of debate for a generation; pre-figuring recent discussion about the car and urban sustainability.

Understanding Urban Metabolism

A Tool for Urban Planning

Edited by Nektarios Chrysoulakis, Eduardo Anselmo de Castro and Eddy J. Moors

This book and illustrates the advantages of accounting for urban metabolism issues in urban design decisions. Urban metabolism considers a city as a system, and distinguishes between energy and material flows as its components. This book deals with the exchanges and transformation of energy, water, carbon and pollutants and introduces a new method for evaluating how planning alternatives can modify the physical flows of these components. The book bridges the gap between knowledge and practice and provides the reader with the tools they need to integrate an understanding of urban metabolism into urban planning practice.

Urban Agriculture for Growing City Regions

Connecting Urban-Rural Spheres in Casablanca

Edited by Undine Giseke, Technische Universität Berlin, Germany

This book takes the example of Casablanca, one of the fastest growing cities in North Africa, to investigate how urban open space and agriculture can be connected to productive urban landscapes. The creation of synergies between urban and rural in an emerging megacity is demonstrated through pilot projects, design solutions, and multifunctional modules. These synergies assure greater resource efficiency; particularly regarding the use and reuse of water, and strengthen regional food security and the social integration of multiple spheres. Essential reading for researchers, planners, practitioners and policy makers working on urban development and urban agricultural strategies.

Urban Transformations and the Architecture of Additions

Rodrigo Perez de Arce and Julian Marsh

Series: Studies in International Planning History

Urban Transformations and the Architecture of Additions was published during the formative stages of Post Modernism, at the point where theory was becoming established. In planning terms, modernism had become associated with comprehensive redevelopment and forms of urban organisation that ignored context, history and any sense of tradition.

The paper had a fundamental influence on the way that architects and planners thought about the nature of cities - as dynamic organisms that were tangible to human beings; completely opposite to the systems thinking of the time. It contributed to ideas about the importance of street, place and city block which has influenced recent regeneration.

Analysis of Pavement Structures

Animesh Das

Using schematic diagrams to explain underlying principles, this book presents a step-by-step approach to the analysis of pavement structures. Based on a compilation of research publications from leading experts in the field, the text includes simple analytical formulations for load and thermal stresses of asphalt and concrete pavements. Useful to future and beginner engineers in understanding the essence of rigorous analysis for pavement structure (rather than relying on empiricism), it also serves as a handy, quick reference for practicing engineers, researchers, and academicians.

Bridge Deck Analysis, Second Edition

Eugene J. O'Brien, Ramboll, Denmark and Alan J. O'Connor, Dept. of Civil Engineering, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland

The second edition of a bestseller, this book combines an explanation of background theory with a step-by-step guide on how to analyse common bridge forms. It includes practical examples of everyday problems in bridge engineering—particularly useful for senior undergraduates and new engineering graduates. The new edition introduces reliability analysis, an emerging area that allows bridge engineers to assess risk when maintaining older or damaged bridges in service. Other chapters are updated to reflect the trend towards more sophisticated analysis and the more widespread access to Finite Element software.

Computational Analysis and Design of Bridge Structures

Chung C. Fu, University of Maryland, College Park, USA and Shuqing Wang

The book provides information on the methods of analysis and related modeling techniques suitable for the design and evaluation of various types of bridges. For the purpose of analysis, several special topics such as strut-and-tie modeling, linear and nonlinear buckling analysis, redundancy analysis, integral bridges, dynamic/earthquake analysis and bridge geometry, will also be covered. The book is mainly focused on highway bridges, although some information is provided for railway bridges.

Disposal and Management of Solid Waste

Pathogens and Diseases

Eliot Epstein, Epstein Environmental Consultants, Boca Raton, Florida, USA

In developed countries wastewater and sewage sludge are disposed by means that reduce or minimize exposure by humans to disease organisms. Most municipal solid waste goes to landfills which have liners to protect ground water. Humans are often exposed to pathogens, resulting in serious diseases from the disposal of human and animal wastes. This book describes the various pathogens and diseases that can be found in solid waste and describes the means and opportunities for disposal and management of various solid waste materials.

Earth Pressure and Earth-Retaining Structures, Third Edition

Chris R.I. Clayton, University of Southampton, UK, Rick I. Woods, University of Surrey, UK, Andrew J. Bond, Geocentrix Ltd, UK and Jarbas Milititsky, Engineering Consultant, Brazil

This classic work book has long been recognised as a comprehensive introduction to the mechanisms of earth pressure, and a thorough guide to the design requirements for retaining structures. It has now been entirely re-structured and revised, providing significantly more support to help non-specialists understand the geotechnical issues and giving background to uncertainty of parameters and partial factor issues that underpin recent codes such as Eurocode 7. It comprehensively covers the principles of the geotechnical design of gravity walls, embedded walls and composite

Improving Concrete Quality

Karthikeyan H Obla

This book aids concrete producers in improving the quality of ready mixed concrete. It quantifies the benefits of improved quality in terms of cost savings, increased efficiency and consistency, and sustainability. It shows the relation between concrete quality and concrete strength variability, and discusses the components of variability and how one could methodically relate component changes to variability in concrete strength and other properties. It also recommends specific steps that producers might take to reduce component variability and achieve a more consistent product.

Mechanics of Groundwater in Porous Media

Muhammad I Haque, George Washington University, Washington, District of Columbia, USA

Maintaining a careful balance between mathematical rigor and the physical aspects of groundwater movement, this senior undergraduate- and graduate-level environmental engineering text covers the topic from theory to practice. Avoiding unnecessary mathematical subtleties and oversimplifications of qualitative descriptions, the book assumes calculus knowledge generally acquired during the first two semesters at the university level, while further developing the skills needed for the analysis of groundwater movement. Featuring numerous illustrations and worked examples, the text also makes an excellent professional reference for engineers, geologists, and hydrologists.

Mechanized tunnelling in urban areas has not previously received the attention that it deserves, despite there being specific hazards associated with the construction of tunnels in metropolitan areas. The application of technologies for achieving stability of tunnels and for minimizing surface settlement is described in this book. Accurate characterisation of the ground; rigorous assessment and management of risk from design to maintenance; the correct choice of a tunnel boring machine and a plan for the advancement of the tunnel; specific excavation procedures and real-time monitoring of excavation parameters are all discussed in this wholly revised and updated second edition.

Principles of Reinforced Concrete Design

Mete A. Sozen, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana, USA, Toshikatsu Ichinose, Nagoya Institute of Technology, Japan and Santiago Pujol, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Illinois, USA

The book covers fundamental concepts related to mechanics and direct observation, and those required to design reinforced concrete (RC) structures. Codes change constantly over time depending on factors that have little to do with the fundamental concepts mentioned, and have more to do with the markets, construction practices, and transient academic views. For beginning engineers it is difficult to distinguish between rules based on consensus (codes) and fundamentals. This book focuses on the latter to prepare the engineer to use and adapt to the constant changes of the former.

Structural Analysis

Principles, Methods and Modelling

Gianluca Ranzi, University of Sydney, Australia and Raymond Ian Gilbert, University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia

Combining a user-friendly, practical approach with detailed derivations and mathematical background, this text shows students how to use structural analysis accurately and efficiently to solve engineering problems. Many worked examples walk students through the methods and give them insight into creating analytical models. The book also challenges students to consider specific aspects of the material in more detail and to extend the methods to other problems. MATLAB is used to perform complex analyses, with the code and other ancillaries accessible online.

Structural Engineer's Pocket Book

Eurocodes, Third Edition

Fiona Cobb, Consulting Engineer, UK

Now in its third edition, this book forms a comprehensive pocket reference guide for professional and student structural engineers, especially those taking the IStructE Part 3 exam. With stripped-down basic material – tables, data, facts, formulae, and rules of thumb – it is directly usable for scheme design by structural engineers in the office, in transit, or on site. It brings together data from many different sources, and delivers a compact source of job-simplifying and time-saving information at an affordable price.

Tall Building Design

Steel, Concrete, and Composite Systems

Bungale S. Taranath

This book examines the behavior of structural members and systems to aid in the structural design of tall buildings in conjunction with the latest building codes. These code provisions are subject to change periodically. Familiarity with current methodologies is essential to designing structures that comply with legally-adapted standards in a safe, economic, and efficient manner. However, the first nine chapters explain the fundamental principles of structural engineering in such a manner as to be entirely independent of code regulations.

Mark Bromann, Rally Fire Protection Services, Illinois, USA

The sprinkler industry is constantly evolving because of new advancements in technology and the first edition needs to be revised and updated in conjunction with the 2010 edition of NFPA 13. This most recent edition of the NFPA standard has added requirements and recommendations, and a completely new code numbering system. Technological advances in the fire sprinkler industry will be addressed in the third edition. These include the recently adopted computerized dry-pipe system calculations for water system delivery, and the (accompanying) system test manifold schedule.

Traffic Simulation and Data

Validation Methods and Applications

Edited by Winnie Daamen, Delft University of Technology, The Netherlands, Christine Buisson, Universite de Lyon, France and Serge P. Hoogendoorn, Delft University of Technology, The Netherlands

This book provides a comprehensive overview of calibration and validation techniques for traffic simulation models. It details the data required as an input for the calibration and validation processes and shows how to increase its applicability using data enhancement techniques. It presents an extensive overview of traffic estimation, calibration and validation techniques, taking into account the key factor of uncertainty. This book derives from the methods and tools for supporting the use, calibration and validation of traffic simulation models project of the

Edited by Robert Klaschka

BIM (Building Information Modelling) is revolutionising architecture and construction, as more and more practices are realising the benefits it brings to design, sustainability, and construction. Full of practical tips and hard-won experience, BIM in Small Practices: Illustrated Case Studies includes pithy contributions from industry experts who identify and explore the important issues for small practices including how to get your practice started with BIM, and how it aligns to the new Plan of Work. This landmark publication will motivate small practices who are considering taking those first steps towards implementing BIM.

R&D Investment and Impact in the Global Construction Industry

Edited by Keith D. Hampson, Queensland University of Technology, Australia, Judy A. Kraatz, Queensland University of Technology, Australia and Adriana X. Sanchez, SBEncr, Australia

Series: CIB

This book explores how policy makers and industry leaders can better target future investment, and how industry and researchers can manage their efforts to improve productivity within the environmental and social context of their communities. Case studies present projects where R&D ideas have been translated from research into practice or policy, and examine drivers, successes and barriers to the delivery of R&D in industry. Based on research from members of the CIB Task Group and concluding with key insights for maximising the impact of R&D in the future, the book holds valuable lessons for practitioners, policy makers and researchers.

Sustainable Retrofitting of Commercial Buildings

Cool Climates

Edited by Simon Burton, Sustainability consultant, UK

This book provides an overview of bioclimatic and sustainable refurbishment of commercial buildings for architects, builders and other professionals. New case studies from a variety of cool climate countries will look at real examples of different building types, ages and uses and will demonstrate what action has been taken to create more sustainable buildings. The chapters raise all the relevant issues that need to be considered in retrofitting decision making. Changing standards, planning, process management, financing, technical issues, site organisation, commissioning and subsequent building management are all considered.

Anaerobic Digestion – Making Biogas – Making Energy

The Earthscan Expert Guide

Tim Pullen, WeatherWorks, Wales, UK

Series: Earthscan Expert

Anaerobic Digestion (AD) is used around the world to produce low CO₂ energy and to make 'clean' fertilisers with large, medium and small-scale plants common-place in Western Europe and the USA. This book describes, in simple, easy to read language the five common systems of AD; how they work, the impact of scale, the basic requirements, their costs and financial implications, and how to get involved in this promising green industry.

Dynamic Risk Assessment

The Practical Guide to Making Risk-Based Decisions with the 3-Level Risk Management Model

Stephen Asbury, Managing Director of Corporate Risk Systems Limited and Edmund Jacobs, Head of Occupational Health and Safety at Ministry of Justice

Written by experts, this book seeks to achieve and offer an explanation on how dynamic risk assessment (DRA) is possible and how it can benefit and work within an organization.

It provides a holistic risk management framework approach to how employers, managers and staff alike can effectively integrate and embed DRA into their business/management processes and systems to aid service delivery and risk-based decision making. The book joins up the risk assessment done in 'slow time' in the office, to real life 'quick time' actions in the field, closing this loop, and providing a feedback and debriefing approach.

Introduction to Risk and Failures

Tools and Methodologies

D. H. Stamatis, ANHUI University of Finance and Economics, Bengbu, China

Risk is everywhere, in everything we do. Realizing this fact, we all must try to understand this "risk" and if possible to minimize it. This book expands the conversation beyond failure mode and effects analysis (FMEA) techniques. While FMEA is indeed a powerful tool to forecast failures for both design and processes, it is missing methods for considering safety issues, catastrophic events, and their consequences. This new book focuses on risk and HAZOP as they relate to major catastrophic events, safety, and risk.

Safety Differently

Human Factors for a New Era, Second Edition

Today, the unrelenting pace of technology change and growth of complexity calls for a different kind of safety thinking. This book explains how to turn safety from a bureaucratic accountability back into an ethical responsibility for those who do our dangerous work; how to embrace the human factor not as a problem to control, but as a solution to harness.

Strategies for Climate Protection

Hans-Josef Fell, Parliament of the German Federal Republic, Berlin, Germany

Series: Sustainable Energy Developments

This book redefines climate protection measures and resets climate protection targets in accordance with what is scientifically necessary by introducing new actors (e.g., the financial industry as an investor and political actor), by highlighting new goals, and by introducing new measures (global feed-in-tariff; ending all subsidies for fossil energies). The reader is provided with a sometimes provocative overview of recent developments and failures, but also successful instruments for fighting climate change and global warming. Sustainable Science, Fourth Edition

Stanley E. Manahan, University of Missouri, Columbia, USA

This book covers university-level environmental chemistry, with toxicological chemistry integrated throughout the content. This new edition of a bestseller provides an updated text with an increased emphasis on sustainability and green chemistry. Organized based on the five spheres of Earth's environment—the hydrosphere, atmosphere, geosphere, biosphere, and anthrosphere—the book presents discussions of each sphere based upon the nature, pollution, and sustainability of the sphere. For readers needing additional basic chemistry background, the book includes two chapters on general chemistry and organic chemistry.

Fundamental and Applied Karstology

Eric Gilli, Paris 8 University, France

Karst landscapes are home to 25 percent of the world's drinking water supplies, and in many countries water supply is highly dependent on karst aquifers. Their unique structures, containing many voids, are a particular problem for building corporations and land developers. This book, written by the well-known karstologist Eric Gilli, presents a diverse range of chapters on history of karstology, aquifers and their characterization, water supply management, coastal and submarine karsts, evolution of karst and paleokarst, paleontology, tourism, and oil and mineral reserves.

Geothermal Energy

Renewable Energy and the Environment, Second Edition

William E. Glassley, Department of Geology, University of California, Davis, USA and The Energy Institute, University of California, Davis, USA and Geologisk Institut, Aarhus University, Denmark

Series: Energy and the Environment

Fully updated and featuring a new chapter on enhanced geothermal systems, this Second Edition of a Choice Award winner contains the latest scientific information used to discern applications and regions best suited for geothermal energy. Stressing environmental effects related to acquisition and consumption, the text explores where geothermal energy comes from and how to find it, as well as how it can be accessed, applied, and improved for future use. It provides background, theory, and practical techniques for implementing different types of geothermal energy projects.

GIS Cartography

A Guide to Effective Map Design, Second Edition

Gretchen N. Peterson, PetersonGIS, Seattle, Washington, USA

The second edition of a bestseller, this book focuses on map design theory and technique rather than map design tools. It highlights new tools and their capabilities through visual demonstrations and explanations of new techniques such as hexagonal binning, big data point density maps, scale dependent design considerations, 3D building modeling, and so on. The new edition will have a much heavier focus on digital cartography and its best practices. It has also been redesigned so that it can be used as a textbook with study questions and an end-of-chapter exercise.

Global Urban Monitoring and Assessment through Earth Observation

Edited by Qihao Weng, Indiana State University, Terre Haute, USA

Series: Remote Sensing Applications Series

Cities and towns are the original producers of many of the global environmental problems related to waste disposal, air and water pollution. There is a rapidly growing need for technologies that will enable monitoring of the world's natural resources and urban assets, and managing exposure to natural and man-made risks. The Group on Earth Observation calls for strengthening the cooperation and coordination among global observing systems and research programs. This book introduces this important international collaborative effort, reviews the current state of global urban remote sensing, and expands on future directions in the field.

Information Needs for Water Management

Jos G. Timmerman

This book provides the necessary elements to determine exactly what information should be collected to make the collected information relevant for policy makers. It highlights the dissatisfaction of information users about the information they get and the reasons for this dissatisfaction. It also discusses general issues around the role and use of information in policy making. The text then describes the how to develop a full understanding of the policy makers' information needs and will describe how policy makers can be included in the process. Finally, the book describes how the results from this process are input for the information production process.

Modeling Shallow Water Flows Using the Discontinuous Galerkin Method

Abdul A. Khan and Wencong Lai

This book introduces the discontinuous Galerkin (DG) method and its application to shallow water flows. The emphasis is to show details and modifications required to apply the scheme to real-world flow problems. It allows the readers to understand and develop robust and efficient computer simulation models that can be used to model flow, contaminant transport, and other factors in rivers and coastal environments. The book includes a large set of tests to illustrate the use of the model for a wide range of applications.

River Basin Management in the Twenty-first Century

Understanding People and Place

Edited by Victor Roy Squires, University of Arizona, Tucson, USA, Hugh Martin Milner, Water Management Consultant, Northbridge, Australia and Katherine Anne Daniell, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia

The mid-latitude regions of the world are those with the greatest development of agriculture industry, and with burgeoning demands on natural resources. Management of the rivers and the surrounding landscape is one of the important tasks for today and for the foreseeable future. Lessons learned from centuries of management (and mismanagement) have been distilled into principles and practices which form the subject matter for this book. It provides both a global perspective and an entrée to the special problems associated with management of transboundary rivers.

3D Circuit and System Design

Multicore Architecture, Thermal Management, and Reliability

Edited by Rohit Sharma

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

3D integration of microsystems and subsystems is imperative to the future of semiconductor technology development. This book tackles all aspects of 3D integration, including 3D circuit and system design, new process development, application of novel materials, and thermal challenges for restricting power dissipation. Presenting a coherent approach that takes into account distinct yet interrelated issues, the text discusses the use of interposer technology and the role of through-silicon vias (TSVs), as well as revisits traditional cooling techniques in view of the vertical interconnection of stacked subsystems.

TEXTBOOK

A Laboratory Course in Nanoscience and Nanotechnology

Gerrard Eddy Jai Poinern, Murdoch University, Perth, Western Australia

Written by a well-regarded teacher, this first-ever nanolab manual is aimed at the fast-growing number of practical nanoscience and nanotechnology modules springing up around the world. It is not a direct competitor for theoretical texts, though it does describe laboratory experiments in detail and link them to the theory to place them in context. This highly interdisciplinary book places a strong emphasis on developing skills to prepare undergraduate and graduate students from physics, chemistry, engineering, and biology backgrounds for work in nanoscience- and nanotechnology-related industries.

Abstract Volterra Integro-Differential Equations

Edited by Marko Kostic

The theory of linear Volterra Integro-differential equations has been developing rapidly in the last three decades. This book provides an easy-to-read, concise introduction to the theory of ill-posed abstract Volterra Integro-differential equations. It is accessible to readers whose backgrounds include functions of one complex variable, integration theory and the basic theory of locally convex spaces. Each chapter is further divided into sections and subsections, and contains plenty of examples and open problems.

Advanced Non-Classical Materials with Complex Behavior, Volume I

Modeling and Applications

Edited by Abbas Hamrang, Independent Polymer Consultant, Manchester, UK

This volume highlights the latest developments and trends in advanced non-classical materials and structures. It presents the developments of advanced materials and respective tools to characterize and predict the material properties and behavior. It also includes original, theoretical, and important experimental results that use non-routine methodologies often unfamiliar to the usual readers. The chapters on novel applications of more familiar experimental techniques and analyses of composite problems underline the need for new experimental approaches.

Advances in Biofuel Production

Algae and Aquatic Plants

Edited by Barnabas Gikonyo, SUNY Geneseo, New York, USA

Due to their high growth rate, algae, microalgae, and aquatic plants are becoming the most promising photosynthetic organisms for biofuel production. Advances in Biofuel Production: Algae and Aquatic Plants explores current investigations and application of the fields of biofuel production and bioengineering and considers from a global context the evolving processes of algal biofuel production. The book looks at how biomass, specifically sugars, nonedible plant materials, and algae (which are designated first, second, and third fuels respectively) are used in the production of fuel. The feasibility of such projects, current methodologies, and how to optimize biofuel production are presented.

Advances in Visual Data Compression and Communication

Meeting the Requirements of New Applications

Feng Wu

Series: Multimedia Computing, Communication and Intelligence

To meet the requirements of desktop video conferencing, mobile terminals, Internet-based audio-visual communications, and other new and emerging applications—even in the presence of growing channels offering increased bandwidth—powerful data compression techniques are needed to drastically reduce the global bitrate. This book provides a theoretical and technical basis for advanced research on visual data compression and communication, covering topics such as scalable video coding (SVC), directional transforms, and compressive communication, while extending the current coding framework and considering future developments of information theory.

TEXTBOOK

Applied Dynamics

Haim Baruh

This modern study of engineering dynamics covers an array of topics, from basic principles to two- and three-dimensional motion, general kinematics and kinetics, analytical mechanics, vehicle motion, vibration response, and stability. By including examples from everyday life—such as sports and the motion of balls in the air or during impact—the book makes concepts relatable and accessible. However, no effort is made to reduce rigor, as the text provides thorough coverage of Lagrange's and Kane's equations as well as the response of dynamical systems.

Biomedical Photonics Handbook, Second Edition

Biomedical Diagnostics

Edited by Tuan Vo-Dinh, Duke University, Durham, North Carolina, USA

Biomedical photonics is defined as the science of harnessing light and other forms of radiant energy to address problems in medicine and biology. The field has experienced explosive growth due to the noninvasive or minimally invasive nature and cost-effectiveness of photonic modalities in medical diagnostics and therapy. The second volume of the Biomedical Photonics Handbook, Second Edition focuses on biomedical diagnostics. It is an authoritative reference source for those involved in the research, teaching, learning, and practice of medical technologies.

Compressive Sensing for Urban Radar

Edited by Moeness Amin, Villanova University, Pennsylvania, USA

Featuring real data measured in semi- or non-controlled environments, this book uses different radar specifications and configurations—including Doppler, Range-Doppler, and MTI capabilities—to discuss urban sensing challenges involving imaging, detection, classification, localization, and tracking of animate and inanimate targets. It addresses random versus uniform sampling in space, frequency, slow-time, and fast-time; covers sparse signal reconstruction when dealing with non-stationary signals underlining Micro-Doppler measurements; and examines the degrees of freedom represented in compressive sensing parameters and variables to provide optimum results for the urban challenge.

This book presents the newest scientific research data under the theory and practice of wet clearing of industrial gases from dispersion particles. The authors consider the modern aspects of the separation process and gas-dispersed impurities. The book covers three main sections on working out and research of the following types of wet gas purifiers: dynamic scrubbers, wet gas clean apparatuses of shock-inertial act, and bubble dust traps.

TEXTBOOK

Condensed Matter Optical Spectroscopy

An Illustrated Introduction

Iulian Ionita, University of Bucharest, Faculty of Physics, Romania

This text shows how optical absorption spectroscopy and Raman spectroscopy are powerful techniques for studying condensed matter, particularly new properties that appear when many atoms come together and interact in systems at the atomic, molecular, and nano scales. With simple, illustrative examples throughout, the book emphasizes the visual nature of the field. It helps students understand the spatial arrangements of atoms, which determine properties of the matter and resulting spectra. It also presents the application of molecular symmetry on optical spectra using group theory.

Design of Biomedical Devices and Systems, Third Edition

Paul H. King, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee, USA, Richard C. Fries, ISORel, Inc., Fitchburg, Wisconsin, USA and Arthur T. Johnson, University of Maryland, College Park, USA

Intended for a senior design course in biomedical/bioengineering, this book offers a comprehensive approach to the design methodologies of modern medical devices. A substantial revision of a solid text, the Third Edition contains new coverage on clinical trials, provides additional mathematical modeling tools, includes information on sterilization and bioprocessing, devotes more instruction to integrating medical and biological considerations with engineering, and features updates to all chapters as well as new problems, examples, and case studies throughout.

Digital Avionics Handbook, Third Edition

Edited by Cary R. Spitzer, AvioniCon, Inc., Williamsburg, Virginia, USA, Uma Ferrell and Thomas Ferrell

Renamed to reflect the increased role of digital electronics, the Digital Avionics Handbook, Second Edition is available in two comprehensive volumes, with one devoted to the essential elements, software, and functions of modern avionics and the other focused on development and implementation. This second edition includes new chapters on the time triggered protocol, communications, vehicle health management systems, development guidelines and certification considerations, and the Genesis platform. The handbook also discusses avionics building blocks and covers key development activities such as system engineering, flight deck automation and design, environmental testing, and certification.

Electric Power Distribution Handbook, Second Edition

Thomas Allen Short, Electric Power Research Institute, Ballston Spa, New York, USA

This handbook delivers comprehensive coverage of the electrical aspects of power distribution systems. The first few chapters focus on equipment-oriented information and applications, while the middle portion discusses reliability and power quality, and the end tackles lightning protection, grounding, and safety. Complete with access to a support website, the Second Edition features a new chapter on overhead line performance, 14 revised chapters incorporating updates from several EPRI projects, full-color illustrations, fresh graphs and statistics, and new sections on voltage optimization, arc flash, and contact voltage.

Engineering Mathematics

John Bird, lecturer at Portsmouth University and Senior Training Provider at HMS Sultan, UK

The extensive and thorough topic coverage makes this an ideal text for a range of Level 2 and 3 vocational courses, including the BTEC National specifications. John Bird's approach to mathematics is based on numerous worked examples, ideal for students of all abilities. The new edition includes a section at the start of each chapter to explain why the content is important and how it relates to real life. It is also supported by a fully updated companion website with resources for both students and lecturers. It has full solutions to all 1800 further questions contained in the 237 practice exercises. All 525 illustrations used in the text can also be downloaded for use in the classroom.

Engineering of Polymers and Chemical Complexity, Volume II

New Approaches, Limitations, and Control

Edited by Walter W. Focke, Pretoria University, South Africa and Hans-Joachim Radusch, Martin Luther University, Halle-Saale, Germany

This book provides a vast amount of information on new approaches, limitations, and control on current polymers and chemicals complexity of various origins, on scales ranging from single molecules and nano-phenomena to macroscopic chemicals. Starting with a detailed introduction, the book is comprised of chapters that survey the current progress in particular research fields. The chapters, prepared by leading international experts, yield together a fascinating picture of a rapidly developing research discipline that brings chemical technology and polymers to new frontiers.

Environmental Transport Phenomena

A. Eduardo Saez, University of Arizona, Tucson, USA and James C. Baygents, University of Arizona, Tucson, USA

Series: Green Chemistry and Chemical Engineering

This book presents the subject of transport phenomena starting with the fundamental principles and mechanisms that govern mass transport, and continuing with the formulation and solution of practical problems spanning all sub-disciplines of environmental science and chemical engineering. The book provides the reader with a fundamental understanding of how to quantify the spread and distribution of contaminants in the environment, as well as the basis for designing processes related to water purification, wastewater treatment, and solid waste disposal, among others.

Environmentally Sustainable Catalytic Asymmetric Oxidations

Konstantin Bryliakov, Borekov Institute of Catalysis, Novosibirsk, Russia

The discovery of simple, efficient catalyst systems for the asymmetric oxidation of hydrocarbons is an important and challenging task of modern chemistry. Synthetic chiral compounds are represented in various areas of everyday life: for example, 6 out of 15 top worldwide sold drugs are chiral synthetic compounds. On the other hand, the demand for novel efficient and sustainable regio- and stereoselective catalyst systems for the oxidation of organic substrates is continuously growing in line with toughening economic and environmental constraints. This book addresses these issues.

Essential Principles of Image Sensors

Takao Kuroda, Consultant, Osaka, Japan

Providing an introduction to the systemization of image sensor technology and perspective on its various noise sources and signal processes, this book delivers a detailed description of image information and its four factors: light intensity, space, wavelength, and time. It discusses how image sensors convert optical image information into image signals. It tackles CCD, MOS, and CMOS, as well as key techniques such as BSI. It also considers the influences of in-system digitized coordinate points and explains sampling theorem, presenting unique figures demonstrating the importance of phase.

Exploring Neural Networks with C#

Ryszard Tadeusiewicz, AGH University of Science & Technology, Poland, Rituparna Chaki, University of Calcutta, Kolkata, West Bengal, India and Nabendu Chaki, University of Calcutta, Kolkata, West Bengal, India

This book presents the important properties of neural networks—while keeping mathematics to a minimum. Explaining how to build neural networks and use them, the book presents complicated information about neural networks structure, functioning, and learning in a manner that is easy to understand. Taking a "learn by doing" approach, the book is filled with illustrations to guide readers through the mystery of neural networks. Examples of experiments are provided in the text to encourage individual research. C# programs are also included to help readers independently discover the properties of neural networks.

Finite Element Modeling and Simulation with ANSYS Workbench

Xiaolin Chen, Washington State University, Vancouver, USA and Yijun Liu, University of Cincinnati, OH, USA

This textbook presents a basic introduction to finite element modeling and analysis, with no FEM experience required. Covering theoretical foundations and hands-on applications, it discusses the basic concepts in finite element modeling using the simplest mechanics problems as examples and teaches readers how to apply the commercial software ANSYS Workbench in their design and analysis activities. It enables readers to model and analyze components or systems of moderate sizes and sophistications to study the deformations, stresses, heat transfer, dynamic responses, optimum shapes, and failure behaviors.

Fluorescence Lifetime Spectroscopy and Imaging

Principles and Applications in Biomedical Diagnostics

Edited by Laura Marcu, University of California, Davis, USA, Paul M. W. French, Imperial College London, UK and Daniel S. Elson, Imperial College London, UK

This book reflects the remarkable advances in time-resolved fluorescence techniques and their role in a wide range of biological and clinical applications. Fluorescence lifetime approaches maximize contrast between different fluorophores for improved specificity of measurements, enabling characterization of intact tissue and disease diagnostics. The book offers a comprehensive treatment of fundamental principles, instrumentation, analytical methods, and applications. It covers the wide range of methods, including single channel (point) spectroscopy, fluorescence lifetime imaging microscopy, and single- and multi-photon excitation.

Pore Size in Carbon-Based Nano-Adsorbents

A. K. Haghi, University of Guilan, Iran, Sabu Thomas, Mahatma Gandhi University, Kerala, India and Moien MehdiPour MirMahaleh, Technopark, Kerala, India

Series: AAP Research Notes on Nanoscience and Nanotechnology

This volume covers a wide range of adsorption activities of porous carbon (PC), CNTs, and carbon nano structures that have been employed so far for the removal of various pollutants from water, wastewater, and organic compounds. The low cost, high efficiency, simplicity, and ease in the upscaling of adsorption processes using PC make the adsorption technique attractive for the removal and recovery of organic compounds. The activated carbon modification process has also been of interest to overcome some of the limitations of the adsorbents.

Fundamentals of Helicopter Dynamics

C. Venkatesan

This is an introductory book on helicopter dynamics. The aim of this book is to introduce the students/engineers to the basic principles of helicopter dynamics. The book focuses on three major topics: (i) rotor blade idealization and blade dynamics in flap, lag and torsion modes; (ii) rotor blade aeroelastic stability (coupled flap-lag and coupled flap-torsion); (iii) coupled rotor-fuselage dynamics. It covers hover, forward flight and other manoeuvre flights. Starting from basic physics of rotating systems, the equations of motion have been derived in vector form.

Handbook of Research for Mechanical Engineering, Volume 1

Fluid Mechanics and Heat Transfer

Kaveh Hariri Asli, National Academy of Science of Azerbaijan (AMEA), Baku, Azerbaijan and Soltan Ali Oglu Aliyev, National Academy of Science of Azerbaijan (AMEA), Baku, Azerbaijan

This book presents the performances of the computational method for system failure prediction by numerical analysis and nonlinear dynamic models. It includes the research of authors on the development of optimal mathematical models, and presents problems by means of theoretical and experimental research. The authors use modern computer technology and mathematical methods for analysis of nonlinear dynamic processes. This book provides a wide coverage of those technologies applicable to both fluid mechanics and heat transfer problems. It also discusses methods and technologies that are a combination of physical, mechanical, and thermal

Handbook of Research on Functional Materials

Principles, Capabilities and Limitations

Edited by Charles A. Wilkie, Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Georges Geuskens, Université Libre de Bruxelles, Belgium and Victor Manuel de Matos Lobo, Coimbra University, Portugal

This book introduces current state-of-the-art technology in modern materials with an emphasis on the rapidly growing technologies. It takes a unique approach by presenting specific materials and then progresses into a discussion of the ways in which these materials and processes are integrated into today's functioning manufacturing industry. It follows a more quantitative and design-oriented approach than other texts in the market, helping readers gain a better understanding of important concepts. Readers will also discover how material properties relate to the process variables in a given process as well as how to perform quantitative engineering analysis of manufacturing processes.

High brightness metal vapor lasers have become the most bright and powerful in the visible spectral range among all existing laser types, resulting in numerous applications ranging from purely fundamental research to practical application in large-scale commercial problems such as isotope selection. This book presents a full series of fundamental problems on the development of physical fundamentals and mathematical models for practical realization of a high-power laser radiation on self-contained transitions in metal atoms. It is the first fundamental review on physics and the technique of high-brightness metal vapor lasers.

High Frequency Communication and Sensing

Traveling-Wave Techniques

Ahmet Tekin, Waveworks, Inc., Sunnyvale, California, USA and Ahmed Emira, Waveworks, Inc., Sunnyvale, California, USA

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

This book introduces multiple patent-pending high-frequency traveling-wave signal generation and utilization circuit techniques. The aforementioned techniques offer a new vision for the architecture of many high-speed communication circuits. In addition to high-speed communication, these ideas are uniquely applicable to THz image sensing technologies. Recently, there has been a great deal of effort and research to reach THz frequencies using standard silicon-based fabrication technologies. This text presents some novel techniques to achieve this goal.

Higher Engineering Mathematics

John Bird, lecturer at Portsmouth University and Senior Training Provider at HMS Sultan, UK

For students taking higher engineering courses, such as Undergraduate Engineering, Higher National Engineering and Foundation Degree Engineering

Unique in its introduction of higher mathematical concepts from an engineering perspective, this text ensures readers understand what they need to do in order to turn theory into practice. This edition has been fully mapped to BTEC Higher National Engineering and Foundation Degree unit specifications. A free instructor's manual is also available online.

High-Speed Devices and Circuits with THz Applications

Edited by Jung Han Choi, Fraunhofer Institute, Berlin, Germany

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

This book tries to provide readers with the outlook for the future RF technology by presenting the state-of-the-art results in both new device development and circuit implementations. The book discusses key issues for the circuit operation beyond 100 GHz with respect to device physics, circuit implementations, signal generation, and some technological bottlenecks for system implementations. It presents implementation results using SiGe technologies alternative to CMOS devices.

Industrial Catalysis and Separations

Innovations for Process Intensification

Edited by K. V. Raghavan, Indian Institute of Chemical Technology, India and B. M. Reddy, Indian Institute of Chemical Technology, India

With contributions from experts from both the industry and academia, this book presents the latest developments in the identified areas. In addition, a thorough and updated coverage of the traditional aspects of heterogeneous catalysis such as preparation, characterization and use in well-established technologies such as nitration, ammoxidation and hydrofluorination is included. This book incorporates appropriate case studies, explanatory notes, and schematics for more clarity and better understanding.

Edited by Richard Zurawski, ISA Group, San Francisco, California, USA

Series: Industrial Information Technology

This Second Edition contains 21 substantially revised chapters and 46 new chapters describing the latest, most significant developments in specialized communication technologies and systems. Complete with a diagram for convenient cross-referencing of material relevant to each industry sector, the book provides comprehensive coverage of wire- and wireless-based specialized communication networks used in plant and factory automation, automotive applications, avionics, building automation, energy and power systems, train applications, and more. It supplies readers with a thorough understanding of the application-specific requirements for communication services and supporting technologies.

Key Elements in Polymers for Engineers and Chemists

From Data to Applications

Edited by Alexandr A. Berlin, Russian Academy of Sciences, Moscow, Russia, Viktor F. Kablov, Polytechnic Institute, Volzhskii Town, Volgograd District, Russia, Andrey A. Pimerzin, Samara State Technical University, Russia and Simon S. Zlotsky, Ufa National Petrochemical Research Technological University, Bashkiriya, Russia

This book provides comprehensive coverage on the latest developments of research in the ever-expanding area of polymers and advanced materials and their applications to broad scientific fields including physics, chemistry, biology, and materials. It presents physical principles in explaining and rationalizing polymeric phenomena. Featuring classical topics that are conventionally considered as part of chemical technology, the book covers the chemical principles from a modern point of view. It analyzes theories to formulate and prove the polymer principles and offers future outlooks on applications of bioscience in chemical concepts.

Edited by Devrim Balköse, Izmir Polytechnic Institute, Turkey, Daniel Horak, Professor, Institute of Macromolecular Chemistry, Prague, Czech Republic and Ladislav Šoltés, Professor, Slovak Academy of Sciences, Bratislava, Slovak Republic

With coverage of a broad range of key engineering materials, this book provides a single, comprehensive book summarizing all aspects involved in the functional materials production chain. It introduces state-of-the-art technology in key engineering materials, emphasizing the rapidly growing technologies. It takes a unique approach by presenting specific materials, then progresses into a discussion of the ways in which these novel materials and processes are integrated into today's functioning manufacturing industry.

Linear Circuit Theory

Matrices in Computer Applications

Jiri Vlach, University of Waterloo, Ontario, Canada

This comprehensive textbook covers all subjects on linear circuit theory, with the emphasis on learning the subject without an excessive amount of information. This unique approach stresses knowledge rather than computer use to start and differs from other books by introducing matrix algebra early in the book. The book's 290 problems are meant to be solved using matrix algebra, which provides the reader with a strong foundation on which to build.

Marine Emergencies

For Masters and Mates

David House, retired lecturer from Fleetwood Nautical College, UK

At some point in their marine career most people are involved in an emergency of some sort, whether it's a fire on board ship, a collision or an engine failure in a storm. Knowing what to do in these situations can be the difference between life and death. Marine Emergencies discusses the different types of marine emergency that you may face then follows up with to-do lists, coping strategies and case studies.

The book includes case studies from all over the world, checklists for use in all of the emergency situations covered in the book and covers everything from fire and collision right through to the legal implications of salvage.

Edited by Suresh C. Ameta, PAHER University, Udaipur, India, Pinki B. Punjabi, Mohanlal Sukhadia University, Udaipur, India, Rakshit Ameta, PAHER University, Udaipur, India and Chetna Ameta, Mohanlal Sukhadia University, Udaipur, India

The large-scale production of chemicals to meet various societal needs has created environmental pollution, including pollution from byproducts and improper disposal of waste. With the world facing adverse consequences due to this pollution, green chemistry is increasingly being viewed as a means to address this concern.

Nanoelectronics

Devices, Circuits, and Systems

Nikos Konofaos, Associate Professor, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Greece

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

This book provides information on all aspects of modern nanoelectronics. It does not require advanced mathematics or hard knowledge of chemistry, and approaches the issue from the engineering point of view, with physics used when needed. Every chapter includes questions for understanding and topics for discussion. Problems are also supplied at the end of the book on selective issues where the students need to practice some calculations and use their skills to compare different devices and systems.

Nanomagnetic Actuation of Cell Surface Receptors

Basic Principles and Applications

Edited by Jon Dobson

The manipulation and control of cells and sub-cellular structures through magnetic nanoparticle-based actuation is a relatively new technique that has led to novel and exciting biomedical applications. Nanomagnetic actuation is being used in laboratory studies of stem cells to determine how these mechanical cues can be used to control stem cell differentiation for regenerative medicine applications. This book explores this rapidly expanding field. It will interest industry bioscientists and biomedical engineers as well as academics in cellular biomechanics, cell and tissue engineering, and regenerative medicine.

Natural Biomarkers for Cellular Metabolism

Biology, Techniques, and Applications

Edited by Vladimir V. Ghukasyan, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA and Ahmed A. Heikal, University of Minnesota, Duluth, USA

Series: Series in Cellular and Clinical Imaging

A guide to the basic principles, techniques, and applications of natural biomarkers, this book covers biochemical reactions and biological functions of coenzymes, non-invasive and quantitative imaging techniques, and related biomedical applications. It emphasizes the connections between autofluorescence observables, the chemical identity of emitters, and their biological/biomedical significance. Readers learn about chemical structure and spectroscopy of natural emitters in live cells, multiparametric imaging techniques associated with autofluorescence imaging, and how energy metabolism, mitochondrial anomalies, and human health and disease are associated.

Non-Imaging Millimeter and Microwave Wave Sensors for Concealed Object Detection

Boris Y. Kapilevich, Stuart W. Harmer, Waterloo, UK and Nicholas J. Bowring

Technology now allows the use of microwave and millimeter wave sensors for the detection of concealed objects—typically weapons and explosive devices—on the human body. This book discusses these developments and includes examples of actual devices built and tested by the authors. Topics include active millimeter wave sensor using the direct detection approach and the heterodyne approach, active microwave sensor for CNR-based object detection, passive millimeter wave sensors, and the role of shielding effects in operating non-imaging MM-wave sensors.

Opportunistic Mobile Social Networks

Edited by Jie Wu, Temple University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA and Yunsheng Wang

The widespread availability of mobile devices coupled with recent advancements in networking capabilities make opportunistic networks one of the most promising technologies for next-generation mobile applications. This book covers recent developments in the theoretical and algorithmic aspects of opportunistic mobile social networks. It presents a new perspective of Mobile Social Networks, the opportunistic MSNs, which aim to enhance spontaneous interaction/communication among people that opportunistically encounter each other, without infrastructure support.

Optical Nanoscopy and Novel Microscopy Techniques

Edited by Peng Xi, Peking University Hospital, Beijing, China

Many new methods in light and super-resolution microscopy have been developed over the last few years. This edited volume overviews the latest advances in microscopy, complete with experimental methods and data analysis of the results. Each chapter begins with a brief description of the principles of the technique for clarity and concludes with a set of problems. Cutting-edge microscopy techniques presented include STED, PALM/STORM, and light sheet microscopy.

Optical Probes in Biology

Edited by Jin Zhang, John Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland, USA, Sohum Mehta, Department of Pharmacology and Molecular Sciences, The Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore, Maryland, USA and Carsten Schultz, EMBL, Heidelberg, Germany

Series: Series in Cellular and Clinical Imaging

This book highlights the key concepts underlying design and application of optical biosensors in diverse contexts. It begins with an historical perspective on the field, moving on to foundations of engineering biosensors and development of fluorescent imaging approaches. The core chapters focus on the design and application of specific optical biosensors in vivo, either for tracking certain biomolecules or visualizing certain cellular events in various living systems. The final section addresses several additional applications, including use in high throughput drug screening and in integrated methods that involve modeling or optogenetics.

Peak to Average Power Ratio in Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing Systems

Pooria Varahram, Somayeh Mohammady and Borhanuddin Mohd Ali

The main aim of this book is to study OFDM systems and discuss the advantages and disadvantages compared to alternative multiplexing techniques. Secondly, it discusses how to overcome the main drawbacks of implementing an actual OFDM system. It introduces a cost-effective technique to increase the power efficiency and reduce the system cost and prolong battery life in mobile devices. This book addresses one of the main challenges in recent mobile technology and will be useful for all engineers who want to design and implement a part of advance technology.

Photopolymers

Photoresist Materials, Processes, and Applications

Kenichiro Nakamura

Series: Optics and Photonics

Advancements in photopolymers have led to groundbreaking achievements in electronic, optical, and medical engineering. At present, photopolymers have myriad applications in semiconductor device manufacturing, printed circuit boards (PCBs), ultraviolet (UV) curing, microelectromechanical systems (MEMS), and medical materials. Addressing topics such as chemically amplified resists, immersion lithography, extreme ultraviolet (EUV) lithography, and nanoimprinting, this book covers photopolymers from core concepts to industrial applications, providing the chemical formulae and structures of the materials discussed as well as practical case studies from some of the world's largest corporations.

Polymer Electrolyte Fuel Cells

Physical Principles of Materials and Operation

Michael Eikerling, Simon Fraser University, Vancouver, BC, Canada and Andrei Kulikovskiy

Series: Green Chemistry and Chemical Engineering

This book provides a systematic and profound account of scientific challenges in fuel cell research. The introductory chapters bring readers up to date on the urgency and implications of the global energy challenge, the prospects of electrochemical energy conversion technologies, and the thermodynamic and electrochemical principles underlying the operation of polymer electrolyte fuel cells. The book then presents challenges in fuel cell research as a systematic account of distinct components, length scales, physicochemical processes, and scientific disciplines. Series: AAP Research Notes on Chemical Engineering

The major goals of quantum chemistry include increasing the accuracy of the results for small molecular systems and increasing the size of large molecules that can be processed, which is limited by scaling considerations—the computation time increases as a power of the number of atoms. This book offers scope for academics, researchers, and engineering professionals to present their research and development works that have potential for applications in several disciplines of computational chemistry. Contributions range from new methods to novel applications of existing methods to gain an understanding of the concepts.

Edited by Yang Hong, University of Oklahoma, Norman, USA and Jonathan J. Gourley, National Severe Storms Laboratory, Norman, Oklahoma, USA

This comprehensive reference is dedicated to radar hydrology. After a brief introduction to radar, the book moves into advanced radar principles and applications. Particular attention is given to the processing of radar data to arrive at accurate estimates of rainfall. The book then introduces advanced radar sensing principles. It covers each component of the hydrologic cycle in detail and discusses state-of-the-art hydrologic models. The book also introduces contemporary approaches in data assimilation and concludes with methods, case studies, and prediction systems design.

Radio Frequency Integrated Circuit Design

Sebastian Magierowski

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

Reintroducing the largely forgotten parametric microwave circuit design technique to the RFIC design community, this book describes how reactive varactor-based amplifiers, mixers, and frequency converters can be designed in modern integrated circuit topologies. The text addresses the issue of integrated reactive RFIC design in a logical manner, presenting key technological trade-offs, the advantages and disadvantages of modern devices in potential parametric designs, and layout tips for optimal performance. After an introduction to parametric circuits, their basic operation, and historical development, the author outlines how varactors operate in modern silicon-based processes.

Recursive Identification and Parameter Estimation

Edited by Han-Fu Chen, Academy of Mathematics and Systems Science, Chinese Academy of Sciences and Wenxiao Zhao, Academy of Mathematics and Systems Science, Chinese Academy of Sciences

This book describes the recursive approach to solving problems from system identification, parameter estimation, adaptive control problems, and more. Special attention is paid to how to transform the problems suitable to a recursive solution. Recursive solutions are given for identification of ARMAX systems without imposing restrictive conditions; for identification of typical nonlinear systems; for optimal adaptive tracking, iterative learning control of nonlinear systems, the consensus of multi-agents systems, and others; for some other related problems such as principal component analysis, the distributed randomized PageRank computation, and more.

Research Horizons of Nanosystems Structure, Properties and Interactions

Edited by Mihai V. Putz, West University of Timisoara, Romania

The need for economically feasible and multifunctional materials becomes more acute as the natural physical and chemical resources reveal either their limits or reveal the difficulties and increasing costs in storage, transport, and conversion. This reference presents the work from contributors from various fields, of various ages and from different countries, creating a valuable collection of research that will advance the fundamental and innovative techniques of nanosystems and their interactions. The authors cover self-assembly, self-regenerating, storage and directional properties of intelligent materials. It helps readers respond to the challenges in this field.

TEXTBOOK

Research Methods in Science and Engineering

Scott A. Gold, University of Dayton, Ohio, USA

Suitable as a text for first-year graduate students or senior undergraduates in any science or engineering discipline, this book focuses on the process of conducting research rather than on discipline-specific methods. The first half of the text focuses on the scientific method in practice. The second half of the text deals with skills and knowledge important to the research process, including statistical measures in research, ethics, and safety. Exercises and examples are provided throughout the text to guide both students and instructors.

Semiconductor Device Technology

Silicon and Materials

Edited by Tomasz Brozek, PDF Solutions, Morgan Hill, California, USA and Krzysztof Iniewski, CMOS Emerging Technologies Research Inc., Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

Providing a good representation of the current state of a complex engineering field ranging from fundamental science and material properties to novel ways of making nano devices, this text is divided into three parts. The first part deals with device technology, covering graphene, SiGe, and silicon processes. The second part describes cutting-edge silicon devices, including SOI, various 3D integration, and memristor technologies that will carry silicon going forward. The third part of the book examines emerging materials with the potential to shape the future of nanotechnology.

Edited by Matthew McBroom, Stephen F. Austin State University, Nacogdoches, Texas, USA

Hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking" as it is commonly known, refers to the practice of using liquids at very high pressures to fragment rock, thereby allowing natural gas to be harvested. This process increases energy resources but also has some negative environmental impacts as well. This book looks at the environmental impact. The first section looks at fracturing and the water supply, the second section looks at ecosystems and wildlife, while the final section examines the possible effects on human ecosystems and human health.

The Method of Moments in Electromagnetics, Second Edition

Walton C. Gibson, Tripoint Industries Inc., Harvest, Alabama, USA

This book discusses the use of integral equations in electromagnetics, covering theory only when necessary to explain how to apply it to solve practical problems. To introduce the method of moments, coupled surface integral equations are derived and solved in several domains of pragmatic concern: two-dimensional problems, thin wires, bodies of revolution, and generalized three-dimensional problems. Focusing on real-world implementation, the Second Edition includes a treatment of electromagnetic scattering from objects that may be either conducting or comprise a composite conducting/dielectric (material) geometry.

Edited by Tomasz Wojcicki, Sidense Corporation, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada and Krzysztof Iniewski, CMOS Emerging Technologies Research Inc., Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

This book showcases the latest advances in very large scale integrated (VLSI) circuits, providing a balanced view of industrial and academic developments beyond silicon and complementary metal-oxide-semiconductor (CMOS) technology. It discusses memories which experienced unprecedented growth in size (density) over the last two decades, as well as their materials and architectures. It also considers recent progress in wireless communications and networks. Offering valuable insight into the current state of the art of VLSI circuits, the text explores new trends in design and applications.

Water for Energy and Fuel Production

Yatish T. Shah, Norfolk State University, Virginia, USA

Series: Green Chemistry and Chemical Engineering

Water in all its forms may be the most important solvent in the development of the new "Energy Economy". This book illustrates that as energy and fuel industries diversify, we are transitioning to an economy where water will play a more and more important role in the supply of energy and fuels. It discusses the role of water in the production of raw fuels such as oil, gas, coal, uranium, and biomass. It also describes methods for how supercritical water and steam are vital for the conversion of raw fuels to synthetic fuels.

Clausewitz Talks Business

An Executive's Guide to Thinking Like a Strategist

Norton Paley

This book distills the wisdom of Carl von Clausewitz's monumental 1832 classic On War for a management audience. His book is considered by many eminent scholars as the most distinguished Western work on war ever written. In recent years, senior executives, mid-level managers, and business strategy consultants have readily accepted the connection between military concepts and their application to the everyday problems of operating under competitive conditions. This book transposes Clausewitz's most enduring concepts to help executives and managers think like strategists.

Lean Today, Rich Tomorrow

Succeeding in Today's Globalization Chaos

Joe Bichai

Learn how a factory condemned to closure transformed itself into the most productive North American manufacturer in its field. Follow the actual process that turned wasteful bad habits—including piecework, batch processing, and rework—into just-in-time/Lean philosophy-driven solutions—such as one-piece flow, U-shaped cells with work teams, and productivity sharing. This hands-on implementation guide not only walks you through each step taken by the company, but also provides you with the tools you need to rally and train your workforce, even when faced with resistance.

Lean Waste Stream

Reducing Material Use and Garbage Using Lean Principles

Marc Jensen

Waste, or garbage, is the manifestation of inefficiency. Therefore, by analyzing business garbage and tracing it back to its source, inefficiencies in process design and flow can be identified. This book approaches the specific problem of business garbage from a "Lean and green" perspective, connecting garbage reduction at all stages with lower operating expenses, higher productivity, and minimized landfill impact. It not only looks downstream at options for reusing, repurposing, and recycling, but also considers garbage in terms of transportation, inventory, and labor costs.

A Functorial Model Theory

Newer Applications to Algebraic Topology, Descriptive Sets, and Computing Categories Topos

Cyrus F. Nourani, Independent Consultant in Computing R&D, San Francisco, California

This book is an introduction to a functorial model theory based on infinitary language categories. The author introduces the properties and foundation of these categories before developing a model theory for functors starting with a countable fragment of an infinitary language. He also presents a new technique for generating generic models with categories by inventing infinite language categories and functorial model theory. In addition, the book covers string models, limit models, and functorial models.

TEXTBOOK

An Introduction to Dynamical Systems for Biological Modeling

Fred Brauer, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada and Christopher Kribs-Zaleta, University of Texas at Arlington, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Mathematical and Computational Biology

Taking more of a qualitative rather than computational approach, this text presents the techniques required to undertake basic modeling of biological systems through the development and analysis of dynamical systems. It includes many different types of applications from population biology and epidemiology. Keeping technical details to a minimum, the text only requires a basic understanding of calculus. It provides examples of problems with solutions followed by exercises to reinforce the examples. Many of the problems are somewhat challenging so as to encourage a deeper understanding and prompt the use of mathematics in learning about biology.

Analysis of Categorical Data with R

Christopher R. Bilder, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, USA and Thomas M. Loughin, Simon Fraser University, Surrey, British Columbia, Canada

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

Written for students and researchers in statistics and biostatistics, this book presents a modern introduction to categorical data analysis, with R integrated into the text as a data analysis method and a learning tool. The book includes many detailed worked examples to illustrate methods, with R code and data available for all of them. It also includes many exercises throughout the text and is supplemented by a solutions manual and website with code, data, and video lectures. Unlike other books on the subject, topics such as missing data and Bayesian methods are covered.

Analytic Methods in Sports

Using Mathematics and Statistics to Understand Data from Baseball, Football, Basketball, and Other Sports

Thomas A. Severini

One of the greatest changes in the sports world during the past 20 years has been the use of mathematical methods to analyze performances, recognize trends and patterns, and predict results.

This book presents a concise but thorough introduction to the analytic and statistical methods that are useful in studying sports. It focuses on the application of the methods to sports data and the interpretation of the results. Suitable for undergraduate students studying sports analytics or taking an introductory statistics course, the book requires no prior background in statistics.

Dependence Modeling with Copulas

Harry Joe, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Monographs on Statistics & Applied Probability

Dependence modelling is an important topic in the study of financial, environmental, medical, and other types of risk. This book covers the substantial research that has taken place in the field during the last 15 years. It discusses the modern topic of the "vine copula," a technique that can be used for modelling dependencies in high-dimensional data. The book gives a good balance of theory and applications, covering diagnostics, model selection, inference, and computing.

Einstein Was Right!

Karl Hess, University of Illinois, Urbana, USA

Most modern books on Einstein emphasize the genius of his relativity theory and the corresponding corrections and extensions of the ancient space-time concept. However, Einstein's opposition to the use of probability in the laws of nature and particularly in the laws of quantum mechanics are often portrayed as outdated. This book takes a different view and shows that Einstein created a "Trojan horse" ready to unleash forces against the use of probability as a basis for the laws of nature.

Handbook of Research for Mechanical Engineering, Volume Two

Flow Control in Complex Systems

Kaveh Hariri Asli, National Academy of Science of Azerbaijan (AMEA), Baku and Soltan Ali Oglu Aliyev, National Academy of Science of Azerbaijan (AMEA), Baku

This handbook includes the computational and practical method used for the prediction of mechanical systems failure related to fluid mechanics and heating, ventilating, air-conditioning, and refrigerating (HVAC&R) engineering. The methods and technologies discussed include a combination of physical, mechanical, and thermal techniques. The book develops a new method for the calculation of mathematical models by computer technology. These methods have provided suitable ways for detecting, analyzing, and recording mechanical systems fault.

Inference Principles for Biostatisticians

Ian C. Marschner

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Biostatistics Series

Statistical inference is the science of drawing conclusions on the basis of information that is subject to randomness. Biostatistics underpins the use of statistical inference in the health and medical sciences. This classroom-tested book presents the principles of statistical inference from a biostatistical perspective. It prepares students for more rigorous work on core methodologies, such as linear models, generalized linear models, survival analysis, longitudinal methods, and randomized trials. Each chapter includes one main example that provides context to the theoretical and conceptual foundations of biostatistics.

Introduction to Multivariate Analysis

Linear and Nonlinear Modeling

Sadanori Konishi, Chuo University, Tokyo, Japan

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

Multivariate techniques are used to analyze data that arise from more than one variable in which there are relationships between the variables. Mainly based on the linearity of observed variables, these techniques are useful for extracting information and patterns from multivariate data as well as for the understanding the structure of random phenomena. This book describes the concepts of linear and nonlinear multivariate techniques, including regression modeling, classification, discrimination, dimension reduction, and clustering.

Introduction to Probability

Joseph K. Blitzstein, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, USA and Jessica Hwang

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

Assuming one semester of calculus, this textbook introduces probability to undergraduate students who want to learn statistics. It clearly explains the importance of widely used distributions in statistics, such as normal, binomial, and Poisson, and explores how they are all connected. The book makes the distributions easier to remember, understand, and work with by illustrating natural applications where they arise, including applications of MCMC. R is used to perform statistical calculations.

Linear Models with R, Second Edition

Julian J. Faraway, University of Bath, UK

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

Linear models are widely used in applications in physical science, engineering, social science and business. The world of R has expanded in the ten years that have passed since this text's first edition. The second edition reorganizes the material on interpreting linear models to distinguish the main applications of prediction and explanation. Elementary notions of causality are introduced and new topics include the QR decomposition, splines, additive models, Lasso, multiple imputation, and false discovery rates. Statistical strategy is covered and the author uses the ggplot2 graphics package in addition to base graphics.

Multilevel Modeling Using R

W. Holmes Finch, Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana, USA, Jocelyn E. Bolin, Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana, USA and Ken Kelley, University of Notre Dame, Indiana, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Statistics in the Social and Behavioral Sciences

This book presents the theory and practice of major multilevel modeling techniques in a variety of contexts using R as the software tool. It describes the applications and extensions of multilevel modeling with special emphasis on the use of R to conduct the analyses and interpret the resulting output. The book is designed for researchers, data analysts, and upper-level undergraduate and graduate students taking a course on multilevel modeling or statistical modeling.

Nonparametric Statistical Methods Using R

John Kloke, University of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, USA and Joseph McKean, Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC The R Series

Focusing on robust rank-based nonparametric methods, this book covers rank-based fitting and testing for models ranging from simple location models to general linear models for uncorrelated and correlated responses. Illustrated with real data examples using R, each chapter includes a short problem set with data sets. The corresponding example codes are available online. Accessible to nonspecialists, the book also offers an appendix with the technical details of the geometry of rank-based estimation.

Principles of Scientific Methods

Mark Chang, AMAG Pharmaceuticals, Inc, Lexington, Massachusetts, USA

This book focuses on the fundamental principles behind scientific methods. The author uses concrete examples and illustrations to introduce and explain principles. He also uses analogies to connect different methods or problems to arrive at a general principle or common notion. The book explains how the principles of scientific methods are not only applicable to scientific research but also in our daily lives. It shows how the scientific method is used to understand how and why things happen, to make predictions, to present mistakes, and to solve problems.

Reflexion and Control

Mathematical Models

Dmitry A. Novikov, Trapeznikov Institute of Control Sciences, Russian Academy of Sciences, Moscow, Russia and

Alexander G. Chkhartishvili, Trapeznikov Institute of Control Sciences, Russian Academy of Sciences, Moscow, Russia

Series: Communications in Cybernetics, Systems Science and Engineering

The book considers the basics of mathematical modeling of reflexive processes in control. The models of informational and strategic reflexion allow describing and studying the behavior of reflexing subjects, investigating the relationship between payoffs gained by agents and their reflexion ranks, solving problems of informational and reflexive control in organizational, economic, social and other systems, and military applications among others (the book contains over 30 examples of possible applications in these fields), describing uniformly many phenomena connected with reflexion, viz., implicit control, informational control via the mass media and reflexion in psychology.

Robust Cluster Analysis and Variable Selection

Gunter Ritter, Universitat Passau, Germany

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Monographs on Statistics & Applied Probability

Clustering remains a vibrant area of research in statistics, and although there are many books on this topic, there are relatively few that are well-founded in the theoretical aspects. This book overviews the theory and applications of robust clustering and selection, synthesizing the key research results of the last twenty years. It includes all the important theoretical details, and covers the key statistical models, robustness issues, optimization algorithms, validation techniques and variable selection methods. The methods are illustrated using real and simulated datasets that can be easily downloaded from the web.

Sinusoids

Theory and Technological Applications

Prem K. Kythe, University of New Orleans, Louisiana, USA

Series: Monographs and Research Notes in Mathematics

Designed for mathematicians, scientists, and engineers in signal processing, this reference explains that sinusoids represent periodic functions of the sine or cosine. The beginning of the book explores the use and historical development of Fourier series, signals, and filters. This material then leads to useful applications of sinusoids in areas that include telecommunications, spectroscopy, acoustics, and more. A good example of a sinusoid is that of a continuous musical sound where the Fourier transform is used to calculate the discrete set of amplitudes that involve the Fourier series.

Andy R. Magid, The University of Oklahoma, Norman, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Pure and Applied Mathematics

This book provides a thorough, self-contained explanation of Galois theory of commutative rings. Requiring some background in commutative algebra and algebraic geometry, the book gives complete proofs of the main results of separable Galois theory. This edition includes a new chapter that offers background on separability and a new chapter on categorical Galois theory that incorporates many developments in the field. The book also covers Boolean spectrum theory and the fundamental groupoid.

Stated Preference Methods Using R

Hideo Aizaki, Tomoaki Nakatani and Kazuo Sato, Rakuno Gakuen University, Hokkaido, Japan

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC The R Series

The quantitative measurement of individual preferences is essential, allowing us to understand social phenomena and derive appropriate policies and business inferences. Suitable for applied statisticians and empirical researchers, this book helps readers select the best method for such measurement from the many econometric methods available. Providing a practical understanding of these methods, the authors present the theoretical foundations of each method together with worked examples to illustrate their application in various fields, notably empirical economics and market research. R is used to implement all methods, with code, packages, and data sets available online.

Cloud Computing

Implementation, Management, and Security

John W. Rittinghouse, Hypersecurity LLC, Houston, Texas, USA and James F. Ransome, Cisco Systems, Santa Clara, California, USA

This book provides an understanding of what cloud computing really means, explores how disruptive it may become in the future, and examines its advantages and disadvantages. It discusses how new technologies, such as virtualization, played a huge role in the growth and acceptance of cloud computing. It also describes different types of cloud services, illustrates how to build a cloud network, and presents common standards for application development, messaging, and security. The authors cover the legal and philosophical issues that must be addressed to properly protect user data and mitigate corporate liability and examine the successes of several cloud computing vendors.

TEXTBOOK

Introduction to Computer Networks and Cybersecurity

Chwan-Hwa (John) Wu, Auburn University, Alabama, USA and J. David Irwin, Auburn University, Alabama, USA

If a network is not secure, how valuable is it? A guide to computer networks and cybersecurity, this book highlights the interconnections between the two to help you understand the complexities of designing secure modern networks. The book walks you through the fundamentals of networks, from an overview of Internet architecture through the protocol layers. It then delves into cybersecurity, covering both attack and defense techniques, and closes with a look at the emerging technologies that will alter the current state of multimedia communication and data center/cloud computing.

Logic: The Basics

Jc Beall, University of Connecticut, USA

Series: The Basics

A hands-on introduction to the philosophically alive field of logical inquiry which covers both classical and non-classical theories. It presents some of the core notions of logic such as validity, basic connectives, identity, 'free logic' and more. This book:

introduces some basic ideas of logic from a semantic and philosophical perspective uses logical consequence as the focal concept throughout considers some of the controversies and rival logics that make for such a lively field

This accessible guide includes chapter summaries and suggestions for further reading as well as exercises and sample answers throughout. It is an ideal introduction for those new to the study of logic as well as those seeking to gain the competence and skills needed to move to more advanced work in logic.

The Universal Computer

The Road from Leibniz to Turing

Martin Davis

This book chronicles the fascinating lives of seven remarkable people, their ideas, and their discoveries. These are the people who investigated the why and how of logical reasoning. The book chronicles the exhilaration and the pitfalls of trying to come to grips with the infinite. Finally, it covers Alan Turing's radically new understanding of the nature of algorithmic processes and their potential, which led to the development of a machine that could be programmed to carry out any process—the precursor of the modern computer.

Distributed Systems

An Algorithmic Approach

Sukumar Ghosh, University of Iowa, Iowa City, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Computer and Information Science Series

Achieving a balance between theory and practice, this text presents the foundational topics of distributed systems and their relationships to real-world applications. With a set of exercises featured in each chapter, the book covers system models, correctness criteria, and proof techniques. It also presents numerous important paradigms in distributed systems, including logical clocks, distributed snapshots, deadlock detection, termination detection, election, and graph algorithms. The author addresses failures and fault-tolerance techniques in diverse applications, such as consensus, transactions, group communication, replicated data management, and self-stabilization. He also explores real-world issues, including distributed discrete-event simulation and security, and sensor and peer-to-peer networks.

Big Data and Health Analytics

Edited by Katherine Marconi and Harold Lehmann, School of Medicine, The Johns Hopkins University

A series of business processes within healthcare including data architecture, software, analytics, and data visualization are required to make big data and health analytics possible. In this book some of the pioneers of big data and health analytics show how healthcare practitioners and organizations are linking data on scales that are only now possible and using information from systems within and across their medical practices. They also show the reality of moving from medical and administrative records to useful information and the innovative ways that this can be accomplished.

The Case for Intuition-Based Decision Making

Edited by Jay Liebowitz, University of Maryland University College, Adelphi, USA

With the onslaught of the Big Data revolution, data-based decision making and analytics are now the rage. However, many key decision makers often make complementary judgments based on intuition. This intuition is often insight-based due to their experiential learning, ephemeral factors like spirituality, and other related factors. This book focuses on this intuition-based decision making. It presents stories and vignettes from leaders and senior executives in industry, academe, government, and not-for-profits.

This book explores key concepts in GIS such as geodesy; the coordinate or referencing system for referring objects on Earth's surface. It explains how the spatial data and 3D surface of Earth are projected on to a flat surface to make a map through different map projection methods. It discusses how three different types of geometry help in the analysis of spatial data. It also discusses the mathematical formulations of how to compute physical parameters of geometric and spatial quantities using different spatial data.

Corporate Security Intelligence and Strategic Decision-Making

Justin Crump, Founder, Sibylline Ltd., Andover, UK

Despite a clear and compelling need for an intelligence-led approach to security, operational, and reputational risks, the subject of corporate security intelligence remains poorly understood. An effective intelligence process can directly support and positively impact operational activity and associated decision-making and can even be used to drive the firm's business in key markets. This volume outlines theory and supplies real practical solutions to implementing an effective intelligence process. While the book focuses on corporate security as the natural home of intelligence, the tools and techniques outlined are equally applicable for any decision-support process.

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Data Mining and Knowledge Discovery Series

Research on the problem of classification tends to be fragmented across such areas as pattern recognition, database, data mining, and machine learning. Addressing the work of these different communities in a unified way, this book explores the underlying algorithms of classification as well as applications of classification in a variety of problem domains, including text, multimedia, social network, and biological data. It presents core methods in data classification, covers recent problem domains, and discusses advanced methods for enhancing the quality of the underlying classification results.

Data Privacy for the Smart Grid

Edited by Rebecca Herold and Christine Hertzog

This book will inform readers without overwhelming them with too much technical detail. It will help them communicate more effectively with IT, telecom, and cyber security professionals as they work to build privacy into their daily work activities. The book supplies guidance for privacy management activities and privacy framework components focused on the Smart Grid. The authors, who are privacy professionals instead of engineers writing on privacy issues, draw upon their extensive experience within the utilities business sector, along with their work with NIST in the Cyber Security Working Group, Smart Grid privacy subgroup since June 2009.

Data Visualization

Principles and Practice, Second Edition

Alexandru C. Telea, University of Groningen, The Netherlands

This book explores the study of processing and visually representing data sets. Data visualization is closely related to information graphics, information visualization, scientific visualization, and statistical graphics. This second edition presents a better treatment of the relationship between traditional scientific visualization and information visualization, a description of the emerging field of visual analytics, and updated techniques using the GPU and new generations of software tools and packages. This edition is also enhanced with exercises and downloadable code and data sets.

Developing Windows-Based and Web-Enabled Information Systems

Nong Ye, Arizona State University, Phoenix, USA and Teresa Wu, Arizona State University, Phoenix, USA

This textbook covers concepts, methods, programming languages and software tools of designing and developing both Windows-based and Web-based information systems, specifically data modeling and design methods. It is designed to enable students and professionals in engineering, business and science fields to learn up-to-date concepts, methods and software tools for developing Windows and web-based information systems.

Economic-Mathematical Methods and Models under Uncertainty

A. G. Aliyev, National Academy of Science of Azerbaijan, Baku

This book covers mathematical programming, using the postulate spacial-time certainty of economic process at uncertainty conditions in finite-dimensional vector space and the principle piecewise-linear homogeneity of economic process at uncertainty conditions in finite-dimensional vector space. A special theory on constructing piecewise-linear economic-mathematical models was developed, and a criterion of multivariate prediction of economic process and their control at uncertainty conditions in a finite-dimensional vector space was suggested.

Ethical Hacking and Penetration Testing Guide

Rafay Baloch

This book introduces the steps required to complete a penetration test, or ethical hack. Requiring no prior hacking experience, the book explains how to utilize and interpret the results of modern day hacking tools, which are required to complete a penetration test. Coverage includes Backtrack Linux, Google reconnaissance, MetaGooFil, dig, Nmap, Nessus, Metasploit, Fast Track Autopwn, Netcat, and Hacker Defender rootkit. Simple explanations of how to use these tools and a four-step methodology for conducting a penetration test provide readers with a better understanding of offensive security.

High Performance Parallel I/O

Edited by Prabhat, Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory, California, USA and Quincey Koziol

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Computational Science

Computational scientists need guidelines on best I/O practices, in order to make best use of existing I/O infrastructure. This book presents a detailed overview of Parallel I/O on current petascale platforms, including I/O hardware resources and filesystems at leading HPC facilities in the US. It covers the leading Parallel I/O libraries and includes case studies that illustrate the use of these libraries for conducting scientific computing. The book concludes with an overview of exascale trends and implications for parallel I/O.

Information Systems

What Every Business Student Needs to Know

Efrem G. Mallach, Rhode Island College, Providence, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Textbooks in Computing

This textbook presents information systems in a manner that's accessible to students. It presents carefully selected content that covers the material all business professionals need to know. The book eliminates material that is of value only to information systems specialists, since the majority of students at most business schools are not IS majors. The book connects the content directly to students' needs by showing how they, on the job in the future, will benefit personally from knowing it. Cutting-edge technology is also presented throughout the book.

Leveraging the Wisdom of the Crowd in Software Testing

Mukesh Sharma and Rajini Padmanaban

Its scale, flexibility, cost effectiveness, and fast turnaround are just a few reasons why Crowdsourced Testing has been getting so much attention lately. While there are a few online resources that explain what crowdsourced testing is all about, there's been a need for a book that covers best practices, case studies, and the future of this technique. Filling this need, this book will help readers leverage the wisdom of the crowd in their software testing. Its comprehensive coverage includes the history of crowdsourcing and crowdsourced testing, implementation practices, and future trends.

Terry Halpin, Nuemont University, Salt Lake City, Utah, USA and Spencer Rugaber, Georgia Tech University, Atlanta, USA

Series: Emerging Directions in Database Systems and Applications

This book introduces readers to programming in Datalog, which is a subset of Prolog, a general purpose logic programming language associated with AI and computational linguistics. The book shows how Datalog deals with large data sets while avoiding low-level implementation details found in other relational database languages. It also explores the application of Datalog programming in data warehousing, data mining, data quality, business rules, and more.

Mobile Device Management and Strategy

Leighton R. Johnson III

Due to their always-on wireless connections, physical sensors, and location services, mobile devices are subject to unique threats. The diversity of available devices, operating systems, carrier-provided services, and mobile applications present additional security challenges to the confidentiality, integrity, and availability of information. This book discusses the baseline of standard security requirements for mobile computing. It examines the US government's Mobile Security Architecture that incorporates security and privacy by design to develop a standard Mobile Device management system that is applicable in most all corporate and organizational situations.

Modeling and Analysis of P2P Content Distribution Systems

Yipeng Zhou, Chinese University of Hong Kong, Dah Ming Chiu and Richard T.B. Ma

Peer-to-peer (P2P) is an important content distribution approach that relies on users to provide service in addition to receiving service. This book brings together important results in P2P algorithms and performance analysis applicable to P2P content distribution. In this book, the authors introduce core models and significant analysis for P2P systems. Supplying valuable insights into good design and effective algorithms, the book uses simple examples to help readers understand the mathematical details.

Precision Photoshop

Creating Powerful Visual Effects

Lopsie Schwartz, Lonita, California, USA

Video editors, creative designers, visual effects artists, and other professionals often use Photoshop for high-end graphics. Yet most of the available books on Photoshop are either a litany of menu items with function listings or superficial quick tips that do not enrich the skill sets of creative professionals. Illustrating key techniques with examples of production-quality work, this book gives fast, clear, and comprehensive guidance gleaned from the author's real-world expertise. The book focuses on critical elements of the workflow and delves deep into aspects most important to creative professionals.

Program Governance

Muhammad Ehsan Khan

Series: Best Practices and Advances in Program Management Series

Even though program management has been discussed in books and literature, program governance seems to be a relatively new subject. Keeping in mind the needs of researchers, teachers, and practitioners, this book focuses on developing a framework for program governance called the Contingent Governance Framework for Programs (CGFPg™). The book addresses practical guidelines for practitioners so that they can understand the subject and its dynamics, learn how to translate the knowledge into action, and apply the knowledge in their day-to-day work. For researchers, it provides a new concept they can utilize in conducting further research in this area.

Paul S. Royer, PMP, Proactive Risk Management

Series: Best Practices and Advances in Program Management Series

This book provides a framework for evaluating projects through a set of critical success factors that are aligned with PMI's PMBOK® Guide. Each process is defined by its purpose, inputs, outputs, and project health assessment factors. The text includes case studies, best practices, and templates. Most project management texts explain what to do. Books on recovering troubled projects describe how to find what's wrong and fix it. This book addresses both and explains how to perform periodic evaluations to keep projects on track.

Proof theory, particularly sequent calculi, allows you to provide completely formal proofs of theorems and facilitate reasoning about proofs. However, sequent calculi are not widely taught to students at either the undergraduate or graduate levels. Remedying this deficiency, this book provides a comprehensive introduction to sequent calculi. It incorporates new developments in the theory of sequent calculi from the last few decades, including recent results on consecution calculi and proof systems.

Big Data Analytics Strategies for the Smart Grid

Carol L. Stimmel, Manifest Mind, LLC

A successful data analytics program is the only way utilities will be able to meet the challenges of a modernized grid that is responsive from an operational perspective and meets the demands of greenhouse gas legislation. This book addresses the needs of applying big data technologies and approaches, including Big Data cybersecurity, to the critical infrastructure that makes up the electrical utility grid. It explores the unique needs of electrical utility grids, including operational technology, IT, storage, processing, and transformation to a usable state that benefits the utility business and electricity consumers.

Software Defined Networking

Design and Deployment

Patricia A. Morreale, Kean University, Union, New Jersey, USA and James Anderson, University of South Florida, Tampa, USA

Software defined networking (SDN) provides support for geographically distributed users, without having unused resources idle. This permits dynamic scaling of network services for peak times and supports service contraction during adverse operating conditions. This book presents a thoughtful discussion of the factors which led to the emergence of SDN, why SDN is vital to the growth and deployment of cloud-based computing systems, and what the impact of the SDN revolution will be. By tracing the data plane abstractions of layers into the SDN abstraction model, readers understand the importance of the SDN revolution.

The Influential Project Manager

Winning Over Team Members and Stakeholders

Alfonso Bucero

Series: Best Practices and Advances in Program Management Series

All best practice recommendations and key success criteria point to the importance of developing soft skills as a project manager, but few sources exist about how to develop the power of influence for achieving better project and business results. Filling this need, this book supplies readers with guidance on how to improve their influence skills to achieve better business results. It explains how to set and meet ambitious goals for you, your team, and your stakeholders. It describes how to listen actively to influence people and how to build partnerships that can pay dividends for a lifetime.

The Science of Computing

Search for the Soul of the Discipline

Matti Tedre, Stockholm University, Kista, Sweden

Ever since its development in the 1940s, computer scientists have debated the nature of computing as a discipline: "Is computing a scientific, theoretical, or engineering discipline?" This book presents all three perspectives on the essence of computing as a discipline: theoretical, engineering, and scientific viewpoints. It relates the three viewpoints to the broader disciplinary context, clarifies their background, and analyzes the reasoning behind them. The book also presents a rich picture of leaders in the field.

Theoretical and Computational Research in the 21st Century

Edited by Nazmul Islam, Techno Global Balurghat (TBG), India

This valuable book focuses mainly on the recent developments of all types of theoretical, mathematical, and computational conceptions, as well as modelling and simulation of specific research themes covering all scientific and technical disciplines from chemistry, physics, and engineering to biology and medicine. The book contains timely reviews and research covering fundamental and applied research aspects in all disciplines of natural sciences, including their historical representations and philosophical perspectives.

Wireless Multimedia Communication Systems

Design, Analysis, and Implementation

K.R. Rao, University of Texas at Arlington, USA, Zoran S. Bojkovic, University of Belgrade, Serbia and Bojan M. Bakmaz, University of Belgrade, Serbia

Rapid development in software, hardware, mobile networks, and the potential of interactive media poses many questions for operators, manufacturers, and researchers of wireless multimedia communication systems (WMCSs). This book strives to answer those questions by not only covering the underlying principles involved in the design, analysis, and implementation of WMCSs, but also by tackling advanced topics such as mobility management, wireless mesh and multimedia sensor networks, security components, and smart grids.

Guidelines for Evaluating Water in Pit Slope Stability

Edited by Geoff Beale, Schlumberger Water Services Ltd, Coton Hill, UK and John Read, CSIRO, Earth Sciences & Resource Engineering, Kenmore, Australia

A comprehensive account of the hydrogeological procedures in open pit slope stability design studies. Created as an outcome of the Large Open Pit (LOP) project, an international research and technology transfer project on the stability of rock slopes in open pit mines. Presenting: 1. the framework used to assess effect of water in slope stability; 2. water pressures; 3. conceptual hydrogeological models; 4. water pressures modelled numerically; 5. slope depressurisation systems; 6. performance of a slope depressurisation program; For mining and civil engineers, geotechnical engineers, engineering geologists and hydrogeologists.

Pile Design and Construction Practice, Sixth Edition

Michael Tomlinson, Retired Consulting Engineer, UK and John Woodward, Consulting Engineer, UK

This international piling handbook details current types of pile, piling equipment and methods. It includes calculations of the resistance of piles to compressive loads, pile groups under compressive loading, piled foundations for resisting uplift and lateral loading and the structural design of piles and pile groups. Marine structures, durability of piled foundations, ground investigations, and pile testing are also covered – with miscellaneous problems. This edition has been fully up-dated to apply the latest structural Eurocodes, along with active British Standards.

Polymer Surfaces and Interfaces

Acid-Base Interactions and Adhesion in Polymer-Metal Systems

Edited by Irina A. Starostina, Kazan National Research Technological University, Russia, Oleg V. Stoyanov, Kazan State Technological University, Russia and Rustam Ya Deberdeev, Kazan National Research Technological University, Russia

This book presents the analysis of techniques used for the determination of acid-base properties in view of their applicability to examination of solid organic and inorganic surfaces. It shows the important role that acid-base interactions play in establishing interfacial adhesive-adherent contact and outlines practical recommendations regarding parameters of quantitative estimation of acid-base surface properties that implies the relationship with adhesive ability in polymer-metal systems. The book is intended for professors and instructors of specific teaching courses, students and postgraduate students, college libraries, technical bookstores, and industry professionals.

Analytical Mechanics

Solutions to Problems in Classical Physics

Edited by Ioan Merches, Al.I. Cuza University, Iasi, Romania and Daniel Radu

The principles and methods of analytical mechanics are very efficient for investigating not only mechanics but also in areas such as field theory, plasma physics, and quantum mechanics. This text presents a short theoretical description of these subjects, followed by solved problems. The authors thoroughly discuss solutions to the problems by taking a comprehensive approach to explore the methods of investigation. They carefully perform the calculations step by step, graphically displaying some solutions via Mathematica® 4.0.

At the Root of Things

The Subatomic World

Edited by Palash Baran Pal, Saha Institute of Nuclear Physics, Calcutta and Sushan Konar, National Centre for Radio Astrophysics, TIFR, Pune

The book is a journey into the world of elementary particles which are the basic constituents of all matter in the universe, as well as the nature of the interactions between them. It is written in a non-technical way so that anyone interested about these issues will be able to read it. All and all, this is a book that not only helps outsiders understand the subject in a non-mathematical manner; it also inspires them to join the exciting endeavor. It contains many line diagrams to illustrate the ideas and a few mathematical equations like $E = mc^2$.

Bio-Based Composites for High-Performance Materials

From Strategy to Industrial Application

Edited by Wirasak Smitthipong, Kasetsart University, Thailand, Rungsima Chollakup, Kasetsart University, Thailand and Michel Nardin, Institut de Science Des Matériaux de Mulhouse, CNRS, France

This timely text integrates disciplines such as materials science, polymer chemistry, plant science, chemical engineering, and nanotechnology to provide comprehensive coverage of the state of the art in bio-based composite materials, as well as their biological feedstocks, basic design principles, properties, industrial applications, environmental friendliness, and life cycles. It presents a strategic and policy-oriented view of bio-based composites, addressing the competing needs for plants as food versus plants as manufacturing feedstocks, while considering the costs of retrofitting existing chemical production plants for bio-based composite manufacture.

Biorefinery and the Emerging Biomass Economy

William Maher Nelson, Adjunct Professor, University of Illinois, USA

Series: Sustainability

Biomass is renewable organic materials, such as wood, agricultural crops or wastes, and municipal wastes, especially when used as a source of fuel or energy. This book overviews topics including economics, LCA, sustainable agriculture, chemistry, engineering, and policy. It discusses both energy from biomass and using biomass feedstocks to replace petroleum in the production of chemicals. The value of this volume is in its practical descriptions of the science, technology, and limitations of the modern, practical biorefinery.

Essentials of Modern Physics

Jagdish Rai, Indian Institute of Technology Roorkee, Uttarakhand and Kanhaiya Lal Yadav

This book deals with the theoretical aspects of the subject matter, leading to important results. It further describes the experiments to observe the important results obtained. It cites examples from nature, the laboratory, and day-to-day life. Each chapter contains some solved examples and problems at the end. After completing the book and solving the problems, students will gain sufficient knowledge of modern physics, preparing them for higher-level courses in science and technology.

General Relativity

Basics and Beyond

Ghanashyam Date, The Institute of Mathematical Sciences, Chennai, India

Many facets of the theory of general relativity have been uncovered over the past century and advances in technology enable more sophisticated tests of the theory. Research efforts have correspondingly shifted in different directions. This book provides a broad perspective on these developments at a level understandable to beginning researchers. It can also be used as supplementary reading in a graduate-level course on general relativity. The book emphasizes advanced topics and experiments.

Hierarchical Micro/Nanostructured Materials

Fabrication, Properties, and Applications

Edited by Weiping Cai, Chinese Academy of Sciences, Hefei, Guotao Duan, Chinese Academy of Sciences, Hefei and Yue Li, Chinese Academy of Sciences, Hefei

Series: Advances in Materials Science and Engineering

Hierarchical micro/nanostructured materials not only possess the high surface activity and specific surface areas of nanomaterials but also structural stability and robustness of bulk. This book discusses the latest fabrication, properties, and applications of hierarchical micro/nanostructured materials in two parts—powders and arrays. It covers new technologies and future trends including structure-directed solvothermal routes, template-etching strategies, electrospinning and in situ conversion, the modified colloidal lithography-based solution, and electrodeposition strategies.

Edited by Jacinto Sa, Laboratory of Ultrafast Spectroscopy, Ecole Polytechnique Federale de Lausanne, Switzerland

This book presents recent developments in high-resolution x-ray emission spectroscopy (XES) and x-ray absorption spectroscopy (XAS) in terms of time-resolved and surface enhancement essential to understanding catalytic reactivity and capitalizing on core-level x-ray spectroscopy at fourth-generation light sources (XFELs). The text describes all spectrometers developed to perform core-level x-ray spectroscopy, highlighting the advantages and disadvantages of each. It provides detailed descriptions of methods to elucidate aspects of catalysts under working conditions, such as active sites and molecule adsorption. It also considers future opportunities in XFELs.

Introduction to Numerical Programming

A Practical Guide for Scientists and Engineers Using Python and C/C++

Titus A. Beu, University Babes-Bolyai, Cluj-Napoca, Romania

Series: Series in Computational Physics

This book introduces numerical programming using Python and C/C++, emphasizing methods used in physics and engineering. It helps readers develop the ability to navigate relevant algorithms, knowledge of coding design, and efficient scientific programming skills. It requires minimal background in mathematics, leading readers from elementary methods to complex algorithms useful in modern programming. It incorporates examples and real code throughout, as well as problem sets, to facilitate a hands-on learning experience.

Natural Products Chemistry

Sources, Separations and Structures

Edited by Raymond Cooper, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University and George Nicola, UCSD, San Diego, California, USA

Compounds isolated from nature have long been known to possess biological profiles and pharmaceutical potential far greater than anything made by man. However, they are notoriously cumbersome to isolate and challenging to synthesize, and the path of natural products to viable drugs is an arduous journey. This book presents a practical guide to gathering, isolating, and discovering new pharmaceuticals from nature. It emphasizes the challenges and advantages of products acquired from nature over traditional compounds such as those arising from combinatorial chemistry.

Physical Chemistry of Macromolecules

Macro to Nanoscales

Edited by Chin Han Chan, University Teknologi MARA, Sha Alam, Malaysia, Chin Hua Chia, Universiti Kebangsaan, Bangi, Malaysia and Sabu Thomas, Mahatma Gandhi University, Kerala, India

A comprehensive resource, this book summarizes recent technical research accomplishments in the area of thermodynamics, characterizations, and applications of polymer blends. It begins with an overview of thermodynamic behaviors of non-equilibrium polymers, then covers properties of polymer blends, including surface tension, transition, crystallization, morphology, and flow behaviors. It also discusses miscibility and molecular characterizations of polymer blends and reviews applications to various systems. In this time when science has such a strong tendency for diversification, this book demonstrates the relevance of one's own activities with neighboring branches of activities.

Physics of Nuclear Radiations

Concepts, Techniques and Applications

Chary Rangacharyulu, University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Canada and Nelson Mandela African Institute of Science and Technology (NM-AIST), Arusha, Tanzania

This text makes the physics of nuclear radiations accessible to students with a basic background in physics and mathematics. Rather than convince students one way or the other about the hazards of nuclear radiations, the text empowers them with tools to calculate and assess nuclear radiations and their impact. It discusses the meaning behind mathematical formulae as well as the areas in which the equations can be applied. Coverage includes archeology, health, and medical physics applications.

Processes of Formation of Micro-and Nanodisperse Systems

A. A. Bochkarev, Kutateladze Institute of Thermodynamics, Novosibirsk, Russia and V. I. Polyakova, Kutateladze Institute of Thermodynamics, Novosibirsk, Russia

This work covers the physical processes and phenomena leading to the formation of disperse materials and their properties. Special attention is given to homogeneous condensation of metal vapours in expansion of metal vapours in vacuum, heterogeneous condensation of metal vapours on solid substrates in the presence of impurities with the formation of disperse condensates, and flow in thin films and their decay. The book describes applications including production of composites of nanodisperse metals in an organic matrix and methods of fine cleaning of gases contaminated with micro- and nanoparticles.

Georgy I. Eskin, All-Russia Institute of Light Alloys, Moscow, Russia and Dmitry G. Eskin, Brunel University, Uxbridge, UK

Spawned by the growing interest in ultrasonic technology and new developments in ultrasonic melt processing, this Second Edition is restructured to emphasize the fundamentals, mechanisms, and applications of ultrasonic melt processing in different light metal technologies. In addition to providing a historical overview of the last 100 years, the fully revised text features new coverage of composite and nanocomposite materials, as well as new chapters on ultrasonic grain refinement, refinement of primary solid phases, and semi-solid processing of billets with nondendritic structure.

Adsorptive Removal of Heavy Metals from Groundwater by Iron Oxide Based Adsorbents

UNESCO-IHE PhD Thesis

Valentine Uwamariya, UNESCO-IHE Institute for Water Education, Delft, The Netherlands

This book describes the adsorption method in the removal of selected heavy metals present as cations (Cd, Cu and Pb) or oxyanions (Cr(VI) and As(V)) using iron oxide coated sand (IOCS) and granular ferric hydroxide (GFH). The effects of pH, natural organic matter (fulvic acid (FA)) and interfering ions (phosphate and calcium) on the adsorption efficiency were also assessed. The sorption reactions that take place at the surface of the adsorbent were also described through the surface complexation modelling for Cd, Cu and Pb cation adsorption. Batch adsorption tests and rapid small scale column tests (RSST) were used as laboratory methods.

Algal Blooms and Membrane Based Desalination Technology

UNESCO-IHE PhD Thesis

Loreen Ople Villacorte

This thesis addresses the need to study algal blooms and their impact to the operation of UF pre-treatment and SWRO systems. Theoretical and experimental studies were performed to characterise the properties and fouling propensity of transparent exopolymer particles (TEP) released by bloom-forming algae. The outcome of this thesis will provide engineers/operators better understanding and assessment tools to develop robust processes and effective operation strategies to maintain stable operation in membrane-based desalination plants during algal bloom situations.

Aquatic Chemistry Concepts, Second Edition

James F. Pankow, Oregon Graduate Institute, Beaverton, USA

Filling the need for an accessible, easy-to-use book on the topic, this volume delves into the details behind some of the complicated equations and principles of aquatic chemistry. It examines the chemistry of natural water systems such as lakes and rivers, along with the chemistry of rainwater. Highlights in the new edition include an increased focus on the Electroneutrality Equation (ENE), metal adsorption to solid surfaces, and general aspects of the acid/base chemistry of blood and other physiological fluids. Solved problems are included in every chapter, making this an excellent reference for clear explanations of aquatic chemistry principles.

Flood Control and Drainage Engineering, Fourth Edition

S.N. Ghosh

Primarily written as course material on flood control and drainage engineering for advanced students of civil engineering, this new fourth edition is again thoroughly revised. It accommodates recent developments in remote sensing, information technology and GIS technology. New additional material deals with problems of flood damage management due to Tsunami waves, failures of dams and embankment breaching and dredging applications. The book includes design problem-solving and case studies. The subject matter will be of considerable interest to civil engineers, agricultural engineers, architects and town planners, as well as other government and non-government organizations.

Modelling Groundwater Systems: Understanding and Improving Groundwater Quantity and Quality Management

UNESCO-IHE PhD Thesis

Girma Yimer Ebrahim, UNESCO-IHE Institute for Water Education, Delft, The Netherlands

This thesis explores several specific problems related to contaminant migration, groundwater-surface water interactions and managed aquifer recharge, using a variety of simulation methods and combined simulation-optimization modelling approaches. The validity of these approaches for evaluating groundwater quantity and quality management options is explored. The results of these studies demonstrate that better insights and improved groundwater resource management can be achieved through a combination of different simulation and optimization methods that take into account data availability and specific site conditions.

Permeable Reactive Barrier

Sustainable Groundwater Remediation

Edited by Ravi Naidu, Centre for Environmental Risk Assessment and Remediation, University of South Australia, Australia

Series: Advances in Trace Elements in the Environment

Remediation of ground water is complex and often challenging. The passive remediation technology, currently in vogue, is based on permeable reactive barriers (PRB) that allow water to pass through while the fence/barrier made of reactive materials remediates the contaminants. Although PRB has been in operation for over a decade there are limited published books available. This book covers in one single volume all the information needed to plan, design/model and apply a successful, cost-effective and sustainable PRB technology.

The Effect of Riparian Zones on Nitrate Removal by Denitrification at the River Basin Scale

UNESCO-IHE PhD Thesis

Linh Hoang, UNESCO-IHE, Institute for Water Education, Delft, The Netherlands

The riparian zone plays an important role in nitrogen removal, despite the minor proportion of the land area that it covers. The main objective of this thesis is to enhance the SWAT model by adding (i) a landscape routing concept across different landscape units, and (ii) a Riparian Nitrogen Model to simulate the denitrification process in riparian zones. Case study results show that SWAT_LS is able to evaluate the effect of denitrification in riparian zones, taking into account their specific locations as interfaces between terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems. These modifications enable the SWAT model to be used for flow and nitrogen modelling in riparian zones.

Water Resources Strategies to Increase Food Production in the Semi-Arid Tropics

UNESCO-IHE PhD Thesis

David Love, UNESCO-IHE Institute for Water Education, Delft, The Netherlands

Water resources and water balance modelling are used to quantify the effect of water resources strategies and climatic conditions on water resources availability and the potential of alluvial aquifers. The greatest benefit for the least impact comes from strategies providing for better land and soil/water management, e.g. changing from maize to small grains, production of livestock fodder, conservation agriculture. Small dams are a key resource to rural communities, and there is also great potential for the exploitation of alluvial aquifers for water supply. Better management of existing large dams, and conjunctive use of alluvial groundwater could increase productive use of water.

Web-based Virtual Environments for Decision Support in Water Based Systems

UNESCO-IHE PhD Thesis

Xuan Zhu, UNESCO-IHE Institute for Water Education, Delft, The Netherlands

User interface is one of the most important components for decision support systems since it directly faces to the end users: decision makers and stakeholders. Implementation of modern visualization and interaction techniques can fill the gap between models and information in order to assist the end user to achieve appropriate knowledge. Web-based interactive maps and construction of virtual environments are mainly described in this research. Combining with several case studies, the advantages and disadvantages of 2D and 3D visualization have been revealed.

Digital Architecture

Edited by Mark Burry, RMIT, Melbourne, Australia

Series: Critical Concepts in Architecture

'Digital architecture' is a relatively recent critical concept and encompasses all aspects of the discipline of architecture engaging with computation. We have seen growth of a creative digital influence across all of architecture's subdisciplines and there is now a maturity in the conversation. This major work of collected critical insights compiles the key texts that will be as useful to the initiate as to the experienced professional and as revealing to the sceptic as to the digitally converted. The focus of the collection is the contemporary period from the late 1980s to the present day contextualised through the inclusion of key texts from the earlier pioneers, ordered into six sections.

Energy, Poverty, and Development

Edited by Benjamin K. Sovacool, Vermont Law School, USA

Series: Critical Concepts in Development Studies

Research in and around energy, poverty, and development is now flourishing. But much of the relevant literature remains inaccessible or is highly specialized and compartmentalized, so that it is difficult for many of those who are interested in the subject to obtain an informed, balanced, and comprehensive overview. This new four-volume collection from Routledge's acclaimed series, Critical Concepts in Development Studies, meets the need for a reference work to make sense of the subject's vast and dispersed literature.

Financial Derivatives

Edited by David H. Goldenberg, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, USA

Series: Critical Concepts in Finance

Financial derivatives have been widely implicated by those seeking causes of the global financial crisis. And, while international financial systems continue to be buffeted by extreme turbulence, the necessity to comprehend the economic rationale behind derivatives, as well as their use—and misuse—has never been greater.

This four-volume collection from Routledge answers that need. David H. Goldenberg, a leading scholar in the field, has brought together the foundational and the very best cutting-edge contributions. The collection maps the existing body of thinking and helps users to make sense of the continuing explosion in scholarly output.

Human Rights in Asia and the Pacific

Edited by Ben Saul, University of Sydney, Australia and Catherine Renshaw

Series: Critical Concepts in Asian Studies

The Asia Pacific region has the least uptake of human rights treaties of any region in the world. It has also presented conceptual challenges to the universality of international human rights, for instance through arguments about 'Asian values' (the collective over the individual, the economic over the political, compromise over adjudication) being inconsistent with western notions of rights. This collection makes a timely and distinctive contribution to the literature by bringing together the leading scholars in the field who have written across the gamut of thematic human rights issues in the region.

Japanese Popular Culture

Edited by Matthew Allen, James Cook University, Australia and Rumi Sakamoto, University of Auckland, New Zealand

Series: Critical Concepts in Asian Studies

Pop culture has always occupied a singular place in Japan's expression of selfhood and otherness, providing vicarious experiences of life within Japan. Today, Japanese popular culture's global influence is felt most keenly in movie culture, animation, television, social media, music, fashion, and comics (manga), to name but a few fields and technologies. The assembled articles provide a comprehensive overview of the postwar history of Japanese popular culture, explore the complex and heterogeneous nature of the Japanese pop-culture landscape in the twenty-first century, and demonstrate the highly mobile and complex nature of the globalization of Japanese popular culture.

Peacebuilding

Edited by Vincent Chetail, The Graduate Institute, Switzerland and Oliver Jütersonke

Series: Critical Concepts in Political Science

The controversies raised by the withdrawal of US troops from Afghanistan, the situation in Iraq and the management of the 'Arab Spring' uprising have demonstrated that achieving peace is not a matter as simple as ending the war. The consequences of conflict extend far beyond the termination of local hostilities and often obstruct the reconstruction of war-torn societies. The critical concept of 'peacebuilding' now demands greater understanding and analysis. The collection addresses the notion of peacebuilding whilst focusing on the key figures involved in the process of obtaining peace and the objectives of peacebuilding.

Religion, Pilgrimage, and Tourism

Edited by Alex Norman, The University of Sydney, Australia and Carole M. Cusack, The University of Sydney, Australia

For as long as human beings have existed they have been interested in travel. Their homelands and cultural norms have always been constructed with reference to, or contrasted with, the lands and habits of 'the Other'. Implicit in this statement is the notion that some places are more special (perhaps sacred) than others, and this is the core of the intimate relationship between human beings, place and travel, and religion.

Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts

Edited by Humberto Nagera

Series: Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts

This 4 volume set, originally published between 1969 and 1970, traces the basic psychoanalytic concepts evolved by Freud. Each volume takes a single theme in Freud's thought and gives a concise but exhaustive account of the historical development of the concepts relating to it. Whenever there is any change in formulation or amplification, the change and Freud's reasons for it are clearly noted. Out of print for some time it is now available again both as a set and individual volumes.

Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts on Metapsychology, Conflicts, Anxiety and Other Subjects

Edited by Humberto Nagera

Series: Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts

First published in 1970 and in contrast to the previous three volumes, which each dealt with a single subject, this volume is a miscellaneous one. Seventeen subjects were selected on the basis of their relevance for the understanding both of psychoanalytic theory and of human behaviour in general. Some of these subjects were chosen because of the many misconceptions and misunderstandings that surrounded them. As in previous volumes, the development of each concept is described from its conception to Freud's final formulation and detailed references are given for the guidance of the student, the psychoanalyst, the psychiatrist, the social worker, the psychologist and the general reader.

Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts on the Libido Theory

Edited by Humberto Nagera

Series: Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts

The libido theory is one of the major areas of interest in psychoanalysis. Freud's insights in this field have been widely applied and used by psychoanalysts, adult and child psychiatrists, psychologists, educationalists, experts on child development and social workers.

Originally published in 1969, in this volume the reader will find 24 basic psychoanalytic concepts concerning the libido theory. As in the other volumes in this series, the historical development of each concept and references to Freud's works are clearly given so that students and scholars can pursue any aspect of special interest.

Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts on the Theory of Dreams

Edited by Humberto Nagera

Series: Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts

First published in 1969 Dr Nagera and his collaborators isolated from Freud's work 25 basic concepts that they considered not only the cornerstones of Freud's theory of dreams but fundamental pillars for the understanding of psychoanalytic theory generally. They are presented in a condensed and concentrated manner containing all significant statements made by Freud at any point in his life on the subject of dreams, as well as tracing the historical development of his ideas wherever significant. References to the sources are given in all instances for the guidance of the student of psychoanalysis, the psychiatrist, the social worker, the psychologist or the scholarly

Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts on the Theory of Instincts

Edited by Humberto Nagera

Series: Basic Psychoanalytic Concepts

Originally published in 1970, this volume describes in condensed but detailed form Freud's development of the theory of instincts. As is well known, Freud reformulated and amplified his theory of instincts at several points during his lifetime. In this volume the reader will be able to follow the development of Freud's thought from his initial discovery of the duality of 'sexual' and 'ego' instincts and his recognition of the fundamental importance of the aggressive forces in human nature and behaviour, to the formulation of his theories regarding life and death.

Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

Edited by W. K. Estes

Series: Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

This 6 Volume set, originally published between 1975 and 1978, surveys the research and theory on learning and cognitive processes that was rapidly developing at the time. Written by those active in developing the ideas and doing the research, the primary orientation was to concentrate on research and models aimed toward the development of general cognitive theory. It was also up to date with regard to theoretical and even technical developments, yet sufficiently self-contained to be readable for anyone with a reasonable scientific background, regardless of their acquaintance with the technical jargon of particular specialties. It is now available again, both as a set or individual volumes.

Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes (Volume 1)

Introduction to Concepts and Issues

Edited by W. K. Estes

Series: Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

First published in 1975, Volume 1 of this Handbook attempts to present an overview of the field and to introduce the principal theoretical and methodological issues that will persistently recur in the expanded treatments of specific research areas that comprise the later volumes. Deferring to the current Zeitgeist rather than to chronology, they begin with the present state of cognitive psychology, then introduce the comparative approach, and conclude this volume with a rapid, three-chapter review of the evolution of ideas from conditioning to information processing.

Conditioning and Behavior Theory

Edited by William K. Estes

Series: Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

Originally published in 1975, Volume 2 of this Handbook looks at areas traditionally associated with learning theory such as conditioning, discrimination and behavior theory. It deals with concepts and theories growing principally out of laboratory studies of conditioning and learning. The intention was to treat mechanisms, processes, and principles of some generality – applicable at least to all vertebrates.

Approaches to Human Learning and Motivation

Edited by William K. Estes

Series: Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

Originally published in 1976, Volume 3 of this Handbook deals primarily with conditions of acquisition, retention and forgetting, and the manner in which acquired information and motivation combine to determine performance. The organization of this volume can be understood in terms of four principal categories. The first category deals with general problems of methodology, the second and third with basic concepts arising from research on human learning and performance and the fourth with applications.

Attention and Memory

Edited by William K. Estes

Series: Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

Originally published in 1976, this is Volume 4 of a series that reflected the current state of the field at the time. In this title the focus shifts to modern developments in cognitive psychology. The emphasis is primarily on attention and short-term memory, as these concepts came to be understood in the decade leading up to publication. Human Information Processing

Edited by William K. Estes

Series: Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

Originally published in 1978, Volume 5 of this Handbook reflects a single theoretical orientation, that characterized by the term human information processing in the literature at the time, but which ranges over a very broad spectrum of cognitive activities. The first two chapters give some overall picture of the background, goals, method, and limitations of the information-processing approach. Linguistic Functions in Cognitive Theory

Edited by William K. Estes

Series: Handbook of Learning and Cognitive Processes

Originally published in 1978, Volume 6 concludes the survey of research and theory on learning and cognitive processes that was envisaged when the plan for this Handbook was sketched. The primary orientation in the planning the Handbook was to concentrate on research and models aimed toward the development of general cognitive theory.

The first five chapters of this volume are organized in relation to one of the research areas that had expanded most vigorously during the period of planning and writing of the Handbook. These chapters treat aspects of psycholinguistics most closely related to research and theory covered in the other volumes.

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

The Greeks invented them. All manner of people in the European Middle Ages used them, often with creative and brilliant effect. Victorian schoolmasters in England almost buried them and the pupils who had to cram facts parrot-fashion. Originally published in 1972, this title brought mnemonics back into focus with a new collection designed for current use.

Although some entries are very much of their time, this title reminds us that mnemonics are still a useful tool in a world where technology means most people feel they have little need to remember.

Alcohol and Human Memory (PLE: Memory)

Edited by Isabel M. Birnbaum and Elizabeth S. Parker

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1977, the chapters in this volume offer a concise review of the research and new direction in the study of alcohol and cognition at the time. Each chapter has been prepared by an eminent researcher who was currently involved in investigating human cognitive behaviour. The chapters contain not just a dry summary of work done in the field, but descriptions of the impetus for the work that was done, problems in doing such work, knowledge that was gained, and suggestions for future research.

Clinical Management of Memory Problems (2nd Edn) (PLE: Memory)

Edited by Barbara Wilson and Nick Moffat

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Many patients with stroke, head injuries or dementia suffer severe memory impairment and in many cases improvement may fail to occur.

This book, first published in 1984 followed by this second edition in 1992, offers practical guidelines to the problems and is supported by a discussion of theory about memory systems and functioning. It should enable therapists and psychologists to recognize, understand, assess and manage memory problems arising from injury, accident or infection of the brain. This book would have been an asset for those professionals involved in the rehabilitation of the impaired memory at the time and can still be of value today.

Connectionist Models of Memory and Language (PLE: Memory)

Edited by Joseph P. Levy, University of Roehampton, Dimitrios Bairaktaris, John A. Bullinaria, University of Birmingham and Paul Cairns

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Connectionist modelling and neural network applications had become a major sub-field of cognitive science by the mid-1990s. In this ground-breaking book, originally published in 1995, leading connectionists shed light on current approaches to memory and language modelling at the time.

The book is divided into four sections: Memory; Reading; Computation and statistics; Speech and audition. Each section is introduced and set in context by the editors, allowing a wide range of language and memory issues to be addressed in one volume.

Functional Disorders of Memory (PLE: Memory)

Edited by John F. Kihlstrom, University of California, Berkeley and Frederick J. Evans

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1979, the chapters in this volume summarize the available knowledge pertaining to a variety of functional – as opposed to explicitly organic – amnesias and disruptions of memory. Each chapter is written by an expert, and each author has attempted to integrate his area of inquiry into the contemporary body of theory and research on memory and cognition. The reader will find bold new treatments of repression and childhood amnesia, systematic explorations of certain experimental amnesias, and challenging analyses of the anomalies of everyday memory, in this ground-breaking work of the time.

Human Memory and Amnesia (PLE: Memory)

Edited by Laird S. Cermak

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1982, this book brings together two areas of research previously studied in parallel, with little interaction (particularly in the US): normal memory processing and the amnesic syndrome. When trying to document the relationship between the two it became apparent that there was much crossover and duplication of effort in a number of areas. It was written, following a meeting in 1979, by a small group of investigators, brought together to explore this commonality and to share data and theory, thus beginning the promise of a bright future of interdisciplinary interaction in memory research.

Essays in Honor of Allan Paivio

Edited by John C. Yuille

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1983, the 14 chapters in this volume are based upon presentations made to a conference held at the University of Western Ontario in June, 1981. The primary purpose of that conference was to mark the 10th anniversary of the publication of Allan Paivio's text, Imagery and Verbal Processes, and to acknowledge the continuing contribution that Paivio was making to imagery research and theory at the time.

Introduction to Human Memory (PLE: Memory)

Vernon Gregg

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1986, this book was written for undergraduates who had completed an introductory course in psychology, and aimed to acquaint the student with the core of recent experimental findings and theoretical ideas concerning human memory. Each chapter deals with a specific area of memory research but care is taken to build on what has been covered in preceding chapters, so providing an integrated treatment of the subject. Thus, the book can comfortably be read from cover to cover, or selected issues can be referred to in isolation.

Levels of Processing in Human Memory (PLE: Memory)

Edited by Laird S. Cermak and Fergus I.M. Craik

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

As a conceptual framework for the investigation of human memory, the levels-of-processing paradigm had enjoyed immense popularity since its introduction in the early 1970s. It was the impetus behind literally hundreds of experiments and was used as an "explanation" for a wide range of retention phenomena. Consequently, a wealth of data and theory had emerged, and this title assimilates and evaluates this information. Originally published in 1979, the distinguished contributors to the volume – both proponents and opponents of the levels-of-processing framework – present here their latest data and ideas on a viewpoint that has been a tremendous influence in memory research and related areas.

Memory Development in Children (PLE: Memory)

Peter A. Ornstein, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1978, the contributors to this volume offer here chapters and position papers concerned with children's memory. The chapters represent in-depth reports on various aspects of children's memory. The position papers address critical issues confronting researchers in memory development. An historical overview provides an introduction to the volume, leading the reader to the very latest in new directions of research in this area at the time. This volume will be of interest to all concerned with the development of memory in children.

Memory, Thinking and Language (PLE: Memory)

Topics in Cognitive Psychology

Judith Greene

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

In the ten years prior to its original publication in 1987, cognitive psychology uncovered the increasingly important role of knowledge stored in memory and the integrated nature of cognitive processes. In Memory, Thinking and Language the author takes these three traditional topics and places them within the new cognitive approach. Judith Greene's 1975 book Thinking and Language, proved to be a highly successful student resource. This book provides an equally clear introduction to complex ideas. It also emphasises the practical applications of cognitive psychology for teaching and learning as well as for everyday life.

Neuropsychology of the Amnesic Syndrome (PLE: Memory)

Alan J. Parkin and Nicholas Leng

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1993, this book provides the clinician, researcher and student with a comprehensive account of the neuropsychology of the amnesic syndrome. The opening chapter places the amnesic syndrome within the overall context of memory disorders and provides a theoretical basis for understanding the presentation of the clinical and experimental findings which form the major part of the work.

Following chapters include an extensive account of the various methods used to assess memory and associated deficits; specific aetiologies giving rise to the amnesic syndrome; current and future prospects for behavioural remediation of severe memory deficit.

New Directions in Memory and Aging (PLE:Memory)

Proceedings of the George A. Talland Memorial Conference

Edited by Leonard W. Poon, James Fozard, Laird S. Cermak, David Arenberg and Larry W. Thompson

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1980, this book contains the proceedings from a memorial conference held in honour of George A. Talland, who made a significant contribution to the area of memory and aging. The major objective of the volume was to stimulate research towards a more comprehensive understanding of age related differences in memory. It was also hoped it would provide direction for the application and utilization of research findings in the evaluation and treatment of memory complaints and memory difficulties experienced by the elderly.

Ontogeny of Learning and Memory (PLE: Memory)

Edited by Norman E. Spear, Binghamton University - SUNY and Byron A. Campbell, Princeton University

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1979, this volume contains chapters prepared following a conference at SUNY- Binghamton in 1977. The conference was the outcome of exciting new developments that had occurred in the ontogeny of learning and memory at the time, as well as a long-standing friendship between the editors. Many changes had taken place in the years leading up to this volume and there were now many more researchers active in the field. This volume reflected the rapidly changing state of this research area at the time and includes early contributions from researchers now well established in the field.

Organisation and Memory (PLE: Memory)

A Review and a Project in Subnormality

Edited by Peter Herriot, Josephine M. Green, University of York and Roy McConkey, University of Ulster, UK

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1973, this volume looks at the organisation of memory data in, what at the time was termed, 'mental handicap'. The first part surveys recent work in this important area, giving a general account of experiments and findings. The second part reports a particular piece of research on memory in people with learning difficulties, then called 'subnormal individuals'.

Very much of its time, in terms of the terminology, this was an important book for anyone concerned with people with intellectual disabilities and for experimental psychologists involved with the processes of memory.

Person Memory (PLE: Memory)

The Cognitive Basis of Social Perception

Edited by Reid Hastie, Chicago Booth Graduate School of Business, Thomas M. Ostrom, Ebbe B. Ebbesen, Robert S. Wyer, David L. Hamilton and Donal E. Carlston

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1980, this title came about after many late night discussions between the authors during a 3-week workshop on Mathematical Approaches to Person Perception in 1974. They concluded that an adequate theory of social memory was the necessary foundation for solutions to many questions concerning social perception and judgment that had dominated the workshop. This volume summarizes work conducted between 1974 and 1979 on social memory by these authors.

In addition to six chapters summarizing individual research programs, the volume includes a general introduction and a concluding theoretical integration.

Perspectives on Memory Research (PLE:Memory)

Essays in Honor of Uppsala University's 500th Anniversary

Edited by Lars-Göran Nilsson, Stockholm University

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1979, this book contains papers presented at a conference held in 1977 to celebrate the 500th anniversary of the University of Uppsala. The main reason for this conference was to get students of memory together to discuss and evaluate the memory research that had already been carried out, was presently underway and to speculate about the type of research in this area that would be carried out in the future. With chapters from many of the leading experts in the field this is an opportunity to enjoy some of their early insights.

Processes of Animal Memory (PLE: Memory)

Edited by Douglas L. Medin, Northwestern University, William A. Roberts, University of Western Ontario and Roger T. Davis

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1976, this volume contains new and original contributions of the time addressed to a related set of ideas concerning processes of memory in animals. The theme is that animals remember and that theories of animal learning must take this into account as well as the coding processes that have been assumed to be specific to human beings. This work will be essential reading for all those interested in animal as well as human memory, and provided the most up to date and broadest examination of animal memory processes at the time, from both a theoretical and conceptual framework.

Retrieval and Organizational Strategies in Conceptual Memory (PLE: Memory)

A Computer Model

Janet L. Kolodner, National Science Foundation

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

"Someday we expect that computers will be able to keep us informed about the news. People have imagined being able to ask their home computers questions such as "What's going on in the world?"...". Originally published in 1984, this book is a fascinating look at the world of memory and computers before the internet became the mainstream phenomenon it is today.

It looks at the early development of a computer system that could keep us informed in a way that we now take for granted. Presenting a theory of remembering, based on human information processing, it begins to address many of the hard problems implicated in the quest to make computers remember.

A.H.C. van der Heijden, Leiden University

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

When this title was originally published in 1981, the information processing approach to perception and memory was dominant in experimental psychology, and the research reported here had major implications for future development. After exploring the shortcomings of earlier work in this field, the author develops a new model which he shows to be capable of accounting for a variety of experimental data connected with human information processing, visual perception and attention.

Temporal Codes for Memories (PLE: Memory)

Issues and Problems

Benton J. Underwood

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

First published in 1977, little was known about the accuracy of temporal codes for memories, and still less about the nature of the codes. This volume addresses the central question of the mechanisms by which order information is attached to memories. The results of 16 previously unpublished experiments indicate the role of some independent variables on temporal coding in relatively short-term memory and in long-term memory.

The author advances several theoretical propositions to account for the various findings. In doing so he has given initial structuring for subsequent research to a neglected area. This volume will still be of value to all those interested in learning and memory.

W.R. Bousfield

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1928 this short essay looks two rival theories of the time, both hypothetical, and explores which one 'better fits the facts'.

Whether memory depends on "enduring traces" in brain structure (to use the language of Professor Semon), or whether it depends on records in "psychical structure" (to use the language of Professor McDougall).

The Memory Trace (PLE: Memory)

Its Formation and its Fate

Erich Goldmeier

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

There was some agreement about what memory traces were not, but little about what actually did characterize the memory trace. Yet models and theories of memory at the time could not help making implicit and often unrecognized assumptions about the memory trace. Originally published in 1982, this title aimed to strengthen the meagre base on which memory theories rested at the time. It challenges old assumptions and introduces new concepts, foremost the notion of singularity, as they become necessary to understand traces adequately. Some research data of the past was found in need of reinterpretation. The result is a new theory of the memory trace.

The Processing of Memories (PLE: Memory)

Forgetting and Retention

Norman E. Spear, Binghamton University - SUNY

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1978, this volume contains the evidence that is most crucial for our understanding the processes of forgetting and retention. Organized in terms of problem areas and issues that are particularly pertinent to understanding these processes, the book deals with both animal and human studies. The author begins by defining the topic and reviewing its historical development. A theoretical orientation follows, and then the author begins to address the major factors that determine what is, and what is not, remembered.

The Representation of Meaning in Memory (PLE: Memory)

Walter Kintsch, University of Colorado at Boulder

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

One thing became obvious during the golden age of memory research in the 1960s and 70s: the role of meaning in memory could not be neglected, in spite of the best efforts of Ebbinghaus and his followers. So some researchers decided to focus on meaning in memory, rather than avoid it. This meant the study of text comprehension and memory. This book, originally published in 1974, was one of the early efforts in that direction.

The Science of Memory (PLE: Memory)

David Kay

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

Originally published in 1902, this title was discovered as a manuscript after the author's death and was published 4 years later. David Kay published articles on various subjects and was one of the sub-editors on the eighth edition of Encyclopaedia Britannica. After writing an article on mnemonics he became very interested in the subject of memory. He had already published a title in 1888, Memory: What It Is, and How to Improve It, and this volume was intended to build on that discussion. A great opportunity to read one of the early discussions on human memory.

Working Memory and Severe Learning Difficulties (PLE: Memory)

Charles Hulme, UCL and Susie Mackenzie

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Memory

"Working memory" is a term used to refer to the systems responsible for the temporary storage of information during the performance of cognitive tasks. The efficiency of working memory skills in children may place limitations on the learning and performance of educationally important skills such as reading, language comprehension and arithmetic. Originally published in 1992, this monograph considers the development of working memory skills in children with severe learning difficulties. It is argued that the working memory deficits seen in these people may contribute to their difficulties on other cognitive tasks.

11 Volume Set

Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

Various

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

Reissuing works originally published between 1929 and 1996, Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature offers a selection of scholarship on the genre. Classic previously out-of-print works are brought back into print here in this small set of literary criticism, translation, art and drama. The enduring myth and legend appears from Mediaeval literature through to more modern writings and offers a spectrum of poetry and prose which is studied widely, as exemplified in this set.

Arthurian Legend in the Seventeenth Century

Roberta Florence Brinkley

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

The study of the Arthurian legend in the 1600s has revealed almost no romance; the stories are more about the truth of Arthur's existence and his exploits, with influence due to political bearing of the royalty versus parliament at the time. This fascinating study elucidates the differences between the stories of the seventeenth century and those more well-known now and looks at the development of the literature in line with the political climate and its links with Arthurian prophecy and lineage. Originally published 1932 and again in 1967.

Five Middle English Arthurian Romances

Valerie Krishna

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

The poems in this collection will give the reader an appreciation of both the distinctiveness and the variety of the medieval English Arthurian tradition. The Middle English stories are different in style and structure to the later French romances, composed in poetic forms that derive from native English traditions. Originally published in 1991, the translator gives an introduction to each poem as well as a general introduction to the Arthurian poetic tradition.

Merlin and Legendary Romance

Carol Harding, Western Oregon University, USA

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

An in-depth work on the origins of the Merlin of Arthurian legend, this book examines early texts, thirteenth century romances focusing particularly on Merlin as a character, rather than those where Merlin is a background cast member. The outline here starts with looking at the genre and the place of fantasy, moving on to consider the attitudes towards magic and magic-users in medieval times. Main works considered are Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae and Vita Merlini; the Vulgate cycle, Suite du Merlin; and finally Malory's work. The author asserts that each portrays a different approach to Merlin but all are tied to history and to the Christian religion.

Sir Lancelot of the Lake

A French Prose Romance of the Thirteenth Century

Edited by Lucy Allen Paton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

This translation of Lancelot del Lac was published in 1929 to present easily the essential parts of the history of Sir Lancelot from three thirteenth century romances – Le livre de Lancelot del Lac, Le queste del saint graal, and La mort le roi Artus. The translator summarises the sections not fully translated to link the sections together. This was the first serious attempt to produce a modern English rendering of the French material, as Malory used a relatively small portion of the French trilogy in writing Morte Darthur.

The Arthurian Legend

Comparison of Treatment in Modern and Mediaeval Literature

Margaret J. C. Reid

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

First published in 1938, this study explores the reception of the mythology of King Arthur by modern poets and playwrights. More specifically, the author explores the lineage of the legendary material since the first edition of Malory in 1485, exploring a vast range of artists who have made use of it: Spenser, Milton and Dryden, Wordsworth, Tennyson, Hardy, Matthew Arnold, and even Wagner.

The conclusion is that although the myths have never occupied as central a place as the Classical or Biblical heritage, nonetheless the tales of King Arthur will continue to encapsulate romantic ideals and aspirations.

The Arthurian Revival

Essays on Form, Tradition, and Transformation

Edited by Debra Mancoff

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

Discrete inquiries into 15 forms of the Arthurian legends produced over the last century explore how they have altered the tradition. They consider works from the US and Europe, and those aimed at popular and elite audiences. The overall conclusion is that the "Arthurian revival" is an ongoing event, and has become multivalent, multinational, and multimedia. Originally published in 1992.

The Passing of Arthur

New Essays in Arthurian Tradition

Edited by Christopher Baswell, Barnard College, New York, USA and William Sharpe, Barnard College, New York, USA

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

Originally published in 1988, this volume contains papers from and commissioned after "The Passing of Arthur", a conference on Medieval and Renaissance Studies. No Arthurian story is experienced without some foreknowledge of its end, which the text acknowledges through a complex range of methods. This collection takes this as its point of origin, suggesting that all such narratives concern the passing of Arthur, even indirectly, so the chapters not only look at the death of Arthur but the passing on and development of the Arthurian literature. It presents a wide range of Arthurian studies approaches representing some of the vast scholarship on the genre.

Word and Image in Arthurian Literature

Edited by Keith Busby

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Arthurian Literature

Originally published in 1996, the articles in this book are revised, expanded papers from a session at the 17th International Congress of the Arthurian Society held in 1993. The chapters cover Arthurian studies' directions at the time, showcasing analysis of varied aspects of visual representation and relation to literary themes. Close attention to the historical context is a key feature of this work, investigating the linkage between texts and images in the Middle Ages and beyond.

Richard Garner, Adelphi University

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Homer

The role of poetic allusion in classical Greek poetry, to Homer especially, has often largely been neglected or even almost totally ignored. This book, first published in 1990, clarifies the place of Homer in Greek education, as well as adding to the interpretation of many important tragedies. It will be invaluable to anyone interested in the reception of Homer in the classical age, and to students of comparative literature and linguistic theory.

T. B. L. Webster

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Homer

First published in 1958, this book aims to describe Greek art and poetry within this ambiguous period of ancient history (often referred to as the Greek 'Dark Ages'), and to explore the possibilities of learning about Mycenaean civilisation from its own documents and not only from archaeology. Because they record Mycenaean civilisation in Mycenaean terminology, while Homer was writing in Ionian Greek at the beginning of the polis civilisation, the Homeric epics show how much in Homer is in fact Mycenaean.

Homer and His Critics

John Myres

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Homer

Here is presented a succinct and insightful account of the reception of the Iliad and Odyssey from antiquity to the mid-twentieth century. The overall result is less a systematic history than a series of independent studies differing in scale and focus, the chapter on Gladstone being the most comprehensive and detailed. A valuable contribution to a subject of perennial fascination, this will be of interest to all students and teachers of the classics. First published in 1958.

People and Themes in Homer's Odyssey

Agathe Thornton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Homer

Published in 1970, this important work interprets the poem with a focus on the idiosyncrasies of its originally oral composition. In part I, the main themes of the Odyssey such as 'guest-friendship' and 'testing' are investigated. In Part II, the main characters of the Odyssey are described. In the conclusion, Professor Thornton argues that it would probably have been performed over the course of three days: two sessions each day, with each recitation maintaining its own artistic unity.

A Publisher and his Circle

The Life and Work of John Taylor, Keats' Publisher

Tim Chilcott

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Keats

In the early nineteenth century, the publishing house of Taylor & Hessey brought out the work of Keats, Clare, Hazlitt, De Quincey, Carlyle, Lamb, Coleridge and many more of the most important literary figures of the time, as well as the great literary journal of the period, the London Magazine. Tim Chilcott here examines the life and work of John Taylor, the firm's founder.

The account, originally published in 1972 and incorporating a large amount of hitherto unpublished material, is a fascinating piece of literary, social and publishing history, showing clearly the relationship between the author and his publisher, and in turn between the publisher and the reading public.

Pope, Homer, and Manliness

Some Aspects of Eighteenth Century Classical Learning

Carolyn D. Williams, University of Reading, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Homer

The author here reassesses the concept of 'masculinity', and argues that it cannot be seen as an absolute standard, but only as the product of perpetual conflict between competing and unstable models. She commands a knowledge of classical and early modern literature which has rarely been brought to bear on gender studies. First published in 1993, this book remains a valuable contribution to debates concerning the reception of the Classical tradition.

Introduction to Keats

William Walsh

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Keats

In this introduction to the life and works of John Keats, originally published in 1981, William Walsh presents a comprehensive but approachable study which illuminates first the poems, indirectly the man, and more obliquely the period. Working within a biographical framework, the author looks at Keats from the point of view of the development of his art and sensibility, examining all the major poems and relating them to the letters; reference is made throughout the book to the best contemporary critical writing on the subject and a select bibliography is provided.

The Nightingale and the Hawk

A Psychological Study of Keats' Ode

Katharine M. Wilson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Keats

This book investigates whether Ode to a Nightingale could be interpreted as the record of an actual song that moved Keats so deeply as to involve, in Jung's terms, an experience of the Self. It suggests why he became a poet, shows how his attitude to his poetry changed, how in Jungian terms he first met his 'shadow' then came to accept it, and how this affected his poetry. First published in 1964, the study throws light on themes such as what Keats meant by beauty, his theory of 'negative capability', why he abandoned Hyperion. It gives a fresh interpretation of Endymion and of the two versions of Hyperion, Lamia, the Eve of St Agnes, and the other great odes.

The Stylistic Development of Keats

Walter Jackson Bate

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Keats

This study, first published in 1945, gives a precise description of the unfolding of a great poet's craftsmanship and suggests alignments of the technical progression with the changes of the mind. A classic work from a well-known Keats scholar, this is an important enlightening contribution.

Metrical analysis is given in order to throw light on Keats' general stylistic development using the simplest terminology. Earlier English prosodic writings are referred to throughout in order to place the style and development in the context of the period.

Arranged chronologically, each chapter looks at a particular work or group of works drawing together evidence about Keats' poetic direction.

Export Strategy: Markets and Competition (RLE Marketing)

Nigel Piercy

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

This book offers management students and managers new insights by approaching exporting from the perspective of marketing planning, rather than the mechanics of export practice. The author evaluates the widely recommended strategy of key market concentration, showing its weaknesses and the flaws in the supporting evidence. The book provides the reader with a framework for making an explicit and informed choice between the real market options faced in practical export situations. Closely related to market strategy is the competitive base for a company's exporting, particularly in balancing price and non-price forms of competition, and this is assessed in the second part of the book.

Marketing in Perspective (RLE Marketing)

Simon Majaro

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

This book provides a stimulating perspective on a wide range of important topics and major challenges which confronted marketing management in the 1980s and are still of relevance today. The author applies a critical knowledge of modern theory and practice to pinpoint the crucial importance of three interrelated ingredients – productivity, integration and creativity, for success in an increasingly demanding and cost-effective environment. Each chapter reviews marketing concepts, theories and methods – both recent and well-established and each chapter can be read on its own in response to a specific problem. As well as an extensive bibliography, the volume contains useful case-studies.

Masters of Advertising Copy (RLE Marketing)

Edited by J. George Frederick

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

This book collects together pieces by significant figures in American advertising, including George L. Dyer, who at the time of his death left almost no other written record of his point of view. There is a substantial introduction by the editor, which interweaves the history of advertising with the history of the era of American industrial coming-of-age, touching not only on the impact of mass-production, but also the beginnings of corporate social responsibility.

Organization and Marketing (RLE Marketing)

Peter Spillard

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

Taking as its starting point the nature of marketing tasks, this book draws on organizational theories and makes its own contribution to generate insights and understanding about some of the concerns that need to be dealt with if marketing success is to be achieved. The book surveys developments in the study of organizations, and considers how organizations can be adapted to better serve the needs of marketing.

Strategic Marketing Management (RLE Marketing)

Gordon Foxall

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

This book considers marketing management within the overall corporate system of business policy-making, strategic planning and the implementation and control of effective plans. The information requirements of marketing management are highlighted and the marketing information system concept is developed within the framework of managerial information systems. In the chapters which deal with the elements of the marketing 'mix', the interrelated nature of these variables is emphasized.

The Advertising Agency (RLE Marketing)

Procedure and Practice

Floyd Y. Keeler and Albert E. Haase

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

This book discusses the challenges of running an advertising agency in the early part of the twentieth century and examines the organization and operation of such agencies in great detail. One of the earliest "manuals" on planning and operating an advertising agency, this book was also one of the first to illustrate the vital part that advertising plays in the successful business, using six American advertising agencies as its sources.

The Early Advertising Scene (RLE Marketing)

Harden B. Leachman

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

Few of us realize how many of our modern comforts we owe to advertising. This fascinating volume provides a history of early American advertising, in a pre-regulation age when all manner of schemes thrived in an advertising free-for-all. As well as examining advertising techniques at the turn of the twentieth century the book also discusses practices and conditions in the fields of advertising, newspaper and magazine publishing, manufacturing and merchandising.

The Rise and Fall of Mass Marketing (RLE Marketing)

Edited by Richard S. Tedlow and Geoffrey G. Jones, Harvard Business School, USA

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

This book provides new insights into the changes in interpretation of marketing and the evolution of marketing strategies during the twentieth century. The focus is on the development of mass marketing in the United States and the way in which more flexible and adaptable forms of marketing have increasingly been taking over. This highly international volume draws contributors from the USA, Europe and Japan, and from a variety of academic disciplines, including marketing, economics and business history. Chapters provide detailed analysis of the marketing of a range of products including cars, washing machines, food retailing, Scotch whisky, computers, financial services and wheat.

Tourism Marketing and Management in the Caribbean (RLE Marketing)

Edited by Dennis J. Gayle, American University in the Emirates and Jonathan N. Goodrich

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Marketing

When originally published this volume was the first to provide a comprehensive discussion of tourism in the Caribbean. It begins with an overview of the industry and then examines aspect of tourism marketing and management on a region-by-region basis, covering the Bahamas, Jamaica, Barbados, St Lucia, Trinidad and Tobago, Guyana and Cuba. Detailed analysis follows of sectors within the industry, such as heritage and health care, with central issues such as the intense competition between the cruise ship and hotel industries being highlighted. Discussion of the impact of US and EU policies on Caribbean tourism provides an important international perspective.

Acting Shakespeare

Bertram Leon Joseph

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Shakespeare in Performance

How did the actors for whom Shakespeare wrote his plays make his characters come to life, how did they convey his words? Can modern directors, actors, and even library readers of Shakespeare learn from them?

Starting with how theatrical speech was understood in Renaissance England, this book looks at figures of speech, the powers of persuasion, and the passion and rhythm inherent in the language. With examples and simple exercises, it demonstrates the hard course a modern Shakespearean actor must follow.

Garrick's Folly

The Shakespeare Jubilee of 1769 at Stratford and Drury Lane

Johanne M. Stochholm

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Shakespeare in Performance

This book was originally published in 1964 to coincide with the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth. It describes the great Shakespeare Jubilee festival held at Stratford, under the direction of David Garrick. Immense interest, enthusiasm, and controversy were aroused by the plans for the festival, which involved not only theatrical and rhetorical festivities but fireworks, processions and a horserace. The book looks at its impact on Stratford, its after effects in London, especially theatrical London, and the resounding success at Drury Lane.

On Directing Shakespeare

Ralph Berry

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Shakespeare in Performance

For producers and directors planning a production, several questions inevitably arise: Which play is appropriate for the contemporary audience? Should the text and setting be altered? Twelve leading contemporary directors answer these questions in interviews in this book and shed light on what Shakespeare means to them and to their audiences. Originally published in 1977.

Shakespeare at Work, 1592-1603

G.B. Harrison

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Shakespeare in Performance

Shakespeare against the background of his times, his world of the theatre and his dramatic development through the last years of Elizabeth's reign. Originally published in 1933 and republished in 1958, this great work is an imagining, in plain narrative, of the life of Shakespeare backed with evidence of the history of the stage. Whatever wider significances modern critics distill from Shakespeare's plays, it remains an elementary fact that he wrote plays to interest and entertain his contemporaries and this book takes a look at the immediate interests of his audience and how his work responded to them.

Shakespeare in Performance

Castings and Metamorphoses

Ralph Berry

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Shakespeare in Performance

These studies take stage history as a means of knowing the play. Half of the studies deal with casting - doubling, chorus and the crowd, the star of Hamlet and Measure for Measure. Then the transformations of dramatis personae are analyzed and The Tempest is viewed through the changing relationships of Prospero, Ariel and Caliban. Some of Shakespeare's most original strategies for audience control are studied, such as Cordelia's asides in King Lear, Richard II's subversive laughter and the scenic alternation of pleasure and duty in Henry IV. Performance is the realization of identity. The book draws on major productions up to 1992, just before the book was originally published.

Shakespearean Stage Production

Then and Now

Cécile de Banke

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Shakespeare in Performance

In four sections, Staging, Actors and Acting, Costume, Music and Dance, this handbook traces Shakespearean production from Elizabethan times to the 1950s when the book was originally published. It is an invaluable wealth of research, with extensive bibliographies and extra information. Since the Globe saw the enactment of some of the Bard's greatest dramas, its construction, properties, stage devices, and sound effects are reviewed in detail with suggestions on how a producer can create the same effects on a modern or reconstructed Elizabethan stage. The book also gives descriptions of the men who formed the acting companies of Elizabethan London and of the actors of Shakespeare's own company.

Translation, Poetics, and the Stage

Six French Hamlets

Romy Heylen

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Shakespeare in Performance

This book establishes an analytical model for the description of existing translations in their historical context within a framework suggested by systemic concepts of literature. It proposes a socio-cultural model of translation, taking into account how a translation functions in the receiving culture. The case studies of successive translations of "Hamlet" in France from eighteenth century neoclassical version to 20th-century Lacanian, post-structuralist stage production show the translator at work. Each chapter focuses on a different aspect of the changing theatrical and literary norms to which translators through the ages have been bound by the expectations both of their audiences and the literary establishment.

A Sociological Approach to Social Problems (RLE Social Theory)

Noel Timms

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The topics covered in this book are directly related to much of the misunderstanding of what sociology is about. It is usual nowadays to label as sociological any discussion concerned, however loosely, with 'Society'. But a careful reading of Mr Timms' treatment of the problem areas he has chosen should make clear the difference between this use of the adjective in everyday speech, and its more vigorous technical use. In dealing with his subject Mr Timms makes use of the concepts of sociology such as 'role', 'norms', 'social control', 'class', and 'family'.

Advances in Social Theory and Methodology (RLE Social Theory)

Toward an Integration of Micro- and Macro-Sociologies

Edited by Karin Knorr Cetina and A.V. Cicourel

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

After a period in which sociology was torn apart by the polarized claims of micro- and macro-methodology, an increasing number of sociologists are now attempting a fusion of the two approaches. In this volume, some of the most distinguished sociologists set out possible resolutions of the debate. Each of the chapters, placed in perspective by the editors' prologue, approaches the problem from a unique angle. Contributors include Aaron Cicourel, Randall Collins, Troy Duster, Rom Harré, Anthony Giddens, Gilles Fauconnier, Victor Lidz, Niklas Luhmann, Jürgen Habermas, Michel Callon, Bruno Latour and Pierre Bourdieu.

Agency and Structure (RLE Social Theory)

Reorienting Social Theory

Piotr Sztompka

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

A striking feature of the human condition is its dual, contradictory, inherently split character; on the one hand, autonomy and freedom; on the other, constraint and dependence on social structure. This volume addresses this central problem of the linkage between human action and social structure in sociological and social science theory. Contributions cover several different approaches to the agency-structure problematic, and represent the work of a number of leading international sociologists. Their efforts point to a reorientation of social theory, both on philosophical and methodological levels.

Animals and Society (RLE Social Theory)

The Humanity of Animal Rights

Keith Tester, University of Hull, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Animals and Society uses a variety of historical sources and a coherent social theory to tell the story of the invention of animal rights. It moves from incidents like the medieval execution of pigs to a discussion of the politics and strategies of modern rights organisations. The book also presents radical interpretations of nineteenth-century animal welfare laws, and the accounts of the Noble Savage. This wide-ranging and accessible book provides a fascinating account of the relations between humans and animals. It raises far-reaching questions about the philosophy, history and politics of animal rights.

Approaches to Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

An Introduction to Major Trends in British Sociology

Edited by John Rex

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

These essays, commissioned by John Rex, reflect the state of sociology in Britain today. Leading representatives of the diverse 'schools' provide lucid accounts of their own particular approaches to this complex discipline and in doing so demonstrate the techniques described. Topics covered include the empirical study of stratification, social evolution, survey techniques, mathematical sociology, systems theory, phenomenological approaches, Weberian sociology, structuralism, contemporary Marxism, and the development of theory after Talcott Parsons.

Back to the Future (RLE Social Theory)

Modernity, Postmodernity and Locality

Philip Cooke

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Is modernity being replaced by an opposite culture of postmodernity, or is postmodernism simply an internal critique of modernist culture? This key question is central to this stimulating book which explores the transformations taking place in social life, cultural preferences, economic organization and political attitudes, particularly in the context of the contemporary city as a lived or written experience. The author argues that a whole set of modern institutions, from the corporation to the novel, are being exposed to internal critique and external competition. As a result, new ways of seeing and thinking are moving us into what some observers see as postmodern culture.

Baudrillard (RLE Social Theory)

Critical and Fatal Theory

Mike Gane, Loughborough University, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Baudrillard is widely recognised as a powerful new force in cultural and social criticism, and is often referred to as the 'High Priest of Postmodernism'. This study presents a detached assessment of his social thought and his reputation, challenging the way his work has been received in postmodernism and proposing a new reading of his contribution to social theory. Using many sources currently available only in French, Mike Gane provides the keys to understanding Baudrillard's project and reveals the extent and scope of Baudrillard's challenge to modern social theory and cultural criticism.

Capital, Labour and the Middle Classes (RLE Social Theory)

John Urry, University of Lancaster, UK and Nicholas Abercrombie

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Most recent sociological work on the theory of class is based on a distinction between Weberian and Marxist approaches. For the first part of this volume, the authors use this distinction to review the literature on the middle class, concentrating particularly on the traditions of Marxist theory and of the more empirical work inspired by Max Weber. They show, however, that this distinction is of limited utility in reconstructing a theory of the middle class.

Capitalism, Class Conflict and the New Middle Class (RLE Social Theory)

Bob Carter, University of Leicester, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Non-manual workers are fast becoming the largest occupational category in Western capitalist countries. This is the first book to present a detailed socialist analysis of this change. Focusing on the class position of managerial and supervisory workers, Robert Carter takes as his starting-point the inadequacy of both orthodox Marxist and Weberian models of class relations. Rather, he concurs with recent structuralist theorists of class. He parts company from the work of these theorists, however, in his insistence that the organisation and consciousness of the new middle class have also to be examined because of the practical consequences these have on class relations.

Choice, Rationality and Social Theory (RLE Social Theory)

Barry Hindess, Australian National University, Australia

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This volume is a powerful rebuttal of the remarkably influential theories underlying 'rational choice analysis'. Rational choice analysis maintains that social life is to be explained as the outcome of rational choices on the part of individual actors. The author argues that the theory is seriously deficient because there are important actors other than human individuals, and because it says nothing about those processes of deliberation that inform decisions. These points are established through detailed examination of the concepts of the actor and of rationality – providing an overall argument that constitutes a serious challenge to any adherent of rational choice analysis.

Citizenship and Capitalism (RLE Social Theory)

The Debate over Reformism

Bryan S. Turner

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

In this study of politics in capitalist society Bryan Turner explores the development of citizenship as a way of demonstrating the effective use of political institutions by the working class and other subordinate groups to promote their interests. Marxist criticisms of reformism are rejected; it is shown that subordinate groups can achieve significant advances in social and economic rights, and that democracy is not a sham but a necessary mechanism for the pursuit of interests.

Civil Society (RLE Social Theory)

Keith Tester, University of Hull, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This major study discusses some of the meanings and preconditions of freedom, responsibility and social order. The author argues that these are problems of modernity. The imagination of civil society created a milieu which was at once the location and defence of social self-sufficiency in the world. The book identifies the origins of civil society in the work of Locke, Hobbes, Rousseau and the philosophers of the Scottish Enlightenment. It shows how the assumptions of civil society, and the state of nature, fed into the sociological and philosophical discourses which emerged in the nineteenth century.

Class and Space (RLE Social Theory)

The Making of Urban Society

Edited by Nigel Thrift and Peter Williams

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This book is about the place of space in the study of class formation. It consists of a set of papers that fix on different aspects of the human geography of class formation at different points in the history of Britain and the United States over the course of the last 200 years. The book shows that the geography of class formation is a valuable and cross-disciplinary tool in the study of modern societies, integrating the work of human geographers with that of social historians, sociologists, social anthropologists and other social scientists in an enterprise which emphasises the essential unity of social science.

Classes, Strata and Power (RLE Social Theory)

Włodzimierz Wesolowski and George Kolankiewicz

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Professor Wesolowski presents a detailed study of Marx's theory of class structure and compares it with non-Marxist theories of social stratification, in particular the functionalist theory of stratification and the theory of power elite. The book begins with a thorough and original reconstruction of Marx's theory of class domination in a capitalist society, and goes on to show that contemporary non-Marxist theories of power elites complement rather than contradict Marx's concept of class domination.

Concepts and Society (RLE Social Theory)

Ian C. Jarvie

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The main concern of Dr Jarvie's book is the relation of belief to action. He argues that people act in society because of beliefs, because of 'the way they see things'. There is the world of physical and social conditioning – where fixed roles, tropisms, adaptations operate; there is the world of mind – where action originates; then there is Karl Popper's 'third world' – where dwell the objects of thought (ideals, theories, beliefs, values) which 'directly affect how people act, and thus affect the way the world is'. Reform, change, improvement, modification, all proceed from the competitive interaction between our private beliefs about the world, and their 'third world' brothers.

Conservative Capitalism in Britain and the United States (RLE Social Theory)

A Critical Appraisal

Raymond Plant and Kenneth Hoover

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This volume describes and challenges the ideological basis of the free-market right. The agenda for both right and left is set by the terms of the free-market doctrines that have displaced the post-war consensus politics of liberal capitalism. It provides the first clear account of the distinction between conservative and other forms of capitalism. It also examines the fault lines dividing opposing camps within conservative capitalism and their consequences for domestic policy in Britain and the US. Linking political theory and public policy, it is one of the few critical appraisals of the New Right based on a clear understanding of what the arguments for the free market really are.

Discovering Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

Studies in Sociological Theory and Method

Edited by John Rex

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Professor John Rex was one of Britain's most eminent sociologists, and a teacher of a whole generation of sociology students. In this book he presents a stimulating introduction to the major issues of sociological theory and gives an account of the perspective which has informed his thinking and writing. He deals with the objectives of sociological investigation, the methods it uses and how in these respects it resembles or differs from natural science and history. He goes on to discuss the work of Weber, Durkheim, Marx, Engels, Mills and other important theorists, and concludes with a convincing demonstration of the continuing relevance of the Weberian tradition to the study of sociology.

Dominant Ideologies (RLE Social Theory)

Bryan S. Turner, Nicholas Abercrombie and Stephen Hill

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

In this volume leading international scholars elaborate upon the central issues of the analysis of ideology: the nature of dominant ideologies. The ways in which ideologies are transmitted; their effects on dominant and subordinate social classes in different societies; the contrast between individualistic and collectivist belief systems; and the diversity of cultural forms that coexist within the capitalist form of economic organization. This book is distinctive in its empirical and comparative approach to the study of the economic and cultural basis of social order, and in the wide range of societies that it covers.

Explorations in Structural Analysis (RLE Social Theory)

Dual and Multiple Networks of Social Interaction

Ronald L. Breiger, University of Arizona, USA

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

At a time when most of the innovative techniques in empirical sociology concern themselves with networks of relations among variables (such as indices of occupational prestige, education and income), the central theme of this volume is that there is much substantive insight and analytical leverage to be gained from a conceptualization of social structure directly, as regularities in the patterning of relations among concrete entities. The view adopted here is that variate distributions measure selected consequences of structural pattern (of the actual connections among individuals or organizations) - useful indicators of questions to be asked in analyzing social structures directly.

Field-theory (RLE Social Theory)

A Study of its Application in the Social Sciences

Harald Mey and Douglas Scott

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This is an important account of the development of the 'field-theory' approach in the social sciences. Harald Mey concentrates on the writers from the 1930s to the present day who have used this approach to the study of the individual and of society, and gives a clear exposition of such 'field-theory' application in its many differing forms. In addition, the author shows how a concept which was initially useful in the physical sciences came to be used first by psychologists, and subsequently by sociologists and others in related disciplines, in their search for answers to the problems presented by the study of society.

Founding Theory of American Sociology, 1881-1915 (RLE Social Theory)

Roscoe C. Hinkle

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Based on a comparative study of the theories of such sociologists as Ward, Sumner, Keller, Giddings, Ross, Small and Cooley, this is a systematic and rigorous analysis of the main features of earlier sociological theory in the USA. The author identifies and characterizes the basic assumptions of early American sociological thought in terms of an abstract analytical scheme.

Functionalism, Exchange and Theoretical Strategy (RLE Social Theory)

Michael Mulkay

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

M.J. Mulkay traces the development of certain recent versions of functionalism and exchange theory in sociology, with special attention to 'theoretical strategy'. He uses this term to refer to the policies which theorists adopt to ensure that their work contributes to their long range theoretical objectives. Such strategies are important, he believes, because they place limits on the theories with which they are associated. He shows how each of the theorists he studies devised a new strategy to replace the unsuccessful policies of a prior theory in a process of 'strategical dialectic'.

Henri Saint-Simon, (1760-1825) (RLE Social Theory)

Selected Writings on Science, Industry and Social Organisation

Edited by Keith Taylor and Keith Taylor

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This collection of writings by the French thinker Henri Saint-Simon (1760–1825), including his unpublished manuscripts, are the first comprehensive and truly representative selection in English from the works of this founding father of social science and socialism, whose ideas exerted a formative influence on such major and diverse intellectual figures as Comte, Proudhon, Marx and Engels, Herzen, Carlyle and Durkheim. Taylor's introductory essay places Saint-Simon's writings in their proper historical context, offers a penetrating reassessment of their significance as a contribution to social theory, and considers the extent of their influence on modern thought.

Ideas and Intervention (RLE Social Theory)

Social Theory for Practice

Joe Bailey

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Theorizing in sociology has increasingly become a self-generating and self-fulfilling activity, as sociologists absorb theory as an isolated and formalist part of their discipline. Joe Bailey believes that sociological theory should be a contribution to practical social intervention. He presents a practical view of social theorizing as an activity at which sociologists are skilled and which they could teach to the interventionist professions. The relation between theory and practice is defined as one in which theory guides practice and makes explicit necessary choices. A description of professions is provided as a basis to examine social intervention in law, social work and urban planning.

Ideological Representation and Power in Social Relations (RLE Social Theory)

Literary and Social Theory

Mike Gane, Loughborough University, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This collection reflects the French influence on literary and representational theory which has been predominant in recent years. It contains stimulating essays on the fiction of Perault, Borges, James, Eco and Tournier. These are complemented by theoretical essays on power and representation which provide powerful critiques of Barthes, Derrida, Deleuze and Marin, writers central to the contemporary debate. Finally, two perceptive essays reflect upon and attempt to redirect current theory, drawing on and confronting the writings of Michel Foucault.

Ideology and Social Order (RLE Social Theory)

Eric Carlton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Truly interdisciplinary work between Sociology and History is rare, because one discipline usually exploits the concerns or data of the other. Eric Carlton, however, has succeeded in bringing together the distinctive orientations of sociology and ancient history into a clearly written discussion of concerns crucial to both disciplines. By analysing the societies of Ancient Egypt and Classical Athens in institutional terms, Eric Carlton examines the potency and pervasiveness of the ideological factor and shows that it is a persistent and determinative feature of this type of society.

Intriguingly different in approach from conventional works in the same area of inquiry, this study deals with the central problems and concerns of the sociology of knowledge as it has traditionally been conceived of. In other words, it is concerned with the relationship of knowledge, social interests and social structure, and with the various attempts which have been made to analyse the relationship.

Knowledge and Politics (RLE Social Theory)

The Sociology of Knowledge Dispute

Edited by Volker Meja and Nico Stehr, Zeppelin University, Germany

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Karl Mannheim's Ideology and Utopia has been a profoundly provocative book. The debate about politics and social knowledge that was spawned by its original publication in 1929 attracted the most promising younger scholars, some of whom shaped the thought of several generations. The book became a focus for a debate on the methodological and epistemological problems confronting German social science. Knowledge and Politics provides an introduction to the dispute and reproduces the leading contributions. It sheds new light on one of the greatest controversies that have marked German social science in the past hundred years.

Knowledge and Social Structure (RLE Social Theory)

An Introduction to the Classical Argument in the Sociology of Knowledge

Peter Hamilton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This book presents, elucidates and analyses the developments which have characterized the sociology of knowledge, and which have set for it the outlines of its major problematics. The author examines the most distinctive approaches to the determinate relationship between knowledge and social structure. He considers the three main 'pre-paradigms' of the sociology of knowledge based on the work of Marx, Durkheim and Weber, and looks at the contribution of Scheler, Mannheim and phenomenological studies to this complex field. He explores the intellectual context, particularly that of Enlightenment philosophy, in which the problems involved in producing a sociology of knowledge first came to light.

Levi-Strauss (RLE Social Theory)

Structuralism and Sociological Theory

C.R. Badcock

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

How original is Lévi-Strauss' contribution to social theory? Though Structuralism, and its leading representative Lévi-Strauss, are central to sociology, anthropology and psychology, the complexity of his work and the obscurity of his commentators have often proved a barrier to understanding. Now for the first time, Dr Badcock provides a jargon-free assessment of Lévi-Strauss' place in the tradition of French sociological thought – particularly to predecessors such as Comte, Durkheim and Mauss – discusses his relationship to Marx, Sartre, Freud and Talcott Parsons and provides a concise, non-technical account of his complex ideas on kinship, totemism and myth.

Legitimacy and the Politics of the Knowable (RLE Social Theory)

Edited by Roger Holmes

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Roger Holme's work in social and industrial psychology is widely respected. The theme of this collection of his essays is the relationship of the individual with the formal, value-laden group on the one hand and the scientifically known and the philosophically asserted on the other. Roger Holmes looks at the connexions between these two important relationships and considers them in terms of the interaction between the nature of society and the nature of the knowable. The areas covered include the derivation of social classes, the nature of morale and the emergence of the professions and the trade unions.

Logic and Social Choice (RLE Social Theory)

Yasusuke Murakami

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

How is a social decision made out of individual decisions? This is one of the primary questions in the social sciences. This book provides an answer to the topic by the application of mathematical logic. Murakami formulates social decision-making in logical terms, and shows that an analysis of social decision is equivalent to a logical calculus in many-valued logic. This foundation enables the discussion of the relation between direct democracy and the representative system, a comparison of various rules of election, and the stability of social decision. The conclusion is that paradox is inherent not only in voting and in democracy itself, but also in any piecemeal social decision-making.

Marcuse and Freedom (RLE Social Theory)

Peter Lind

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This comprehensive study of Marcuse's thought concentrates on his theory of freedom, arguing that it is this which supplies the key to all his writings. This argument is substantiated by a detailed chronological examination of Marcuse's works. The author shows the rigorous logic underlying Marcuse's thinking, which is often obscured in Marcuse's own presentation, and pays particular attention to the influence of Heidegger, and of Marx's notion of human labour. This reconstruction of the subject attempts to rescue Marcuse from misunderstanding and superficial criticism, and argues that Marcuse's most famous work, One Dimensional Man, is in fact an aberration from the mainstream of his work.

Matters of Fact (RLE Social Theory)

A Sociological Inquiry

Stanley Raffle

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Facts may seem to be independent, but in this study Stanley Raffle looks at them as expressions of commitment. He looks at the act of 'observation' in many apparently and concretely different places, and analyses the activity of noticing, viewing, recording a spectacle, where what is observed supposedly remains untouched by the observing. Dr Raffle goes on to show that observation, events, records and criteria of assessment such as reliability and completeness lose their status as unexplicated verities and become, instead, decisive and consequential courses of action.

Max Weber's 'Science as a Vocation' (RLE Social Theory)

Edited by Peter Lassman, Irving Velody and Herminio Martins

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Max Weber's lecture 'Science as a Vocation' is a classic of social thought, in which central questions are posed about the nature of social and political thought and action. The lecture has often taken to be a summation of Weber's thought. It can also be argued that, together with the responses of its admirers and critics, it provides a focus for discussion of the nature of modernity and its political consequences, and of the philosophical and political implications of the social or human sciences. This volume provides a full, clear, revised translation of the lecture, together with translations from the German of key contributions to the lively debate that followed its publication.

Meanings and Situations (RLE Social Theory)

Arthur Brittan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Meanings and Situations is an account of the 'interactionist' position. It is a committed account in the sense that it sees the central concerns of social psychology and sociology as being located in an interpretative and humanistic framework. At the same time, it argues for a bio-social image of man which does not do violence to the way in which men in interaction continuously construct and renegotiate 'meaning'. Arthur Brittan believes the new interest is essentially a return to the humanistic sources of these disciplines which have been in constant danger of being overwhelmed by the 'behavioural ideology'.

Men, Masculinities and Social Theory (RLE Social Theory)

Edited by Jeff Hearn and D.H.J. Morgan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This volume presents a series of illustrative and critical perspectives upon the developing study of men and masculinities and its importance for sociological theory. The contributions are organized around the unifying themes of Power and Domination; Sexuality; Identity and Perception. Feminism raised profound questions for sociological theory. The contributors discuss how such questions can be addressed. They demonstrate the range of theoretical traditions that can be brought to bear on the study of men, and underline the importance of understanding 'masculinities' in the plural. In a concluding section, three different views upon the controversy surrounding 'Men's Studies' are presented.

Origin and Significance of the Frankfurt School (RLE Social Theory)

A Marxist Perspective

Phil Slater

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The term 'Frankfurt School' is used widely, but sometimes loosely, to describe both a group of intellectuals and a specific social theory. Focusing on the formative and most radical years of the Frankfurt School, during the 1930s, this study concentrates on the Frankfurt School's most original contributions made to the work on a 'critical theory of society' by the philosophers Max Horkheimer and Herbert Marcuse, the psychologist Erich Fromm, and the aesthetician Theodor W. Adorno. Phil Slater traces the extent, and ultimate limits, of the Frankfurt School's professed relation to the Marxian critique of political economy.

Pattern and Meaning in History (RLE Social Theory)

Wilhelm Dilthey's Thoughts on History and Society

Edited by H.P. Rickman

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

'One may state Dilthey's significance in most general fashion by characterizing his work as the first thorough-going and sophisticated confrontation of history with positivism and natural science. Dilthey's sweep was universal: he strove to reduce to order the multifarious realms of knowledge, the conflicting traditions of cultural study, that he had embraced. ... And the contemporary tradition of intellectual history grew naturally out of Dilthey's teaching.' – H. Stuart Hughes

Philosophical Foundations of the Three Sociologies (RLE Social Theory)

Ted Benton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

An extended historical and philosophical argument, this book discusses the serious alternatives to positivist and empiricist accounts of the physical sciences, and poses the debate between naturalism and anti-naturalism in the social sciences in new terms. Recent materialist and realist philosophies of science make possible a defence of naturalism which does not make concessions to positivism and which recognizes the force of several of the anti-positivist arguments from the main anti-naturalist (neo-Kantian) tradition.

Positivism and Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

Explaining Social Life

Peter Halfpenny

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

In order to provide a clear basis from which to assess controversial questions about the contribution of the positivist traditions to sociology, the book reviews twelve different important uses of the term 'positivism' that have emerged at different times since the mid-nineteenth century, when Auguste Comte coined both 'positivism' and 'sociology'. This review is conducted by examining the historical development of the two independent roots of modern sociological positivism – positivist philosophy and statistics – and by analysing logical positivist philosophy, which in many ways defined the course of twentieth century philosophy of the social (as well as the natural) sciences.

R.D. Laing: His Work and its Relevance for Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

Martin Howarth-Williams

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This study, by a sociologist, provides the most rigorous and comprehensive review to appear so far of R. D. Laing's work and theoretical development. Martin Howarth-Williams considers that Laing's insights into such controversial issues as the divided self and the politics of the family are of an importance that transcends their basis in clinical psychiatry and that they have a special significance for sociology. Howarth-Williams isolates the concept of 'Intelligibility', which he shows to be central to Laing's theory and shows how this can be used as the basis for a critique of recent developments in sociological theory as well as a starting point towards a genuinely dialectical sociology.

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The concepts of rationality that are used by social scientists in the formation of hypotheses, models and explanations are explored in this collection of original papers by a number of distinguished philosophers and social scientists. The aim of the book is to display the variety of the concepts used, to show the different roles they play in theories of very different kinds over a wide range of disciplines, including economics, sociology, psychology, political science and anthropology, and to assess the explanatory and predictive power that a theory can draw from such concepts.

Reason and Freedom in Sociological Thought (RLE Social Theory)

Frank Hearn

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

How has reason, believed since the Enlightenment to be the ally of freedom in the search for a better, more humanly satisfying world, been reduced to a technical rationality that has actually impoverished the bases of human freedom? What might be the options and obligations for sociologists who wish to restore reason to its proper status? Working within the tradition of C. Wright Mills and Jurgen Habermas, Frank Hearn sets out to answer these questions.

Sceptical Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

John Carroll

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Sceptical Sociology examines where sociology went wrong, and what ought to be done to transform it into a worthwhile enterprise. In studies of contemporary Western society, the author puts into practice the principles of a 'sceptical sociology'. There are enquiries into the cleanliness compulsion among housewives, the conflicting dream and reality of the tourist, the moral centrality of the car, the tactics of the latest shopping palaces. There is an allegory on fur hats, a dark portrait of a typical modern marriage, a putting of intellectuals in their place, and a pursuit of the sociology of space through the universal longing for home.

Science and the Sociology of Knowledge (RLE Social Theory)

Michael Mulkey

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

How far is scientific knowledge a product of social life? In addressing this question, the major contributors to the sociology of knowledge have agreed that the conclusions of science are dependent on social action only in a very special and limited sense. In this book Michael Mulkey's first aim is to identify the philosophical assumptions which have led to this view of science as special; and to present a systematic critique of the standard philosophical account of science, showing that there are no valid epistemological grounds for excluding scientific knowledge from the scope of sociological analysis.

Social Forms/Human Capacities (RLE Social Theory)

Essays in Authority and Difference

Philip Corrigan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This is an exhilarating book, written by one of sociology's most imaginative theorists and critics. Professor Corrigan proceeds by turning old answers into new questions. He draws on a rich tradition of thought from sociology, philosophy, structuralism, post-structuralism, and literary criticism to explore major ongoing problems in everyday life: moral regulation, schooling, the capitalist world economy, intellectuals, and the problem of difference, masculinity. The result is one of the most dazzling contributions to critical sociology published in recent years.

Social Philosophy (RLE Social Theory)

Hans Fink

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Social philosophy concerns the fundamental issues on which political programmes divide. This introductory work gives an account of several highly influential systems of social philosophy – systems which serve as the landmarks by reference to which modern discussions still orientate themselves. The description of various stages in the history of social philosophy is set within an account of its changing social environment – from feudalism and the philosophy of Aquinas to the rise of the working class and socialism. The book confines itself to the Western tradition and charts the rise and fall of the free market as the central institution and the key to the understanding of society.

Social Theory and Christian Thought (RLE Social Theory)

A study of some points of contact. Collected essays around a central theme

Werner Stark

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Almost all the great religious thinkers of the past have developed a social as well as theological doctrine, but their sociology was as a rule merely implicit in their work or at best half formulated so that careful study and analysis is needed to bring it out. This is the task which Dr. Stark has set himself in the present essays. He has searched the writings of St. Augustine, Pascal, Newman and Kierkegaard for the sociological ideas they contain and shows that their social philosophies were varied, profound, fascinating and surprisingly definite.

Social Theory and Political Practice (RLE Social Theory)

Brian C. Fay

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This book examines the question of how our knowledge of social life affects, and ought to affect, our way of living it. In so doing, it critically discusses two epistemological models of social science – the positivist and the interpretive – from the viewpoint of the political theories which, it is argued, are implicit in these models; moreover, it proposes a third model – the critical – which is organised around an explicit account of the relation between social theory and practical life. This a good overview of the principal ideas about the relation between social theory and political practice, as well as an attempt at providing a new, more satisfactory account of this relationship.

Social Theory and the Family (RLE Social Theory)

D.H.J. Morgan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

An experienced teacher of courses on the sociology of the family, D.H.J. Morgan frequently encounters a gulf between 'the family' as it is often treated in sociological texts and 'the family' as it is usually experienced. In this book he provides an extremely valuable bridge between the two by presenting an encounter between some of the mainstream theoretical approaches and concerns in the sociology of the family and what he terms as 'critical' perspectives on the family. This is the first British book on a basic social institution that takes into account the literature outside the mainstream of sociological analysis that deals with the subject.

Sociological Theory (RLE Social Theory)

Pretence and Possibility

Keith Dixon

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Most professional sociologists claim that sociology is, or ought to be, a theoretical science. Keith Dixon argues here that this claim is formulated in such a way that a proper evaluation of its status is extremely difficult, and that the contingent objections to the possibility of sociological theorizing are sufficiently strong for such activity to be labelled as pretence. He believes that pretence to the theoretical is a hindrance to the development of sociology proper.

Sociological Theory in Transition (RLE Social Theory)

Edited by Mark L. Wardell and Stephen P. Turner

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Current sociological theories appear to have lost their general persuasiveness in part because, unlike the theories of the 'classical era', they fail to maintain an integrated stance toward society, and the practical role that sociology plays in society. The authors explore various facets of this failure and possibilities for reconstructing sociological theories as integrated wholes capable of conveying a moral and political immediacy. They discuss the evolution of several concepts (eg, the social, structure, and self) and address the significant disputes (eg, structuralism versus humanism, and individual versus society) that have dominated twentieth-century sociological thought.

Sociological Theory in Use (RLE Social Theory)

Kenneth Menzies

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Central to most sociologists' self-image is the claim that their theories are based on research. However, using a random sample of 680 articles appearing in major American, British and Canadian journals, Dr Menzies shows that in some areas of sociology the wide gap between theory and research means that much of sociological theory is virtually untested. He explains how theory is embodied in eight particular types of research, critically examines these research theories, and contrasts them with the positions of modern theorists. The sample of journal articles also permits a comparison of British, American and Canadian sociology.

Sociology and History (RLE Social Theory)

Peter Burke

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Sociologists and historians are not always the best of neighbours, each group tending to perceive the other in terms of the crudest of stereotypes. However, the two approaches are obviously complementary – change is structured, and structures change. Each discipline can free the other from its own kind of parochialism and the aim of this book is to bridge the gap between these two subcultures, to give historians a more acute sense of structure and sociologists a more acute sense of change.

Sociology and Social Research (RLE Social Theory)

Geoff Payne, Robert Dingwall, Judy Payne and Mick Carter

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

A social science which has become so remote from the society which pays for its upkeep is ultimately doomed. This is the message in this reassessment of the evolution and present state of British sociology. Their investigation analyses the discipline as a social institution, whose product is shaped by the everyday circumstances of its producers; it is the concrete outcome of people's work, rather than a body of abstract ideas. The authors suggest changes in sociological research, the way in which it is carried out and the conditions under which it is undertaken. Their book is a timely warning to fellow sociologists when the profession is under attack as a result of public expenditure cuts.

Sociology and the Demystification of the Modern World (RLE Social Theory)

Edited by John Rex

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Professor Rex's controversial book concerns not only those who are professional sociologists but all thinking people who live in the modern world. One of the objects of sociology is to give 'power to the people', to make a contribution to the understanding of political problems. Rex writes from a deep conviction that sociology is a subject whose insights should be made available to the great mass of the people, so that they may liberate themselves from the mystification of social reality that is continually and routinely presented to them through the media, by those who exercise power and by those who have influence.

Sovereign Individuals of Capitalism (RLE Social Theory)

Bryan S. Turner, Nicholas Abercrombie and Stephen Hill

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The authors confront a central assumption of western culture: that the individual is sovereign, and that capitalism above all other economic forms depends on individualism. The paradox of the modern world is that the moral emphasis on the individual is contradicted by the actual organization of economy and society. They argue individualism and capitalism have no necessary relationship. Their linkage is entirely accidental, confined to one historical period. Against the background of what they term the Discovery of the Individual, the authors show how individualism gave capitalism a particular shape, and capitalism in turn highlighted the possessive features of the individual.

Structuralist Analysis in Contemporary Social Thought (RLE Social Theory)

A Comparison of the Theories of Claude Lévi-Strauss and Louis Althusser
Miriam Glucksmann

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The primary concern of this book is to investigate whether or not structuralism constitutes a distinctive framework in the social sciences. The author focuses on two major structuralist thinkers, Louis Althusser and Claude Lévi-Strauss. She analyses and compares the structure of their theory, and places them within the context of their respective disciplines. Dr Glucksmann began working on this book at a time when structuralism was at the height of its popularity in France, and was thought to be a homogenous alternative to bourgeois sociology. The progress of her study implicitly reflects the developments and divergences within structuralist thought that have emerged since then.

Structure, Interaction and Social Theory (RLE Social Theory)

Derek Layder

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

A central problem in contemporary social theory is that of providing an account of social interaction that does justice both to the self-monitoring capacities of the individuals involved and to the society that 'frames' the interaction. This book attempts to resolve this problem, arguing for an objectivist or 'structuralist' account which does not undervalue the importance of the indexical and negotiated aspects of interaction, and which takes seriously the Marxist-rationalist critique of empiricism and humanism and the associated idea that society should be treated as a supra-individual, preconstituted and constraining object of scientific analysis.

Studies in Social and Political Theory (RLE Social Theory)

Anthony Giddens

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The studies which comprise this book are essentially organized around a critical encounter with European social theory in its 'classical period' – i.e. from the middle years of the nineteenth century until the First World War – and have the aim of working out some of the implications of that encounter for the position and prospects of the social sciences today. The issues involved relate to the following series of problems: method and epistemology; social development and transformation; the origins of 'sociology' in nineteenth-century social theory; and the status of social science as critique.

Symbolic Interactionism (RLE Social Theory)

Genesis, Varieties and Criticism

Bernard N. Meltzer, John W. Petras and Larry T. Reynolds

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Symbolic interactionism is of major importance in contemporary sociology. In this study, three authorities in the field collaborate to define symbolic interactionism and to describe, and present criticism of, the interactionist perspective. The contributions of G.H. Mead, J. Dewey, C.H. Cooley, W.I. Thomas and other theorists to the interactionist viewpoint on human behaviour and social life are examined. There is a systematic discussion of the diverse schools of thought within the field. Criticisms of symbolic interactionism by both adherents and opponents to the perspective are selected and assessed. Throughout, the authors survey the social and intellectual sources of significant ideas.

Talcott Parsons and the Conceptual Dilemma (RLE Social Theory)

Hans P.M. Adriaansens

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This systematic analysis of the nature and development of Talcott Parson's theory of action offers first an introduction to the conceptual paradigm upon which this theory is based – an introduction, that is, which will make Parson's writing more easily accessible. Second, the book gives an explanation of the development which the action theory has undergone during the half-century of Parson's career. Using a scheme of four theory-levels, the author indicates the crucial premises that can be distilled from Parson's early works. He argues that Parson, from the very start of his career, was trying to translate abstract premises into a systematically constructed conceptual scheme.

Talcott Parsons and the Social Image of Man (RLE Social Theory)

Ken Menzies

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This account of Talcott Parson's work clarifies his basic concepts and sets out their correlation. Dr Menzies believes that the philosophy of science working within the confines of the analytic-synthetic distinction tends to provide a rigid, static and sterile account of theories. He presents a more dynamic account of the scientific enterprise in order to come to grips with the amorphous nature of theory, and to provide the basic framework for his analysis of Parson's. Two major strands in Parson's work – the social action theory and the systems theory (structural-functionalism) – are separated and examined individually.

They develop a mature and original perspective on Parson as the only classical theorist who avoided crippling nostalgia. Holton and Turner not only talk about Parsonian sociology in a profound and insightful way, they do it, and do it well. As sociology moves away from the rigid dichotomies of earlier debate, this book will help point the way.' – Jeffrey Alexander, Professor and Director of Graduate Studies in Sociology, UCLA

Testament for Social Science (RLE Social Theory)

An Essay in the Application of Scientific Method to Human Problems

Barbara Wootton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The contrast between man's ability to manipulate his world and his incompetence in managing his own affairs is now as commonplace as it is tragic. It is by devotion to science that we have made our conquests over the material environment; it is obvious that this method is not normally applied to the field of relations of human beings, individual and collective. In these science plays little part; yet more than a century has passed since Auguste Comte said that the rational reform of society must be brought about by the application of scientific method to social problems. It is, therefore, the first purpose of this essay to ask how far social problems might be tackled by the methods of science.

The Essential Comte (RLE Social Theory)

Selected from 'Cours de philosophie positive' by Auguste Comte

Edited by Stanislav Andreski and Margaret Clarke

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Auguste Comte proclaimed himself the founder of sociology and, on the whole, this claim is accepted. His most important work is the six-volume Cours de Philosophie Positive of which this present book is a selective abridgement. Comte, as this selection shows, was a methodological visionary. He was an eminently successful terminological innovator and to him we owe not only 'sociology' and 'positivism' but also 'biology' and 'altruism'. Professor Andreski, in his lucid introduction, assesses Comte's place under six headings, as scientist, philosopher, sociological theorist, sociological historian, reformer and methodologist.

The Family, Politics, and Social Theory (RLE Social Theory)

D.H.J. Morgan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This book explores and clarifies all the major issues and developments within 'family theorising'. It covers the extraordinary growth and variety of approaches to the family over the last decade, the most significant being the impact of feminism and the professional and state intervention into the family through marital and family therapy. The author focuses on the growth of family counselling, giving a detailed analysis of the Home Office publication, Marriage Matters. He looks at the rapid growth of historical studies of the family, European theoretical developments, the work of the Rapoport, the role of systems theorising, and phenomenological and critical approaches to the family.

The Flâneur (RLE Social Theory)

Keith Tester, University of Hull, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Timely and original, this collection of essays from the leading figures in their fields throws new and valuable light on the significance and future of flânerie. The flâneur is usually identified as the 'man of the crowd' of Edgar Allan Poe and Charles Baudelaire, and as one of the heroes of Walter Benjamin's Arcades Project. The flâneur's activities of strolling and loitering are mentioned increasingly frequently in sociology, cultural studies and art history, but rarely is the debate developed further. The Flâneur is the first book to develop the debate beyond Baudelaire and Benjamin, and to push it in unexpected and exciting directions.

The Hermeneutic Imagination (RLE Social Theory)

Outline of a Positive Critique of Scientism and Sociology

Josef Bleicher

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Dr Bleicher examines the various approaches to sociology – empiricist, functionalist, structuralist, interpretive, critical – by reference to a hermeneutic paradigm, and shows how the hermeneutic imagination leads to a redirection in sociology, away from scientific presuppositions and towards an awareness of the dialogue which links the subject and object in the study of social phenomena. He argues that by allowing the hermeneutic imagination to develop, it is possible to counter the steering of social processes on the basis of technocratic imperatives, and to provide a rational anticipation of a better future.

The Normative Structure of Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

Conservative and Emancipatory Themes in Social Thought

Hermann Strasser

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

In this provocative analysis of the central issues and developments in modern social theory, Dr Strasser contends that enquiry into the function, tasks and mission of sociology as a discipline can be understood only in relation to the subject's historical development. He believes that a discussion of the origin and intention of sociology, particularly in relation to the established social order, enables us to grasp fully the nature of sociological theory, both past and present. He maintains that a sociologist's own position in society, and consequently his views on its development and his way of expressing those views, will affect the theoretical position he takes up.

The Person in the Sight of Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

Colin Fletcher

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Sociology is about society, but what about people? The person in the sight of sociology is all too often a matchstick being. In this original and stimulating book the person is characterized by what is inherent in a social being, and the result is a rich narrative, the story of the person told through events in life. It may be claimed that Colin Fletcher has created a new realm of theorizing and a piece of literature for sociology. And, perhaps as important, the reader may catch the rare experience of being spoken with as a person by another person.

The Personal and the Political (RLE Social Theory)

Social Work and Political Action

Paul Halmos

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Are human misery, poverty and despair a result of personal inadequacy or social injustice? Therefore is the solution to these problems psychotherapy or political action? In one of the most important books on social work for a decade, Paul Halmos tries to resolve a dilemma which many social workers experience acutely – the conflict between a desire to help those in need and a fear that, by doing so, they merely support a political system which should, itself, be changed. He argues that social action can become political action and ultimately political control.

The Rational and the Social (RLE Social Theory)

How to Understand Science in a Social World

James Robert Brown, University of Toronto, Canada

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

To paraphrase Marx, sociologists have only interpreted science; the point is to improve it. The Rational and the Social attempts both. The author argues that although sociological accounts are valuable in many respects, when morals are drawn about the structure and epistemology of science, they are badly flawed. In rejecting the sociological theory of science, it is not necessary to conclude that science develops without reference to the social. James Robert Brown argues for an alternative account. He proposes a novel way of viewing the history of science as a source of evidence for how to do good science and argues that the most important aspect of methodology is that it is comparative.

The Science of Society (RLE Social Theory)

An Introduction to Sociology

Stephen Frederick Cotgrove

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Two main criteria have guided the selection and presentation of the material for this text-book. Firstly, there is the claim that sociology is a science. Throughout, the emphasis has been on presenting sociological perspectives rather than conveying a mass of factual information. Science is essentially analytical. And sociology, if it is to justify its claim to be a science, must be more than simply 'political arithmetic', counting heads and providing demographic data for governments. Secondly, science, like other intellectual activities, can be exciting.

The Scope of Understanding in Sociology (RLE Social Theory)

Werner Pelz

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This book asks: what does understanding denote in an area where man tries to understand man, where self-understanding is involved, where new understanding immediately becomes part of that which is to be understood? What can we know and what is the use and limitation of knowledge in sociology? When are we conscious that we know and understand? Werner Pelz argues for a thorough reorientation in our approach to sociological thinking, and suggests that scientific preconceptions have often precluded possibly fruitful approaches to humane understanding.

The Shaping of Socio-Economic Systems (RLE Social Theory)

The application of the theory of actor-system dynamics to conflict, social power, and institutional innovation in economic life

Thomas Baumgartner, Tom R. Burns and Philippe DeVille

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

This book applies the methodology of actor-system dynamics to the complex interplay between economic and socio-political institutions and to the conflict over economic resources and systems. By Recognizing the various forces that motivate people and organizations to act and interact, the authors are able to analyze contemporary problems and offer practical new ways of dealing with critical socio-economic issues.

The Sociology of Karl Mannheim (RLE Social Theory)

With a Bibliographical Guide to the Sociology of Knowledge, Ideological Analysis, and Social Planning

Gunter Werner Remmling

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

Karl Mannheim (1893-1947) occupies a prominent position among the leading social scientists of the twentieth century; his ideas and his books are relevant for many issues engaging the concern of sociologists today. Mannheim's life spanned three cultural traditions – Hungarian, German and British – and in this authoritative study Professor Remmling covers all these phases in his life and work. In tracing these development in Karl Mannheim's work, Gunter Remmling provides insights into major theoretical and practical issues of the first half of the twentieth century, problems which remain central to the modern experience.

The Study of Society (RLE Social Theory)

Methods and Problems

Edited by F.C. Bartlett

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

There is today widespread recognition of the fact that the future of human civilization depends to a high degree upon Man's capacity to understand the forces and factors which control his own behaviour. Such understanding must be achieved, not only as regards individual conduct, but equally as regards the mass phenomena resulting from group contacts, which are becoming increasingly intimate and influential. Until this present volume, nowhere have the three sciences of sociology, psychology and social anthropology been properly mobilized to deal with the social problems which yearly grow more pressing. The essays in this book aim to address this.

The Study of Society (RLE Social Theory)

Kathleen Joan Heasman

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

In this book, Dr Heasman begins by stating some central questions and answers concerning sociology and how we are to set about studying society. It goes on to deal with family groupings and social differences; with education and the part it plays in socialization; with the meaning and the importance of social differences; and with the relative importance of work and leisure and the ways in which leisure can be used. It considers the effects of the change in the size of the population in the last hundred years upon social life in Britain, examines the problems of social change and looks at order in society and the way it is affected by different forms and aspects of government.

Theories of Industrial Society (RLE Social Theory)

Richard Badham

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The concept of industrial society plays a dominant role in the social sciences. The 'Great Divide' between pre-industrial and industrial societies is commonly assumed to be the main bridge separating modern societies from the past, and distinguishing 'developed' from 'undeveloped' states in the present era. In history, economics, politics and sociology the concept of industrial society underlies a wide variety of discussions, particularly those relating to economic development and social progress. This book examines critically the concept of industrial society, its pervasiveness and influence.

Towards the Sociology of Knowledge (RLE Social Theory)

Origin and Development of a Sociological Thought Style

Edited by Gunter Werner Remmling

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The sociology of knowledge is an area of social scientific investigation with major emphasis on the relations between social life and intellectual activity. It is now an area central to most graduate and undergraduate courses in sociology. The present collection of readings explains the origins, systematic development, present state and possible future direction of the discipline. The major statements in the field were developed early in the twentieth century by Durkheim, Scheler and Mannheim, but the sociology of knowledge continues to engage the theoretical and empirical interests of contemporary sociologists who desire to penetrate the surface level of social existence.

Value Theory in Philosophy and Social Science (RLE Social Theory)

Ervin Laszlo and James B. Wilbur

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Social Theory

The annual Conferences on Value Inquiry bring together philosophers, scientists and humanists to discuss the many facets of the problem of value in the experience of the individual and in contemporary society. One of the criteria in choosing papers for the Conference is the ability to stimulate discussion and clarification. The papers in the present volumes show deep concern with the problems and responsibilities in making choices of value.

Class, Race and Sport in South Africa's Political Economy (RLE Sports Studies)

Grant Jarvie, University of Edinburgh, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

This book examines the increasingly complex issue of race, class and sport in the context of South African social relations. The author disputes evaluations made purely on the question of race, maintaining that it is important to examine the complex interaction between racial and class dynamics as a background for understanding the South African way of life. The book demonstrates that sport must be understood in the context of the ensemble of social relations characterizing the South African social formation. The book is as relevant now as it was when first published, especially in the light of Nelson Mandela's social and political legacy and his influence on South Africa sport.

The 1932-33 Bodyline Tour of Australia

Ric Sissons and Brian Stoddart

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

A great depression, worsening Anglo-Australian relations, the declining British Empire and the challenge from an Australia striving to find a national identity are the context which explain bodyline and its repercussions. Bodyline was a watershed in the history of cricket and politics was publicly seen as part of sport. This book offers a radical reappraisal of bodyline which challenges the official interpretations of the events, and places them in a unique social and political context.

Myth and Reality in Sport

Eric Midwinter

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

This volume examines modern sport in its social context and concludes that it is beset with over-commercialised motives, damaged by dangerous political alignments and marred by wrongheaded social values. The book provides a thought-provoking analysis and offers new insights into why and how modern sport has evolved into its present dominant position. It calls for radical reforms in the structure of, and attitudes towards, sport.

Hooligans Abroad (RLE Sports Studies)

The Behaviour and Control of English Fans in Continental Europe

John M. Williams, Eric Dunning and Patrick J. Murphy

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

This book traces international developments in the hooligan phenomenon since the Heysel tragedy of 1985. The authors make special reference to the troubled European championships in West Germany in 1988 and look critically at political responses to the problem. The authors used 'participant observation' in their research on British fans at the World Cup in Spain, and at matches in Rotterdam and Copenhagen, and capture the authentic voice of football hooliganism in their interviews.

Sport and the Physical Emancipation of English Women (RLE Sports Studies)

1870-1914

Kathleen McCrone

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

The latter part of the 19th century saw a significant participation in sports by women, and this book provides the first overall examination of this early development and the social changes that it helped to bring about. The book begins with an account of sports at the Oxbridge women's colleges, at the girls' public schools and at the new women's physical training colleges. It then examines team sports such as hockey, lacrosse, and cricket and individual sports such as tennis, golf and cycling. Other chapters discuss the medical attitudes and prejudices toward women's participation in sports and the role of sports in changing female dress.

Sport, Leisure and Social Relations (RLE Sports Studies)

Edited by John Horne, University of Central Lancashire, UK, David Jary and Alan Tomlinson, University of Brighton, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

When this book was first published the study of sport had been largely neglected by sociologists. The contributions to this volume bring the sports field, the leisure centre and everyday leisure activities to a more central position within the sociological enterprise. Whether amateur or professional, sport contributes to wider relations of power, privilege and domination and this debate represents an important phase in the sociology of sport and leisure.

The Government and Politics of Sport (RLE Sports Studies)

Barrie Houlihan, Loughborough University, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

When originally published in 1991 this was the first book to tackle the UK policy process of sport and to provide a political science analysis of some of the key issues facing sports administrators today. The volume identifies the parties involved: central government, local government, the Sports Council, the Central Council of Physical Recreation, and the individual sports governing bodies. It examines their effect on sport's policy and administration through an analysis of three important current sport issues – football hooliganism, drug abuse among athletes and sport opportunities and facilities for school children.

The Roots of Football Hooliganism (RLE Sports Studies)

An Historical and Sociological Study

Eric Dunning, Patrick J. Murphy and John Williams

Series: Routledge Library Editions Sports Studies

This systematic historical and sociological study of the phenomenon of football hooliganism examines the history of crowd disorderliness at association football matches in Britain and assesses both popular and academic explanations of the problem. The authors' study starts in the 1880s, when professional football first emerged in its modern form, charting the pre and inter-war periods and revealing that England's World Cup triumph formed a watershed. The changing social composition of football crowds and the changing class structure of British society is discussed and the genesis of modern football hooliganism is explained.

American Newsfilm 1914-1919 (RLE The First World War)

The Underexposed War

David H. Mould

Series: Routledge Library Editions: The First World War

The First World War was the first conflict in which film became a significant instrument of propaganda. For the US, the war had two phases: until April 1917, America was officially a neutral country; after April 1917 the US was in the war, providing men, money and munitions. These two phases are mirrored in the newsreels and documentary films shown in the US. This volume starts by examining the background to the war for the movie industry – the coverage of previous conflicts. It examines the experiences of American cameramen who worked in the war zone: their efforts to gain access to the front, to overcome problems ranging from unreliable equipment to methods to evade censorship.

Britain and the First World War (RLE The First World War)

Edited by John Turner

Series: Routledge Library Editions: The First World War

This book gives students an informed insight into the British experience in the First World War. The contributors, all established First World War historians, give a succinct account of politics, diplomacy, strategy and social developments during a period of dramatic change. Each chapter gives a concise account of its subject and the chapters are well supported by maps and tables. This is an important textbook for school students and undergraduates which bridges the gap between specialized research on the First World War and the needs of the student reader.

British Agriculture in the First World War (RLE The First World War)

Peter Dewey

Series: Routledge Library Editions: The First World War

This volume comprehensively describes how British farmers coped with the problems of shortage of labour and other factors of production, as well as assessing how well agriculture performed as a supplier of food to the nation. Use of previously neglected records provides much evidence on issues such as the deployment of substitute labour and the introduction of the tractor into British farming for the first time. Challenging accepted view on the period, the author shows that shortages of labour and other factors of production had only a slight effect on farm output and the national food supply.

Ron Carden

Series: Routledge Library Editions: The First World War

This volume describes and analyses the methods Germany used to reinforce Spain's independence thereby preventing Madrid's entry into the war on the Allied side. While there have been many studies dealing with the wartime economic histories of Holland, Switzerland, Denmark and Iceland, Spain, physically large and strategically situated has been largely ignored, with little American study of Spanish relations with the European belligerents. Particular attention is paid to the forceful personality of Spanish King Alfonso XIII, who shrewdly used his special friendship with Kaiser Wilhelm II for Spanish profit.

The Political and Social Thought of F.M. Dostoevsky

Stephen Kirby Carter

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Tolstoy and Dostoevsky

First published in 1991, this study concentrates on The Devils, but also places this novel in the total context of Dostoevsky's work. Also considered is T.N. Granovsky, who is satirised along with Turgenev in the novel. Carter concludes that Dostoevsky badly misunderstood Western liberalism, but grappled very well with the psychology of the radical terrorist. This is explained with reference to his intellectual revolution beginning in the 1840s.

Tolstoi: The Teacher

Charles-Baudouin

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Tolstoy and Dostoevsky

The author states here that Tolstoy was a great educator and his views on education were ingenious and profound. Despite being a great artist, Tolstoy also had pedagogic method and drew abundantly on the stores of science. The book looks at articles which Tolstoy wrote on education and childhood, comparing him frequently to Rousseau, and also outlines the influences of his travels which informed his knowledge of contemporary schooling. The conclusion considers the development of Tolstoy's thought on teaching alongside the state of education at the time the book was first published, in 1923. This will be of interest for the educational historian as well as those interested in Tolstoy himself.

Janko Lavrin

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Tolstoy and Dostoevsky

This volume contains two concise works by the innovative twentieth-century literary critic Janko Lavrin. Tolstoy: An Approach, first published in 1944, seeks to discern the relationship between Tolstoy the novelist and Tolstoy the religious pseudo-prophet. In Dostoevsky: A Study, published first in 1943, Lavrin explores one of the most enigmatic writers in terms of the inter-connections between his life, thought, relationships, writing, and the socio-cultural circumstances in which he found himself.

Tolstoy's 'What is Art?'

Terry Diffey

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Tolstoy and Dostoevsky

With its demand that works of art be judged according to their morally didactic content, Tolstoy's reviled aesthetics has seemed to exclude from the canon far too many works widely accepted as masterpieces. First published in 1985, this study argues that these are not mere oversights on the part of Tolstoy, and contends that, even if we eventually reject much of what Tolstoy concludes, his account of the nature and purpose of art is nevertheless worth consideration.

4 Volume Set

The Uttal Tetralogy of Cognitive Neuroscience

William R. Uttal, Arizona State University, USA

Series: The Uttal Tetralogy of Cognitive Neuroscience

This 4 Volume set, originally published between 1973 and 1988 was intended to provide a broad survey of Cognitive Neuroscience, a field known variously as Physiological Psychology or Psychobiology in the 1970s and 1980s when the books were written. The general goal was to summarize what was known about the relation between brain and mind at that time, but with an emphasis on sensory and perceptual topics. Previously out of print for many years the Tetralogy is now available for the first time as a set, or as individual volumes.

A Taxonomy of Visual Processes

William R. Uttal, Arizona State University, USA

Series: The Uttal Tetralogy of Cognitive Neuroscience

Originally published in 1981, this third volume deals with the empirical data base and the theories concerning visual perception – the set of mental responses to photic stimulation of the eyes. As the book develops, the plan was to present a general taxonomy of visual processes and phenomena. The specific goal of this work was to provide a classification system that integrates and systematizes the data base of perceptual psychology into a comprehensive intellectual scheme by means of an eclectic, multi-level metatheory invoking several different kinds of explanation.

On Seeing Forms

William R. Uttal, Arizona State University, USA

Series: The Uttal Tetralogy of Cognitive Neuroscience

Originally published in 1988, this is the final volume in the set. The original intent of the tetralogy was to review neural explanations of high level perceptual and cognitive processes. However, at this point, it became clear that there were few neural explanations of perceptual topics – a situation that still persists today. This book, therefore, used a different framework examining the role of detection, discrimination, and recognition at the behavioral level.

The Psychobiology of Mind

William R. Uttal, Arizona State University, USA

Series: The Uttal Tetralogy of Cognitive Neuroscience

Originally published in 1978, the second book in this series picks up the neural trail of sensory messages after they arrive at the brain. In addition to the emphasis on central representation and coding of sensory signals, it also considers the topics of brain localization and learning. It was designed to elucidate the important questions under investigation, the basic intellectual and technical problems that were encountered, and the significance of the major empirical results of the time.

The Psychobiology of Sensory Coding

William R. Uttal, Arizona State University, USA

Series: The Uttal Tetralogy of Cognitive Neuroscience

Originally published in 1973, this book deals with what were, even at that time, the well-known neural coding processes of the sensory transmission processes. The book was written to demonstrate the common features of the various senses. It concentrates on the most peripheral neural aspects of the senses starting with the physical transduction process and culminating in the arrival of signals at the brain.

Stormtroopers (RLE Nazi Germany & Holocaust)

A Social, Economic and Ideological Analysis 1929-35

Conan Fischer

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Nazi Germany and the Holocaust

This examination of Hitler's stormtroopers provides vital insights into the collapse of the Weimar Republic and the establishment of the Nazi state. Drawing on a wide range of archival sources and extensive biographical material left by the stormtroopers themselves, the author challenges the belief that Hitler's SA was predominantly lower-middle class.

Science in the Changing World bound with Science at Your Service

Various

Series: Routledge Library Editions: 20th Century Science

This book combines two classic volumes of broadcasted presentations, first published in 1933 and 1945.

The first looks at the relationship between science and the development of European civilisation in the first part of the 20th century. Eminent and diverse thinkers as Julian Huxley, Bertrand Russell and Hilaire Belloc comment.

The second focuses on the influence of science in everyday life, and demonstrates that not all science is remote and theoretical. Offers a glimpse into the attitudes towards science current in the middle of the Second World War.

The Routledge Companion to Bioethics

Edited by John D. Arras, University of Virginia, Rebecca Kukla, University of South Florida and Elizabeth Fenton, University of Virginia, USA

Series: Routledge Philosophy Companions

The Routledge Companion to Bioethics is a comprehensive guide to contemporary concerns in bioethics. The volume orients the reader in a changing landscape shaped by globalization, health disparities, and rapidly advancing technologies. Bioethics has begun a turn toward a systematic concern with social justice, population health, and public policy. This volume's 44 commissioned chapters, authored by leading researchers in the field, capture this shift and foreshadow the resulting developments in bioethics, highlighting emerging issues such as climate change, transgender, and medical tourism, and reexamining enduring topics, such as autonomy, end-of-life care, and resource allocation.

The Routledge Companion to Islamic Philosophy

Edited by Richard C. Taylor, Marquette University, USA and Luis Xavier López-Farjeat, Universidad Panamericana, Mexico

Series: Routledge Philosophy Companions

Recent publications focused on Arabic/Islamic philosophy have traditionally considered this under the history of ideas and Oriental or Islamic studies. There is a need for a comprehensive collection of essays that treats Islamic philosophy as philosophy, and not merely as a conduit of intellectual history for delivering ideas from the ancient Greeks to medieval Christians. With this aim, The Routledge Companion to Islamic Philosophy is conceived as a well-structured and wide-ranging thematic approach, accessible for a broad spectrum of readers, from students to scholars interested in Islamic thought, philosophy, theology, and religious studies.

The Routledge Companion to Virtue Ethics

Edited by Lorraine Besser-Jones, Middlebury College, USA and Michael Slote, University of Miami, USA

Series: Routledge Philosophy Companions

Most work in virtue ethics and most anthologies devoted to virtue ethics focus mainly on ancient Western philosophy and its influence on contemporary thought. This volume sees the history and contemporary relevance of virtue ethics more broadly. Unlike other recent compendium volumes, it offers, in addition to thorough discussion of the ancient Western tradition and its contemporary influence, quite a few articles on virtue ethics in ancient and contemporary Eastern philosophy and in the ancient and continuing traditions of religious thought. These discussions, plus a section devoted to the applications of virtue ethics, makes it a comprehensive treatment of all aspects of virtue ethics.

Routledge Handbook of the History of Global Economic Thought

Edited by Vincent Barnett, University of Birmingham, UK

The Routledge Handbook of the History of Global Economic Thought offers the first comprehensive overview of the long-run history of economic thought from a truly international perspective. Although globalization has facilitated the spread of ideas between nations, the history of economics has tended to be studied either thematically (by topic), in terms of different currents of thought, or individually (by economist). Work has been published in the past on the economic thought traditions of specific countries, but this pioneering volume is unique in offering a wide-ranging comparative account of the development of economic ideas and philosophies on the

1 Volume Set

The Routledge Handbook of Tourism and Hospitality Education

Edited by Dianne Dredge, Aalborg University, Denmark, David Airey, University of Surrey, UK and Michael J. Gross, University of South Australia, Australia

This timely Handbook of Tourism and Hospitality Education is developed from specifically commissioned original contributions from recognised authors in the field. It is interdisciplinary in coverage and is also international in scope through its authorship and content. The 'state of the art' critical review of the development of conceptual and theoretical approaches to tourism and hospitality education using the depth and breadth of the curriculum space as a central theme means that the book will be a benchmark for future curriculum design and development.

The Routledge Handbook of Planning Research Methods

Edited by Elisabete Silva, University of Cambridge, UK, Patsy Healey, Newcastle University, UK, Neil Harris, Cardiff University, UK and Pieter Van den Broeck, KU Leuven, Belgium

The Routledge Handbook of Planning Research Methods is an expansive look at the traditions, methods, and challenges of research design and research projects in contemporary urban planning. Through case studies, an international group of researchers, planning practitioners, and planning academics and educators provide accounts of designing and implementing research projects from different approaches and venues. The Routledge Handbook of Planning Research Methods is valuable for planning students at all levels, and a graduate level textbook for research design and thesis courses.

The Routledge Handbook on Cities of the Global South

Edited by Susan Parnell, University of Cape Town, South Africa and Sophie Oldfield, University of Cape Town, South Africa

This Handbook brings together leading experts in the field to address a comprehensive range of issues in theoretical depth in relation to Cities of the Global South. It combines post-colonial urban critique giving attention to the political, economic and social dynamics of cities whilst also considering the materiality of their construction nor the resource challenges they face.

As a celebration of scholars and scholarship committed to making urban futures better, more interesting, legible, sustainable and more just, the Handbook engages the twenty-first-century city through a 'southern urban' lens to stimulate scholarly, professional and activist engagements with the city.
